PART VI.

Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE INDIAN COUNCILS ACTS, 1861 to 1909 (24 & 25 Vict., c. 67, 55 & 56 Vict., c. 14, AND 9 Edw. VII, c. 4).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Thursday, the 19th March, 1914.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble SIR HARCOURT BUTLER, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., Vice-President, presiding, and 52 Members, of whom 46 were Additional Members.

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Monteath asked:—

"(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have received a memorial addressed to His Excellency the Viceroy, dated 29th March, 1912, from the Calcutta Trades Association, praying that the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, may be amended so far as necessary to render the pay of all officers serving in India, of whatever service or in whatever employment and whether belonging to the British or the Indian Army, attachable to the extent provided in section 60 of the Code?

Amendment of Civil Procedure Code so as to render the pay of all officers serving in India attachable to the extent provided in section 60.

"(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a recent decision of Mr. Justice MacLeod in the Bombay High Court, in which it was held that an officer in the Indian Army was entitled to receive his pay without any deduction and that an attachment levied thereon may be raised?

"(c) Is it the intention of Government to take steps to effect the end sought to be attained by the Calcutta Trades Association; and, if so, what steps, if any, have been taken in the matter?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied:—

"The replies to (a) and (b) of the Hon'ble Member's question are in the affirmative and negative, respectively. The question of amending the law on the subject of the attachment of the pay of military officers serving in India has been under the consideration of Government, who are addressing the Secretary of State on the subject."

RESOLUTION RE RECOMMENDATIONS OF DECENTRALIZATION COMMISSION WITH REGARD TO MUNICIPALITIES, ETC.

(Continuation of the discussion on the Resolution moved by the Honourable Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee at the meeting of the Council held on the 18th March, 1914.)

The Hon'ble Raja Kushal Pal Singh :—"Sir, I beg to point out that almost all the reforms advocated by the Hon'ble Mover have been adopted by the Government of the United Provinces. I am the Chairman of a Municipality. I can say from my personal experience that even in financial matters the liberty of action is not unduly interfered with. Non-official Chairmen have been appointed in all those Municipalities where unfavourable local conditions or special obstacles do not exist. The work of the non-official Chairmen has been commendable. The replacement of official Chairmen by non-officials has tended to rouse local interest and stimulated non-official activities. As a proof of this assertion I quote the testimony of no less an authority than His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces. I quote from the Resolution dated the 4th January, 1913 :—

> With one exception it is reported that satisfactory work has been done by non-official Chairmen, whom the Commissioner of Lucknow Division characterizes as intelligent, interested in their work and most ready to take advice. The Lieutenant-Governor recognizes the encouraging aspect of the results and again acknowledges the public spirit of these gentlemen and the services they have rendered at the sacrifice of their time and sometimes of their private business.

"At least three-fourths of the members of the District Boards in the United Provinces must be elected, except in a few backward tracts. In our Provinces Sub-District Boards were abolished some years ago.

"As regards village sanitation, experimental advances have been made in several districts towards the control of village sanitation by committees of the residents themselves.

"The rule 45 given on page 265 of the United Provinces District Board Manual runs as follows:—

> The Board shall if possible form for each Board school a local Committee of three or five of the residents of the neighbourhood, and request this Committee to supervise and encourage the school—
> (1) by endeavouring to increase the enrolment ;
> (2) by insisting on regularity and punctuality of attendance by teachers and scholars ;
> (3) by providing or recommending necessary improvements ;
> (4) by assisting the Board in fixing the fees fairly leviable ;
> (5) by arranging locally for an annual distribution of prizes.

The Hon'ble Mr. Walsh :—"Sir, with reference to the remarks which the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee has made regarding the number of Municipalities in the province of Bihar and Orissa in which the Chairmen are elected and in which they are appointed by Government, I should like to invite attention to the fact as noted in the statement and as also mentioned by the Hon'ble Mover, that, out of the 42 Municipalities which have nominated Chairmen, eleven have power to elect their own Chairmen, but instead of exercising the power, they requested Government to appoint a Chairman, and Government in every case complied with their request.

"Of these Municipalities, seven are the head-quarters of important districts, namely Arrah, Chapra, Motihari, Muzaffarpur, Bhagalpur, Monghyr, and Purnea, in each of which the Municipalities requested Government to appoint the District Magistrate as their Chairman.

"It may be suggested that official pressure may be brought to bear upon the Municipal Commissioners to apply to Government for the appointment of the District Magistrate. I have personal knowledge in regard to three of these towns and can say that such is not the case, but that the request was the spontaneous request of the Municipal Commissioners who considered that the District Magistrate was the most suitable person for the post of their Chairman. I would mention that the seven head-quarter towns, whose Municipal Commissioners have requested Government to appoint the District Magistrate as their Chairman, are large and important towns whose Municipal Commissioners have representative men of all sections of the community amongst their members, including, in some cases, members of the Provincial Legislative Council.

"The remaining four Municipalities are Sub-Divisional Head-quarters, in which the Municipal Commissioners similarly requested Government to appoint the Sub-Divisional Officer as Chairman, and in which also their request was spontaneous, and in each case the Local Government complied with their request.

"I should like also to make a few remarks with regard to clause (d) of the Resolution, namely, that village panchayats should be formed where local circumstances and experience permit with power to carry out projects regarding village sanitation, village schools and minor village works.

"Although the village panchayat formerly existed throughout India and was an essential part of its social organization. the Hon'ble Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis has told us that it no longer exists in the Central Provinces.

"In Bihar and Orissa also, except amongst the aboriginal races of Chota Nagpur and the Sonthal Parganas, the village panchayat has ceased to exist; and I may add that it has also ceased to exist in Bengal, so far as my personal knowledge of a considerable portion of that Presidency extends. Nor do I think that in the entirely changed social conditions of the present day, it would be possible to resuscitate the state of society that formerly rendered the separate government of every village by its own village panchayat, a possibility.

"The place and functions of the former panchayats have, however, to some extent been provided by the Union Committees, which in Bihar and Orissa, and also in Bengal are provided by the Bengal Local Self-Government Act.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee has referred to the smallness of the number of Union Committees at present existing in Bihar and Orissa. It is true that the number is at present small, but it is likely to be increased.

"At a Sanitary Conference for the province of Bihar and Orissa held at Ranchi in August last, it was the unanimous opinion that the system of Unions under the Local Self-Government Act, is particularly suitable for places, such as sub-divisional head-quarters, railway bazaars and exceptionally large villages which are not large enough to be made into municipalities under the Municipal Act.

"It was agreed that experimental Unions should also be formed in other parts of the mufassal, and that in this case it would ordinarily be convenient to take as the Union the villages which have been grouped together for chaukidari purposes."

The Hon'ble Mr. Madhu Sudan Das:—"Sir, the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee, in moving the Resolution yesterday, referred to Lord Morley's despatch, which he said should be considered as the charter of the reformed and enlarged Councils. That despatch is a unique document, because it contains reference to a policy which was enunciated in 1882 by the Government Resolution of that year. It also refers to the fact that though the policy was enunciated in 1882 it was not acted up to till the date of the despatch of Lord Morley. It then goes on to discuss the causes why the policy was not given effect to, and formulates instructions for the guidance of this Government in giving effect to that policy in future. Sir, I beg permission to refer to a certain portion of the despatch which contains reference to the Resolution of Government of 1882.

'It is not primarily,' they say, 'with a view to improvement in administration that this measure is put forward and supported. It is chiefly desirable as an instrument of political and popular education.' There appears to be great force in the argument that so long as the chief executive officers are as a matter of course chairmen of the municipal and district committees, there is little chance of these committees affording any effective training to their members in the management of local affairs or of non-official members taking any real interest in local business.

"Then it goes on to discuss why this policy has been a failure. 'If local self-government has so far been no marked success as a training ground, it is mainly for the reason that the constitution of the local bodies departed from what was affirmed in the Resolution to be 'the true principle'—that 'the control should be exercised from without rather than from within.' It goes on to show the reason why it had not proved a success, and then it proceeds to say that 'it would be hopeless to expect any real development of self-government if local bodies were subject to check and interference in matters of detail,' and that 'the respective powers of Government and of the various local bodies should be clearly and distinctly defined by statute so that there may be as little risk of friction and misunderstanding as possible within the limits to be laid down in each case.'

"We find here a Resolution of the Government of India which was re-iterated and re-affirmed in the memorable despatch of Lord Morley, and it contained directions for the future guidance of this Government. One of these directions was that there should be a statute which should clearly lay down the limits of power of interference, and prescribe the duties of the executive officers and of local bodies. This is the place where one feels inclined to ask this question as to whether, since the date of the despatch, any statute has been enacted to carry out this policy. Then, referring, in an earlier part to the Imperial and Provincial Legislative Councils, Lord Morley said, with reference to Lord Minto's suggestion, 'I gather, however, from your despatch of 21st March, 1907, that you would at that time have preferred, as Lord Lansdowne had done in 1892, to build up the higher fabric on the foundation of the Provincial Council.' So it is clear to any one who reads this despatch through that the idea was to make a whole connected system having at its base these local bodies and at the top of the edifice the Imperial Legislative Council, the Provincial Legislative Council occupying an intermediate position.

"Sir, if this Council is really meant to be useful in the way of being a body that will co-operate, or at least so that the non-official members of this Council will co-operate and their co-operation will be helpful and useful to Government, it is absolutely necessary that the foundations should be looked to. Very often non-officials make suggestions that do not find favour with Government, owing to lack of administrative experience. It may be that when we suggest any change on account of our want of experience we are not able to take into account the difficulties which a particular theory when applied in practice would create. No doubt non-officials are at a disadvantage so far as experience goes. But if it is intended to make their co-operation effective and useful, every attention should be paid to the foundations; and these foundations are in the local bodies, the municipalities and district boards. Lord Morley says in this despatch 'The encouragement of local self-government being an object of the highest importance in the better organization of our Indian system, it remains to be considered how far in each of the provinces it will be desirable to create a department for dealing exclusively with these local bodies, guiding and instructing them and correcting abuses in form analogous to the operations of the Local Government Board in this country. That however is a detail, though a weighty one, in a question on which as a whole I confidently expect that your Excellency will find much light in the forthcoming Report of the Royal Commission on Decentralization.' So this despatch contains a reference to the Report of the Decentralization

[19TH MARCH, 1914.]   [Mr. Madhu Sudan Das ; The Vice-President.]

Commission. Since the date of this despatch the Report of that Commission has been published ; the report is dated the 25th February, 1909, and one of the Members of the Royal Commission and the Secretary are Members of this Council. The recommendations of the Royal Commission ought to be considered as having very great authority, or, if I may use such an expression, double authority; first they are the recommendations of a Royal Commission and then they are referred to in a despatch which may be considered as the charter to this enlarged Council When speaking on the Resolution before this Council yesterday, the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb pointed out to us that want of time and want of experience were the reasons why these municipalities could not command non-official chairmen. I beg to ask, as regards that part of his argument based on want of experience, is it not really making the gravamen of a charge against the people what really is neglect of duty on the part of Government? The despatch clearly shows, and the Resolution of 1888 clearly shows, that these local bodies should be considered as training ground, that they should first of all be maintained as instruments for political and popular education and that they were not instituted with a view to the improvement of the administration ; and now we are met with the argument that because there is no efficient administration to be had of the non-official public, therefore they should not have the position of chairmen of these institutions. That, Sir, in my humble opinion, is really making out of the neglect on the part of Government the gravamen of a charge against the people. What was really meant to be a training ground is now considered as the battlefield itself, where it is proposed to test the bravery and efficiency of the soldier. Then the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb also referred to paragraph 869 of the Commission's Report, and there read out that the Bombay Government, while keeping the executive power in the hands of an experienced official, provides a dignified post as a reward or incentive to public spirit and interest in municipal affairs. This is one of several paragraphs which come under the heading 'Presidency Municipalities.' This does not refer to municipalities generally, while the Resolution deals with municipalities generally. It is very easy to distinguish between what is required of a chairman in a presidency municipality like that of Bombay or Calcutta, and a chairman who presides over a municipality with a smaller income in a small town with a much smaller population. There is at the end of the—."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" I must remind the Hon'ble Member that he has got one minute more."

The Hon'ble Mr. Madhu Sudan Das :—" Will you give me two minutes, Sir."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" Very well, then; two minutes."

The Hon'ble Mr. Madhu Sudan Das :—" Referring to the figures which were given to the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee showing the number of nominated chairmen, I find that the number of elected chairmen is smallest in Bihar and Orissa. With reference to that the Hon'ble gentleman on my left has given an explanation. I beg to ask, has the spirit which underlies the despatch, that is to say, to induce the people to take an active part in the administration of local bodies, been exercised? The Hon'ble Mr. Walsh said that the Government was asked, and they complied with the request. The Report says that Municipal Councils should be able to delegate any of their administrative functions to individuals who may include persons not on the Council. If the District Magistrate was so minded, he could remain outside the Council and advise the chairman, if he was wanting in administrative experience, what to do ; that would have been really following the spirit of the despatches and the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission."

[The Vice-President; Maharaja Ranajit Sinha of Nashipur; Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"The time allowed to the Hon'ble gentleman is up."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Ranajit Sinha of Nashipur:—"Sir, the Resolution which the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee has moved, although appears to be one Resolution, but it consists really of four separate parts. Each of which is so important as to require special consideration and I venture to suggest that they may be considered separately; and with your permission, Sir, I should like to make a few observations on each of the items contained in the said Resolution.

"Sir, I am not in favour of the complete withdrawal of the powers of the authorities over the municipal finances altogether. But at the same time I think that undue interference on the part of the divisional commissioners causes humiliation to the municipal commissioners and discourages them from doing their duties properly. From my experience as chairman of one of the municipalities in Bengal for 12 years I can say that the commissioners are not allowed even to increase one rupee to the pay of a coolie unless it is sanctioned by the divisional commissioner, and the divisional commissioners are always reluctant to sanction any such increment. In my opinion the commissioners should have a free hand in the distribution of their money, provided they don't exceed their legitimate limits and so I have great pleasure in supporting the first part of the Resolution. As regards the second part, as far as my experience goes in Bengal, local boards have still the elective majority in their boards; but as regards the district boards, half the number is nominated by Government and half elected by Local Boards I have no objection if the District Boards be given an elective majority, but I think it will not be practicable in all the districts. Now-a-days advanced people who take an intelligent part in public affairs do not live in the villages and do not care to be elected on local boards, and if there be an elective majority in the District Boards they must be recruited from the Local Boards and so the District Boards will be deprived of the services of educated people who generally live at the head-quarters of the districts. However, in such districts where suitable men are available as members of the Local Boards, I think the experiment might be tried. Then, as regards my Hon'ble friend's request as to the election of Chairmen in all the municipalities, I think Government should accede to his request. The Hon'ble Mr. Walsh said that in Bihar some of the municipalities which have even got the power of electing their Chairmen have requested the Local Government to elect their Chairmen; so if Government accede to the request of my Hon'ble friend there will be no difficulty in cases where the office of Chairmen should be filled up by officials as the municipal commissioners voluntarily request the Government to appoint their Chairman in cases where they find themselves incapable of managing the affairs of municipalities in big towns. Sir, I regret I cannot support the fourth part of my Hon'ble friend's Resolution. Circumstances have now completely changed, formerly the headmen of the villages had great influence over their neighbours; and they used to exercise control not only over public matters but over social and religious matters also. It is not possible now to get suitable men in the villages, who could exercise such influence or could command such respect from their neighbours; because, generally, educated men or men of means do not like to live in the villages; some have to go away for professional or commercial pursuits and some for insanitary condition of the villages; if, therefore, we adopt this system, I am afraid the result will not be satisfactory; and so I am not in a position to support this part of the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar:—"Sir, I beg to support this Resolution. It will be remembered that early last month I had the honour to move a Resolution in this Council recommending the publication of certain correspondence between the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India in respect of certain recommendations of the Decentralization Commission. While not prepared to accept my Resolution, the Government were pleased to inform Hon'ble Members that an important despatch on the recommendations of the Commission was about to be addressed by the Government of India to the Secretary of State. The Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee recommends the adoption of certain specific recommendations made by the Decentralization Commission in respect of Municipal Councils, District Boards and Village Panchayats. The language used in the Resolution is precisely the same as that of the summary appended to the Report of the Commission. As regards clause (d) of the Resolution I should like to point out that the proposed transfer of certain powers to village Panchayats may be carried out by the re-adjustment of the funds at the disposal of District and Local Boards, and without resort to fresh taxation. No remarks of mine are needed to commend these recommendations to the Government of India or this Council. I crave leave to point out that these recommendations are not made by an Hon'ble Member of this Council, but are the result of the prolonged deliberations of the Royal Commissioners, whose unanimous opinion is entitled to the most earnest and sympathetic consideration of the Government of India. From the report of the Bengal Municipalities which are managed by the non-official Chairmen it would appear that those Municipalities are managed very successfully. From my personal experience as Chairman of a Municipality for a considerable number of years, I can say that by the interference of the Divisional Commissioner no good is done."

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar; Rai Sri Ram Bahadur.]

The Hon'ble Rai Sri Ram Bahadur :—" Sir, I beg to support the Resolution which has been moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee. But before doing so, I will state a few facts relating to my own province, i.e., the United Provinces.

" This Resolution is composed of four parts : the first part is regarding municipal committees having a free hand in the framing of their budgets. No doubt paragraph 813 of the Decentralization Commission's Report lays down that municipalities should have a free hand in preparing their budgets In the United Provinces, however, the practice still exists of the budget being subjected to the sanction of the Commissioner, and, where there is a non-official chairman, it requires the sanction of the District Officer also ; but generally there is not much complaint against this interference. Still I must say that the spirit of the recommendation of the Decentralization Commission is not carried out, and so far as my opinion goes, it would be better to give the municipalities a free hand in the framing of their budgets. Only in cases where it appears that they have done something which they ought not to do the Government officials should interfere.

" Then comes, Sir, the question of the election of chairmen by the municipalities. In our province there are 86 municipalities. Of these, 6 have a population of over 100,000, 72 a population of between 10,000 and 100,000, and 6 a population of between 5,000 and 10,000. There is only one municipality in the whole province which has got the privilege of electing its own chairman, viz., Fyzabad, and this privilege was given to it in 1884 and has been exercised by it since. Other municipalities have non-official chairmen no doubt, but formerly the practice was that the members were told that they would have the power of election if they elected certain specified persons as chairmen. Latterly the practice has been to nominate a non-official chairman for some municipalities. This has been done since the last year ; and there are 16 municipalities which have nominated non-official chairmen. I submit, Sir, that this is against the principle laid down, first by Lord Ripon in his resolution dated 18th May, 1882, reiterated by Lord Morley in his despatch of 27th November, 1908, and embodied by the Decentralization Commission in their report of 25th February, 1909. It is said that there are not men who will undertake municipal work, because they are generally professional men who cannot spare time to devote to it. But, experience has shown that there are persons who will undergo self-sacrifice and will work for the public. The time, therefore, has come, when, except in certain circumstances, a free hand should be given to the members of municipalities to elect their own chairmen.

"Sir, the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb said yesterday that the practice which is followed in Bombay should be introduced in all municipalities. That practice is, that there is a nominal chairman who is a sort of mouthpiece or representative of the members of the committee, and there is another officer who has all the executive work in his hand. But the Report of the Decentralization Commission does not go so far It merely says that in large cities perhaps it might be useful to introduce that practice, but as regards the municipalities which are not large enough the report is silent, or rather it recommends the election of non-official chairmen. Therefore the Bombay practice is one which, if introduced, ought to be adopted for big municipalities where we cannot find a non-official who would devote all his time to the work of the municipality.

"Then comes the third point, i.e., that District Boards should contain an elected majority. So far as the United Provinces are concerned, except in the Hill Tracts, i.e., the three districts of the Kumaon Division, the rest of the district boards have got that privilege. More than three-quarters are non-officials, and the rest are officials. It shows that we are far ahead of other provinces in this respect, and we are thankful to Government for it. I must tell the Council that there are no local boards in the United Provinces now. Formerly they did exist, but experience showed that they did not do any useful work and they were abolished in 1906.

"We now come to the fourth part of the Resolution, i e., the constitution of village panchayats. Our Local Government has been doing something towards the attainment of that object. Some districts have been selected in which it has been introduced; it is in an experimental stage: But regarding the establishment of panchayats in all places where they can be established, I am of opinion that it should be done. My Hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Nashipur has told us that the panchayat system prevailed in the rural tracts of India in former times, but the circumstances have changed now, and in his opinion they should not be reconstituted. I do not agree with that view. We have the elements for forming these panchayats in almost all the villages in India, and especially in the United Provinces. It is only the fostering care of Government that is required to revive them and they will spring up in a very short time. Of course I do not say that the thing should be undertaken at once: it is a matter in which we must proceed slowly and cautiously and be guided by the light of experience which might be gained in the course of time. We have something even now like this in the villages at present. In matters relating to their village festivals and other things connected with their village the elders assemble together and collect subscriptions. This shows that they have the capacity to act collectively on certain occasions.

"That shows that there are the germs, and it is only the nourishing of the plant that is required, and I hope that the Hon'ble Member in charge of Education will take measures to secure the establishment of village panchayats.

"With these remarks I support the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. Abbott :—"Sir, my experience of municipalities and district boards is confined to the United Provinces, where I have had the honour to represent the people for many years as an elected and nominated member and vice-president. The removing of Government control, I consider, would be disastrous and dangerous, as it would lead to a state of chaos. The average member is not educated up to the necessary standard. What does he know of sanitation, public works, improvements, finance? Practically nil. Many of the members cannot read or write English.

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Mr. Abbott; Mr. Walsh.]

" I will read to you a few lines from the Morning Post of the 18th instant, with reference to the Lahore Municipality :—

'The eagerness of the communities to get their representatives into responsible posts in India seems to be as strong as ever, judging from the state of municipal affairs in the capital city of the Punjab and elsewhere. As our Lahore correspondent informed us the other day a deadlock occurred in the Municipality owing to the fixed determination of the Hindu community to have one of their co-religionists appointed as Assistant Secretary, and an equally determined effort on the part of the Mohammedan members on the Committee to get in one of their own creed. "

" We might wake up one morning to find our beef and bacon supply cut off. The appointment of a non-official chairman in middle and large-sized municipalities cannot be too strongly condemned I consider a municipality with a non-official chairman as a ship on the ocean without a rudder, or with a makeshift rudder. A chairman requires training; he requires knowledge of law, advanced sanitation, public works, finance, etc , and should be one born to command, and with a great deal of energy. If he is not an expert in the above, he must be in a position to demand expert advice at any time and any place. Who but the official can do this? Certainly not a non-official. I am afraid I can say without hesitation that there is no one in this Council of the non-official members including myself, who would make an ideal chairman. If such is the case, what can be expected outside? We would be weak in one or other of the most necessary qualifications, as I said before, in sanitation, water works, finance, public works, or law, and we would not have the time daily at our disposal to do justice to the position. It is not an armchair office; it is one which requires the very best of man. It is looked upon in many places as an armchair situation, a signing machine or a social position. I repeat that it is a dangerous experiment. In no time the whole of the machinery and the people of that town with the chairman will be in the hands of the subordinates and at their mercy, such as the secretaries, overseers, sanitary inspectors, and run by one or all these subordinates —a pitiable state of affairs. To remove the control of the Commissioner would be cutting away the advice and experience of many many years I can only compare it to the sudden death of father and mother in a very large growing family. I would suggest that we learn to creep before we run.

" I am whole heartedly with the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh, and I beg—"

The Hon'ble Mr. Walsh:—" Sir, may I rise to an explanation I never said I was in favour of an official chairman, I merely stated a fact, explaining that the reason why a large number of municipalities in my province had a chairman appointed by Government was that there were eleven municipalities which had the right of electing their chairman who for their own reasons in each case, considering their district magistrate to be the most suitable person to appoint as their chairman, asked Government to appoint him. I never for one moment would say that a non-official is not fit to be a chairman of a municipality. I have had a very considerable experience of municipalities both in Bihar and Orissa and also in Bengal and have known many very able non-official chairmen."

The Hon'ble Mr. Abbott:—" I am afraid the Hon'ble Member has misunderstood me. I simply mentioned the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh and the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb and I said I was with them in all that they said I suggested that we should learn to creep before we run. I will continue. I am with the Hon'ble Mr Cobb and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh in all they have said and beg hon'ble non-official members will follow a great deal of what they have said. It is a very pleasant duty and a great honour to be Chairman of a municipality in the smallest of towns and one is naturally looked upon as a great bahadur. It is because of the love and respect the members have for the official that they do and have done so much good work. With a non-official chairman it is not so and parties at once take sides and a very unfortunate position arises with a Mohammedan or Hindu chairman. Official members here could give us many serious tales of non-official chairmen, but they have spared our feelings. The United Provinces require nothing more; they have too much now. I therefore oppose this Resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar:—"Sir, I desire to make a few remarks on the Resolution. The Resolution asks for the adoption by the Government of India of certain recommendations of the Royal Commission on Decentralization, and the motion was sustained by a statement brilliant in character as usual If I may venture to say so, the mover surpassed himself in making the statement yesterday. But brilliant as the statement was, it strikes me the motion is capable of admitting some criticism directed against it.

"The Resolution may be divided into two parts, namely, the object the Hon'ble Member has in view and the means for attaining it. So far as the object is concerned, it strikes me the problem of local self-government is no longer a controversial one. I believe the leaders of the people and the Government are at one so far as the end is concerned. Such differences as there may exist relate solely to the method and rate of progress in regard both to the constitution of local boards and their functions. On the one hand the popular leaders are apt to regard these institutions more from the point of view of popular and political education. On the other hand the Government and Government officers are too apt to approach the solution of the question from the standpoint of efficiency alone, of which we have had an apostle in the Hon'ble Mr. Abbott this morning. If the rate of progress is arrested at all, the arrest is due, whenever fresh efforts are made, to our not being able to reach a compromise between these two aspects of view. Be that as it may, I am in perfect accord with the Hon'ble Mover of the Resolution so far as the end is concerned. Nay, I go even further than he. For instance, sub-division (c) of the Resolution asks that the members of the district boards may be elected by the non-official members of the sub-district boards. I am one of those who believe that there is no magic in the mere word 'election' as distinguished from the word 'nomination.' If election means anything at all in this connection, it must mean that the rate-payers must have a voice in the raising of the rates and in the administration of the rates. And election must therefore necessarily mean here election of the representatives of the rate-payers by the vote of the rate-payers. Now most of these non-official members in sub-district boards are nominated members themselves and sub-district boards are everywhere highly and excessively controlled. I cannot understand therefore how an election, even an election of the majority of the district boards, by these non-official members of sub-district boards would very much alter the situation as it now exists.

"But the important question to consider is the means proposed in view to achieve the end.

"The Resolution says that this Council recommends to the Governor General in Council the adoption of the recommendations of the Royal Commission stated in it. Now what is this adoption for? We must examine this demand for the adoption by the Government of India in the existing state of things and in the light of the prospects held out to the people of this country touching provincial autonomy. I believe that this demand is open to two objections. The first is what is the effect of this adoption? Now whatever reform is possible and practicable in the progress of local self-government is to be attained and may be attained by laws enacted by the local legislatures. The local legislatures, under the latest reform scheme, have a non-official majority. Now I wish to know—and the brilliant statement of the Hon'ble Mover has not shown the way—how these non-official majorities are to be asked or, it may be, forced into making a law suited to special requirements, as asked for by this Resolution. Therefore I cannot at all understand the Hon'ble Mover's Resolution. He has complained, and rightly complained, of circulars of Local Governments controlling rural boards As a remedy he asks for a circular from the Government of India to control both the local Executive Governments and the local legislatures. Surely, it seems to me, the remedy is much worse than the evil he complains of. The Government of India is federal in conception and federal in theory. It has no municipalities, it has no district boards, it has no sub-district boards, it has no villages to organize. Therefore, what is the object of the Government of India expressing a formal adoption of the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission? I cannot understand it. Therefore, I respectfully submit, that this Resolution is out of order before the Government of India.

Now we have been trying, and trying so long, for more and more local autonomy, and my friend the Hon'ble Mover, more than any body else, has been not only working for it, but only the other day he was in raptures about it in opposition to the distinguished Finance Member. He said that the argument he based upon the memorable passage in the despatch of August, 1911, in respect of provincial autonomy was not traversed by the Hon'ble the Finance Member, and he provoked him into a special reply. There is some grave inconsistency, therefore, in the Resolution of the Hon'ble Mover in asking the Government of India to interfere in the manner just advocated.

"Now I wish to know what would be the effect of the adoption of this Resolution? Now we have to go before the local legislatures. Either the majority there will adopt the resolutions or they will not. If they will not adopt the resolutions, what is the course open to this Government. But if they will, why trouble this Government, why come to this Council? Is he afraid that the local legislatures will not except these recommendations? Is he afraid that the local administrations will veto them? If so, it is then time, and not till then, to come to the Governor General and to this Council. At this stage, therefore, I cannot understand the force of the argument in support of the prayer that there should be a further step taken in the advance of local self-government in the light of the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission by asking this Government to adopt them. The debate yesterday and to-day has shown that one province at least has adopted some of the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission without any suggestion or any pressure from this Government, and without any resolution passed by this Council, viz., the Government of the United Provinces, as the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb told us yesterday. Therefore, it seems to me that the leaders of the people may and ought to approach the Local Governments and legislatures to adopt these recommendations. I am therefore unable to understand the object of asking the Government of India to adopt this Resolution.

"My second reason is a broader and deeper one. I have said that the Government of India is federal in conception and origin. I shall make my grounds more clear. Sir, we all know that the high office of Governor General was created so long ago as 1772 by an Act of Parliament, the Regulating Act, 13 George 3, c. 21. Now at that time there were four administrations, I cannot say Governments. They were partly mercantile and partly political; so they may be termed politico-mercantile Governments, but all independent of each other, they were, the President in Council in Bengal, the President in Council, Bombay, the President in Council, Madras, and the President in Council of another place, Bencoolen. Now, under the Regulating Act of 1772, the only power of superintendence that that Act gave to the Governor General of Bengal (not of India yet) was in reference to the defence of the country and control of diplomatic relations. The other Governments, now the Local Governments, were forbidden from going to war except in cases of imminent danger and from entering into treaties with Native Princes. Thus was, I may say, federal government started in India. Some four years later it was that federal government was started in America. Thus the conception of a federal government in India was anterior to the conception of federal government in the United States by some four or five years, although the two systems were similar in principle and constitution.

"In the course of some 90 or 100 years, alike by Statutes, by departmental traditions and by despatches from the Secret Committee of the Court of Directors, Local Governments were gradually deprived of their independent power until at last they were deprived even of their power of legislation which they had, so that they became mere departments of the Government of India. About ninety years after the Regulation Act, statutory decentralization of the Provinces began with the Indian Councils Act of 1861, which restored their legislative powers and, later on, departmental decentralization, under the auspices of Lord Mayo's Government. Now we need not go further. The progress was kept up more or less steadily, depending partly upon the personnel of the Indian and Local Governments and partly on other circumstances. On the whole, however, the tendency has been towards decentralization, until we reach the memorable despatch of August, 1911, a despatch which I believe was unanimously signed by His Excellency Lord Hardinge and his colleagues. Now that despatch clearly lays down the principle as to what should be the ultimate autonomy of the provincial Governments. The ultimate effect is that each Provincial Government will be left to itself except in cases of misgovernment. Now I believe the question the people, their representatives and quasi-representatives in Councils ought to ask themselves is " Do we want this autonomy or do we not want it ? If we do not want it, then I cannot understand the cry and the necessity for the creation of Governors, of Executive Councils, of Indian members of Executive Councils and of High Courts in each province. The sooner we do away with these the better. It would be far more economical for the whole country to be divided into collectorates and placed under groups of Commissioners if you like. If on the other hand, you do want local autonomy, all that we say or do should tend towards development and perfection of that autonomy. Inconsistent conduct is what I cannot understand. For my part I have made up my mind to so act and to confine my conduct here towards that ultimate goal foreshadowed in the despatch. Now to this despatch I will fondly adhere, if for no other reason than that it has begun to receive hostile interpretation in view to narrow and whittle it down. Whenever such a despatch begins to receive hostile interpretation from men like Sir John Rees, I begin to think there is something very good in it for the people."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" Order, order ! The Hon'ble Member is covering a very wide range of subjects in his speech."

The Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar :—" I only give reasons why I am fond of provincial autonomy as outlined in this great despatch.

" I fear this passage has to be saved from authoritative interpretation and that it would be injudicious to start any discussion calculated to provoke frequent interpretations of this passage. I therefore deprecate the putting of any questions or moving any resolutions in this Council which will have the effect of compelling the apostles of bureaucracy endeavour to give an interpretation of this divine passage, which I for one would not now like to see done. The passage needs a rest cure at this stage.

" That is all I wish to say about this. The Resolution, in my humble opinion, does not quite coincide with peoples' aspirations and with hopes which are so often held out to the people of this country as the ultimate goal of their national life. We expect resolutions and questions in this Council, and discussions, financial or other, shall be animated, if we accept the theory of provincial autonomy at all, as foreshadowed in this despatch, shall be animated by a due regard to this national ideal and— "

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" The Hon'ble Member's time is finished."

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar :—" Very well, Sir. I have nothing more to say. All that I say is, taking the Resolution as a whole, I respectfully submit that the end and the means are inconsistent, the means proposed is inconsistent with the national aims and aspirations of the people of this country."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—" Sir, I give my hearty support to the Resolution which is before the Council. As regards the objections which have been raised, I will first take up the one of principle which has been pressed with his usual ability and eloquence by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar. I am entirely at one, Sir, with my friend in desiring that there should be a continuous devolution of power from the Government of India to the Local Governments in all matters of domestic administration. I have long advocated it, and I hope the day is not very far distant when Local Governments will have much more independence and will be able to initiate measures of reform to a much larger extent than they can at present. When that day comes I shall join with the Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar in deprecating the putting forward of any Resolution like the one which has been put before the Council by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee to-day. But that day is not yet, and I fear, Sir, it will be some time before we arrive at the stage when the control of the Government of India in the matter of supervising and directing the activities of Local Governments will be circumscribed to the extent to which it was foreshadowed in the memorable despatch of August, 1911. I do not doubt that that day will come, but until it comes, it is our duty to put forward before the Government of India matters in which, without reflecting on the attitude of the Local Government, without in any way suggesting that the Local Governments are apathetic, indifferent or hostile to the proposals put forward here, we feel that the activities of the Local Governments might be stimulated by drawing the attention of the Government of India to what has not been done or to what might have been done at a quicker pace than what has actually been achieved.

" That, Sir, deals with the objection of principle which has been raised. Other objections have been raised of a different character, and they proceeded from the Hon'ble Mr. Abbott. Before I go on to deal with the Resolution, I think it as well to deal with the objections raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Abbott. Mr. Abbott has drawn a very melancholy picture of the state of affairs which might be ushered in if the recommendations of my Hon'ble friend were adopted, if there were a non-official Chairman—a Hindu or a Mohammedan in charge of the administration of municipal affairs of a large city,—the water supply might be cut off, the lights might be extinguished, and many other horrors, which Mr. Abbott has been considerate enough not to describe to us, might come into existence. I must be thankful to him—and the whole Council must be thankful—that he did not draw a more harrowing picture before us. Does the Hon'ble Member not know that such a large municipality as that of Poona was for some years administered, in the capacity of Chairman, by one of our honoured colleagues, the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale? Does he not know that the Fyzabad Municipality—not a small municipality in the United Provinces—has been administered by a non-official chairman—a Hindu—for nearly 25 years, with none of the evil results which Mr. Abbott's imagination has conjured up? I regret to think, Sir, that the Hon'ble Member has given expression to such extremist views regarding the progress of this scheme for delegating power to the people for the administration of their local affairs. Let him be assured that none of the evils which he has imagined will occur if the recommendations, which have, on their side, the weighty authority of the Royal Commission on Decentralization, are adopted; for we, on our side, feel sure that they will be adopted in spite of the fears, the ill-based fears, which the Hon'ble Member has expressed.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

"The Hon'ble Member has referred to a letter published by some writer in some newspaper in which it has been stated that on a recent occasion, when there was a vacancy to be filled up in a certain municipality, the Hindu members of the board tried their best to get a Hindu candidate appointed, and the Mohammedan members did the same for a Mohammedan candidate. Let us assume that this is true We are all, Hindus, Mohammedans and Christians, human beings and all liable to err. But I think, Sir, many official and non-official members could recall instances in which people, knowing a particular candidate to be honest and efficient have done their best, without any narrow-minded motive, any narrow-minded consideration of which any gentleman need be ashamed, to press the claims of that candidate, whether he was a Hindu, a Mohammedan, or a Christian. The mere circumstance that there are two sets of persons, each trying to press the claims of the candidate, whom it considers to be better than the other, does not necessarily indicate the existence of interests which cannot be reconciled with the public good.

"Then, Sir, the Hon'ble Mr. Abbott has urged that if a non-official Chairman is appointed he will not be able to command expert advice. He has claimed that none but an official can command expert advice. 'Who but an official can command expert advice?' asked he. 'Not a non-official certainly,' was his own answer! But the Hon'ble Member is entirely mistaken. Non-officials account for 98 per cent. of the population: they form the great bulk of the community. Officials are merely the servants of the community—honoured servants, trusted servants; but servants all the same. They derive their power and influence by reason of their being public servants But, Sir, many a man among the general pubic, who has not the honour of being an official, commands expert advice to an extent evidently not conceived of by the Hon'ble Member. There are large engineering firms, entirely unofficial, large railway companies, large business concerns, in Calcutta, Bombay and Madras, entirely unofficial, which command expert advice fully to the extent they require, and as much as any official or body of officials in the country.

"Well, Sir, I will leave the Hon'ble Member with only one further remark. He asserted that, including himself, there is not one non-official member of this Council who, in his opinion, is fit enough to be chairman of a municipal board. I have myself not had the honour, Sir, of serving as a chairman of a municipal board. But I have served as a senior vice-chairman. And I think nothing but unreasoning prejudice would suggest that the duties of a chairman of a municipal board are such that none but an official can discharge them. There are many non-official Indians who are discharging those duties with credit to themselves and great benefit to their towns. I will mention one name which is known to you, Sir,—the name of Rai Ganga Prasad Varma, Bahadur, who in his capacity of senior vice-chairman of the Lucknow Municipality, as you know, has done more for Lucknow than probably has fallen to the lot of many official chairmen to do for the cities of which they have been in charge He has given ungrudgingly of his time and energy to the improvement of his city. Not even the worst critic of his municipal administration can point to one instance where he has abused the powers he has exercised, while all fair-minded people admiringly admit that they have been exercised to the great benefit of his city and to the glory of non-official municipal administration in the United Provinces.

"Sir, I will now come to the substantial part of the Resolution. What is the Hon'ble Mover of this Resolution asking the Council to do?" Only to recommend to the Governor General in Council that the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Decentralization, which consisted of men distinguished for their administrative capacity and experience, should now be given effect to. That Commission took evidence all over the country. It made its recommendations after weighing fully and fairly all the pros and cons of every question urged before them; and in its collective wisdom it made certain recommendations on those questions. It is some of those which my Hon'ble friend asks the Government to carry out. It ought to be remembered, Sir, that the Government have never expressed any opinion against any of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the heads to which attention has been drawn. Indeed some of us, at least, expect that the Government is going to act up to them, and to issue instructions to Local Governments to stimulate action in the direction of those recommendations. But as some objections have been urged against the Resolution, I feel it my duty to draw attention to the remarks of the Royal Commission on some of the points covered by it. The first question taken up is that the municipal boards should have a free hand in regard to their budgets so long as they maintain the prescribed minimum balance. Now, Sir, this is exactly what the Commission have recommended at page 279 of their Report. They say, ' We consider that municipalities should have a free hand in regard to their budgets, though these should go, through the Collector, to the Commissioner for information, and that the only check required is that each municipality should maintain a minimum standing balance to be prescribed by the Local Government '. I will pass on to the next recommendation, because I must not go beyond my time. The second recommendation is that the municipal chairman should usually be an elected non-official. Mark the word ' usually '. My friend does not urge that the chairman of Municipal Boards should in every case be elected non-official persons. And here, I may say, that I endorse the remarks which the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb has made in this connection, so far as the larger municipalities are concerned,—remarks based on the recommendation contained in paragraph 853 of the Report of the Royal Commission, to the effect that in some of the largest cities it might be desirable to adopt the method in force in the city of Bombay, i.e., to have an elected Chairman, but to vest the executive administration in a full-time nominated officer, with this reservation that I would not insist that in every one of the larger cities it should be compulsory for the Board to adopt the method in force in the city of Bombay; but I would for the present give power to the Government to require the Board to follow that method in any particular case where the Government may deem it necessary that it should be followed. It is not always possible, Sir, even in the larger municipalities. to find gentlemen who are competent and willing to be elected chairmen, who can give their whole time to the details of municipal administration. In such cases it will be eminently desirable while electing a non-official chairman who would guide the Board aright in their deliberations and the determination of matters of principle and policy, to provide that there should be a full-time salaried officer of the Board who would see the executive administration of the Board carried out in accordance with the decisions of the Board. I need not say more in this connection at present than what has been said so far as the United Provinces are concerned. I have every hope that the United Provinces Government will move forward in the right direction; and that, so far as the Municipal Act is concerned, the provision suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb will be incorporated in it in such a form that it will both satisfy public sentiment and ensure efficient municipal administration.

"The third recommendation is that district boards should contain an elected majority chosen by the non-official members of the several district boards. With regard to this, I will say this only, that this is a recommendation which has been overdue for a long time. It is time that the district boards should contain an elected majority. It has been said, Sir, that in villages you do not find the best men of the village, that such men often live in towns and that those who live in villages do not possess sufficient common-sense to be able to understand and look after the affairs of the village. Sir, common-sense is not the monopoly of those who live in towns, and the men who live in villages are not wanting in common-sense to the extent which certain Hon'ble Members' remarks would imply. You find men in the villages who deal daily with their affairs connected with agriculture, who deal with the affairs of their own large estates with an amount of common-sense which would surprise some of their critics if they came into contact with them more than they do at present. I think, Sir, that the reform suggested in the third recommendation is also desirable and ought to be carried out.

"Then with regard to the fourth point, I would invite the attention of the Council again to the remarks of the Commission, which are to be found at page 238 of their Report. The village panchayat, Sir, is an ancient institution; it is unfortunate, it is deplorable, that it has ceased to exist to a large extent; but the soul of it is not yet dead, and the Commission, after weighing fully all the pros and cons of the question recommended as follows:—

Some witnesses hold that the disintegration of the village communities which has taken place under our administration has gone so far that it is not possible to reconstitute them as reliable entities in any scheme of local self-government. There is, however, a large and strong body of opinion in favour of enlisting the help of the people in local administration in the villages, by the establishment of administrative village councils which should bear the time-honoured title of panchayat. The common traditions of a village; the fact that its inhabitants are largely connected by ties of blood and caste, and have many interests in common; and the measure of corporate life still existing in the Indian villages, which is shown occasionally by voluntary self-taxation for special purposes, warrant action of this description.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Walsh felt a doubt as to whether it would be desirable now to revive village panchayats in their ancient form. The Hon'ble Member expressed his preference for the union committees which are constituted under the Municipal Act in Bengal. Now, Sir, the views of the Hon'ble Member are very much on the lines of what the Commission recommended. At page 239 of their Report the Commission say:—

We do not think it possible, even if it were expedient, to restore the ancient village system, under which the community was responsible for each of its members, and in turn claimed the right to regulate his actions; but we hold that it is most desirable, alike in the interests of decentralization, and in order to associate the people with the local tasks of the administration, that an attempt should be made to constitute and develope village panchayats for the administration of local village affairs.

"But the Commission went on to say:—

We are of opinion also that the foundation of any stable edifice which shall associate the people with the administration must be the village, as being an area of much greater antiquity than administrative creations such as tahsils, and one in which the people are known to one another and have interests which converge on definite and well-recognized objects, like water-supply and drainage."

The Hon'ble Mr. Walsh:—"Sir, with your permission, I rise to a point of order. I did not say, as the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya supposes, that the re-establishment of village panchayats is not desirable. I expressed no opinion on the point. I said that as regards the part of India with which I am acquainted, and with regard to which alone I can speak, that in the present altered state of social conditions which have led to the disappearance of the village panchayats, I did not think it was possible to resuscitate them"

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I thank the Hon'ble Member"—

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I must draw the attention of the Hon'ble Member to the fact that he has only one minute more."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I am sorry I did not entirely correctly represent my Hon'ble friend, but I think I represented what he said in the spirit. Therefore, Sir, I think that the Resolution which is before the Council runs on entirely sound lines, and all that the Government is asked to do is that it should give its early attention to the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the points to which attention has thus been drawn.

"I am confident that the Government will move in the direction recommended by the Hon'ble Mover, and in that confidence I support the Resolution before the Council."

The Hon'ble Srijut Ghanasyam Barua:—"Sir, this Resolution and the next are of importance at this moment, as it was recently declared by you that a fresh resolution on the further advance of the local self-government policy is just now engaging the consideration of the Government of India; and whether the Resolution as it stands is accepted in its entirety or not, I think a discussion of the subject is very opportune at this moment, so that non-official opinion, or to say properly, Indian public opinion as represented in this Council, may be placed before the Government to be taken into consideration before the further policy is declared. My friend the Hon'ble Pandit Malaviya has forestalled me in what remarks I wanted to make with regard to the remarks of Mr. Abbott and Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar. I think the difficulties, as pointed out by the Hon'ble Pandit, have been greatly exaggerated by Mr. Abbott, and I do not think that the relations between Mohammedans and Hindus at the present day are so bad as to necessitate the constant keeping out of both the communities from active co-operation in these local and municipal matters or that they cannot work cordially together; and if there is any such bad relation anywhere, I beg to submit that it is open to Government to remove it from these institutions in such a manner as to bring about a better understanding. These are the fields properly open to the people, where they can best train themselves to greater unanimity and greater concert in all public matters. As to the expert advice which he referred to, my Hon'ble friend Pandit Malaviya has pointed out that it is not right to suppose that non-officials are not capable of becoming equally expert. I would point out in addition that if expert advice is available to the Government official in the position of a chairman, it should equally be available to a non-official chairman. All sorts of help that are available to the official in anything he may need, and any expert advice which the non-official may be in need of, will be made available to the non-official in the same way as they are to the official chairman. Mr. Abbott is not perhaps aware that, in many matters requiring expert advice, municipal bodies are not at all allowed to work without having recognised expert sanction first.

"Sir, with regard to Mr. Achariar's remarks based on the decentralization theory, I perfectly agree that it is time that the local administrations should have their proper share in the initiation and development of local self-government schemes within them; but I must say that we are just now at the stage when we want, and when we must press for, decentralization as well as centralization. We have not as yet come to that stage when we can safely leave it to the local administrations or local officers alone to exercise that amount of discretion and liberality which is necessary and which it is the whole aim and object of local self-government to achieve. What we aspire for is, as was so well put by His Gracious Majesty our beloved King-Emperor, the fusion of the East and the West. The whole aim and object in the past, in the present and for the future was, is and should be, that the East and the West are blended together by an indissoluble tie; and that, while every individual in the Empire is trained up to a proper and real appreciation of the ideals and beauty of the British constitution, and British administration it is as well to have a central guiding authority, which will always have as its aim the achievement of that object. For that purpose I think the Government of India should always be that central authority for directing and guiding the local administrations in properly proceeding in the development of this grand scheme that is before us; and, Sir, hopeless as it may have seemed in the past, I think we are approaching a stage when it is every day becoming more and more possible to hope that an all-India citizenship with an Indian Empire uniformly developed in all its parts will be achieved in the future, however distant that future may be. With regard to the remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh that many municipalities make spontaneous requests to the Local Government for the appointment of their Chairman and that in these cases Government has to help and has always helped them, I have no doubt that these cases are common. I have also no doubt that the official Chairman is always perhaps the most capable that can be had; but we must not lose sight of the fact that it is not for efficiency alone that local self-government is meant or required. In the Resolution of 1882 the late Lord Ripon, of revered memory, laid down the real principle in clear terms, and the opinion expressed in that Resolution should not be lost sight of when a request from a Municipality or Local Board for the appointment of official Chairmen is made even spontaneously. Paragraph 6 of that Resolution shows clearly what was intended. I think the Government of India should again insist upon the following of the policy that is indicated there. That paragraph runs:

It is not uncommonly asserted that the people of this country are themselves entirely indifferent to the principle of self-government; that they take but little interest in public matters and that they prefer to have such affairs managed for them by Government officers.

"In those cases to which the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh has referred I think that is the popular feeling still. I beg to submit that the people should be again moved to a sense of their responsibility. Paragraph 6 goes on—

The Governor General does not attach much value to this theory. It represents no doubt the point of view which commends itself to many active and well-intentioned district officers; and the people of India are, there can be equally no doubt, remarkably tolerant of existing fact. But as education advances there is rapidly growing up all over the country an intelligent class of public-spirited men, whom it is not only bad policy but sheer waste of power to fail to utilise. The task of administration is yearly becoming more onerous as the country progresses in civilisation and material prosperity. Under these circumstances it becomes imperatively necessary to look around for some means of relief; and the Governor General in Council has no hesitation in stating his conviction that the only reasonable plan open to the Government is to induce the people themselves to undertake as far as may be, the management of their own affairs; and to develope or create, if need be, a capacity for self-help in respect of all matters that have not, for imperial reasons, to be retained in the hands of the representatives of Government.

"The real question, Sir, is how are the people to be trained; and it is for this training that Government should make every effort. In paragraph 15 of the Resolution it is said:—

The problem before the Government is one of no slight difficulty; being that of discovering in what manner the people of the town and district of British India can be best trained to manage their own local affairs intelligently and successfully.

"Further on it says:—

It may be suspected therefore that the cause of comparative failure in the efforts hitherto made is to be found rather in the character of those efforts than in the nature of the object pursued. They have been, it seems to the Governor General in Council, wanting to a great degree in earnestness and in real endeavours to adopt the system adapted to the feelings of the people by whom it has to be worked. If this is so, the remedy must lie in ascertaining, by patient and practical experiment, how best to call forth and render effective desire and capacity for self-government, which all intelligent and fairly educated men may safely be assumed to possess.

"I only beg to reiterate that these are the true principles to be followed and that they be repeated by Government with greater force in their promised Resolution and in any legislation that it may be proposed to effect in pursuance thereof. I beg to support the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray:—"Sir, while I give my humble support to other parts of this Resolution, I don't know whether to give my support to the fourth part of the Resolution or withhold it. Nothing can be more desirable than that the village people instead of grovelling in the mire and dirt, as is unhappily the case now should live in sanitary surroundings and should have good drinking water; and measures should be taken for the improvement of village sanitation. I shall always welcome these measures, but who is to do it? Most of our villages, as at present constituted, consist mostly of men who have nothing particular to do and who are mostly a set of idlers whose only business is to start party factions and thereby satisfy their private grudge. Most of the good men who delighted formerly to live in villages now shun them on account of the growing unhealthiness of the present villages and more particularly, with a view to enjoy the increasing luxuries of modern civilisation and the higher amenities of life, choose to live in towns; and all professional men and all men following trade and commerce do not and cannot afford to live in villages; and the result is, with all the good and true men away, it cannot be desirable to entrust the trust of the panchayat system to men who would not and probably could not, make efficient panchayats; and next, it is all very well to ask the people to levy additional taxes for the sanitary and other necessary purposes, but with the present road cess and chaukidari taxes pressing so hard upon the poor villagers, it would be a cruel wrong to the village people to levy more taxes from them. However, if a large part of the cesses is made over to the village panchayats, then I have no objection to the formation of panchayats; but not for the levying of additional taxes, which the people cannot bear—."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"Order, order! The Hon'ble Member is not in order in referring to the question of taxation. The motion before the Council is that village panchayats should be formed to carry out projects."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray:—"It will lead to that: that is what I wished to explain. However, I may assure my Hon'ble friend that the creation of the panchayati system would be the sure harbinger of additional local cesses which would be called permissive cesses.

"For these reasons I am sorry that I cannot accord my support to the fourth part of the Resolution, while cordially supporting the other parts."

The Hon'ble Malik Umar Hyat Khan:—"I only wish to refer to part (b) of the Resolution. I disagree with what Mr. Abbott says with regard to elected and nominated chairman. Supposing a municipality wanted one of their own men; naturally some would be on his side and some would not; and if this man were elected, the side which was against him would naturally do their best to try and hamper his work. So if instead Government nominated a man as chairman of the municipal council, it would be far better; especially for this purpose; suppose there was a Deputy Commissioner at head-quarters, then the municipality would perhaps be about 20 or 30 miles away from him, and he would only visit it once a year or so. As entrusted; to his care, he is doing lots of other duties which are perhaps more important he will leave matters to the tahsildar and the tahsildar may delegate his duties to the darogha, a man on Rs. 30 or Rs. 40 a month. This darogha may sell things worth Rs. 2,000 for Rs. 500 and get some money for himself, leaving the municipality a loser by Rs. 1,500 on the transaction. I do not say this happens always; but there may be that danger. So, nomination, especially if a good man is chosen or nominated by Government, is far better than perhaps a tahsildar who is far away from the place."

The Hon'ble Mr. Porter:—"The Council will recollect that you, Sir, have already been compelled, on behalf of Government, to refuse to publish certain papers dealing with local self-government, on the ground that it will be for the public convenience to publish a resolution on the whole question. The Hon'ble Mover will, therefore, I hope, not think it in any way discourteous if I decline to be drawn into any specific statement of policy, and I gather from his opening speech that he does not wish to elicit a premature statement of this kind, but rather to bring to the notice of the Government of India the opinion of the Council. With regard to what fell from the Hon'ble Mr. Achariar, I will not enter into the question of the meaning of the despatch of August, 1911, as it has no direct bearing on the present Resolution. But this much I may say that the Government of India realise most fully that it is quite impossible to lay down any but the most general principles as applying to the different provinces in India. In the course of this debate we have heard of very different systems in Bengal, the United Provinces and Madras and Bombay. Even if it were possible of attainment, uniformity would be undesirable as tending to lifelessness and monotony and as impeding experimental action. In each province the administrative system has grown up on lines of its own and with reference largely to local needs, and a measure or a procedure which might suit one province might be wholly inapplicable, or at least unnecessary in another. It follows that the decisions, in most matters connected with local self-government, which require the intervention of a central authority at all, should be left very much to the discretion of the Local Government concerned, and I really think that questions of local self-government are most usefully discussed in provincial councils rather than in the Imperial Council. I may remark that the Hon'ble Mover scarcely travelled beyond Bengal in his opening speech. It is probable that in the next few years excellent opportunities for such discussion will arise in connection with probable amendments of the Municipal and other Acts pertaining to local self-government.

"With these few prefatory remarks, I will deal with the resolution by sections.

"As regards (a), viz., that, subject to the maintenance of prescribed minimum balances, municipalities should have a free hand in respect of their budgets, Local Governments generally have been prepared to accept the recommendation or to make considerable relaxations in existing practice.

"As regards (b), viz., that municipal councils should usually elect their own chairman, the Hon'ble Member referred to statistics which have been laid upon the table. The figures show (he excepted Bengal) that out of 685 municipalities 477 have the privilege of electing their chairmen; thirteen more who possess the same privilege have asked Government to nominate. It is moreover stated in paragraph 851 of the Commission's Report that in a large portion of India, e.g., Madras, Bengal, Bombay and the Central Provinces, there are already a considerable proportion of elected non-official chairmen, as recommended by the Commission. In the United Provinces there has been a real effort of late to substitute non-official for official chairmen. The Hon'ble Mr. Cobb has told us the difficulties which have had to be contended against, but real progress is being made.

"As regards (c) and (d), I can only say that the matter is still under consideration. The Hon'ble Mover will be interested to learn that in most provinces the Commission's recommendation that district boards should contain a majority of elected members is already realised or about to be introduced.

"The establishment of village panchayats is, it will be recognised, a matter calling for great thought and care, and I can only assure the Council that it will receive these.

"In conclusion I may say that the policy of the Government of India is to progress slowly and surely on the lines laid down; and I do not think that anyone who has experience in such matters will wish us to move hurriedly in matters of administration which touch, at many points, the daily life of the people. In building up an administrative system, it is easier to make mistakes than to correct them; and it is only by steady progress, with due regard to local circumstances and conditions, that really healthy development can be achieved. The ends of Government and the educated classes are in the main the same; and, although in the circumstances I cannot accept the Resolution, which would impose rigid uniformity throughout the widely differing provinces of India, at the same time I can assure the Hon'ble Mover that the trend of this debate will receive careful consideration before the Resolution is published."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"Sir, I desire to thank the Hon'ble Member who has just spoken for the assurance he has given me that the points which have been raised in this discussion and the views which have been put forward will receive the careful consideration of Government. The object of my resolution was to place the Government in touch with the trend of educated opinion as regards some of the most vital issues affecting the question of local self-government. I do not want the Government to pledge itself to any policy; I fully understand the situation of the Central Government in regard to Provincial Governments in a matter of this kind. The Central Government can only lay down general principles which have to be modified by the Provincial Governments in the light of local conditions and circumstances. That was, indeed, the way in which Lord Ripon proceeded and that must continue to be the policy of the Government of India until we have a complete system of decentralization. Sir, I thank the Government for the assurance that the debate to-day and the views which have been expressed here will receive careful consideration, and I will not press the resolution in view of this assurance. But you will permit me, Sir, to refer to one or two matters which I think it necessary for me to take note of.

"I desire (and I think I may say so on behalf of the non-official Indian Members here) to thank the official members not connected with the Government of India who have spoken upon this subject. Both of them, the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh, have shown their deep sympathy not only with the resolution, but with the whole system of local self-government, and, how very different was the attitude of Mr. Abbott! We have about 200 municipalities in which there are non-official chairmen; and we have these 200 ships which, accordingly to Mr Abbott, are sailing without rudder or compass; and yet no great catastrophe has happened, things are going on just the same now as they were before. I think his apprehensions have been grossly exaggerated; they certainly are not shared by responsible administrators.

"There was one remark which fell from the Hon'ble Mr. Cobb, which I think needs some explanation. He observed, in the course of his speech, that party spirit interfered with the growth and development of local self-government. This is a point which is very often urged on the official side by official members here and elsewhere. Party spirit is an inevitable element in all forms of government by discussion. We have it in Europe; we have it in civilized countries; we have it here."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cobb:—"May I explain, Sir, that I distinctly alluded not to general party spirit, but to the particular religious animosities which at present unfortunately exist."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"If it is in reference to particular religious animosities I will say this, that these animosities are dying out; that the feeling of cordiality and friendliness between Hindus and Mohammedans is growing; and we find, in connection with the recent Bakir-Id festivals that there were less numerous cases of breaches of the peace than there had been before. Therefore, altogether, the outlook is hopeful and satisfactory. Party spirit with regard to municipal affairs is indeed dying out, is certainly diminishing, and I hope and trust that, with the spread of education and the growth of public spirit, our people will learn to subordinate to national ends the ends of party.

"Sir, one word with reference to my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar. I have the highest respect for the opinions of my friend. I am often on the same platform with him, though sometimes I have to stand upon a different platform. I welcome his opposition, and for two reasons.

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

In the first place it shows that we non-official Indian members in this Council Chamber do not vote by parties, that in giving a decision on any point, we act according to the light of our individual consciences and the light of our individual judgments. In the second place, his opposition shows the strength of my case When we have provincial autonomy (and no one is a stronger advocate of provincial autonomy than myself), we shall certainly not come to the Government of India for a thing of this kind; but so long as we have not provincial autonomy, we are bound to come to the fountain head of power and influence it in order that it may shape its policy for the furtherance of provincial autonomy, and this Resolution is indeed but part of a scheme of provincial autonomy. What do we want? We want the Imperial Government to delegate some of its powers to the Provincial Governments, and we want the Provincial Governments to delegate some of their powers to local bodies, the representatives of the people. Is not that a forward step in the direction of provincial autonomy? And further, Sir, if my friend were to analyse my Resolution he would find that, with the exception of one matter, in every case legislation would be necessary, and if legislation were necessary, a Bill would have to be drafted and the Bill would have to be sent to the Government of India for approval. Is it not far better that we should come to the Government of India direct and lay our views before the Government instead of going about it in this roundabout fashion? Therefore, Sir, I do not think that the position which my friend has taken up is a tenable one; and, on sober reflection, I am sure he will agree with us.

"I do not wish to detain the Council at further length—no further reply is required. I beg leave to withdraw the Resolution."

The Resolution was, by permission, withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE ELECTION OF PRESIDENTS OF RURAL BOARDS, APPOINTMENT OF ADVISORY COUNCILS FOR COLLECTORS AND CREATION OF A LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD FOR EACH PROVINCE.

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"Sir, I beg to move the resolution which stands against my name—

That this Council recommends to the Governor General in Council the adoption of the following recommendation made by Mr. Romesh Chunder Dutt, a member of the Decentralization Commission:—

(a) that the Presidents of District and Sub-District Boards should be elected;

(b) that Advisory Councils be formed to help the Magistrate-Collector in the discharge of his executive duties;

(c) that a Local Government Board be formed in each province for exercising control over rural boards and municipalities.

"It is associated with the honoured memory of the late Mr. Romesh Chunder Dutt of the Indian Civil Service. A distinguished scholar and a man of letters, Mr. Romesh Chunder Dutt was also a brilliant administrator. He was the first Indian to rise to the position of a Divisional Commissioner; and he would have risen still higher if the attractions of literary pursuits and his ambition to improve and ennoble the literature of his own country had not led to his early retirement. Sir, he was the only Indian member on the Decentralization Commission, a fact which testifies to the appreciation of his worth as a practical administrator in the highest circles of Government.

"Sir, the first part of my resolution relates to the election of Chairmen by the District and Sub-District Boards. Here I again take my stand upon the Resolution of the 18th of May, to which I referred yesterday, and which lays down the principle that, whatever official control has to be exercised over local bodies should be exercised from without rather than from within. I said yesterday that this principle was endorsed by Lord Morley, who regarded it as a vital principle of Local Self-Government, and he invited the Government of India to affirm it and actively shape their policy in accordance with it. But, Sir, objections have been taken to the view I have urged by the majority of the members of the Decentralization Commission. Their objections are formulated at pages 265 and 266 of their Report. They say that the effect of such a change would be (I think I am quoting their words) to divorce the Collector from all healthy contact with instructed non-official opinion. To that objection my reply is this, that the District Boards, as constituted at present, do not and cannot reflect non-official opinion, instructed or otherwise. But waiving that point, admitting for argument's sake, the full force of this objection, I submit that it is met by the second branch of my resolution which recommends that Advisory Committees should be appointed. If Advisory Committees be not appointed, if the second branch of my resolution be rejected, it will still be open to the Collector, as it was open to him before the creation of District Boards in 1886, as it is still open to him in some parts of the Central Provinces, to consult educated local opinion, though in an informal and therefore in a less effective manner. Sir, you will not (I reply to the objector) you will not give us Advisory Committees on the ground that they will weaken the authority of the Collector; you will not allow us to elect our own Chairman, on the ground that it will deprive the Collector of the opportunity of coming in contact with instructed opinion of the locality. Therefore, Sir, it comes to this, that we and our institutions exist for the Collector and not the Collector for us. I venture to submit that this is an exploded doctrine as applicable to present-day Indian administration. Furthermore, it does not lie in the mouth of those who refuse us the boon of Advisory Committees to make that the ground of denying us this right involved in the great Resolution of the 18th May, 1882.

"Let us look at the matter from another point of view. In Bengal, and I presume it is the case in other parts of India, the Vice-Chairmen of district boards are usually non-official Indian gentlemen, and I say this, that the brunt of the work in many cases is borne by the Vice-Chairman. Therefore, Sir, it comes to this, that you give the work to be done by one, but the responsibility and the power belong to somebody else. Is that conducive to efficiency?

"Sir, I rely upon the authority of the Hon'ble the Home Member in support of this branch of my Resolution. In opposing Mr. Gokhale's Resolution in February, 1912, in connection with the appointment of Advisory Committees, he indicated his views as to the future of local self-Government. He said,—I think I am quoting his exact words, but he will correct me if I am not—' as time goes on, various functions which are now vested in the Collector should be withdrawn from him and they should be made over to District Boards and Municipalities.' Well, Sir, I say this that here we have a function which with the utmost advantage to the public interests may be withdrawn from the Collector and made over to the district boards to be exercised by them through their elected Chairman.

"I now come, Sir, to the second branch of my Resolution, the appointment of Advisory Committees. A similar Resolution, but in a somewhat more amplified form, was introduced in this Council in February, 1912, by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale. That Resolution was lost after considerable discussion; the Indian voting, however, being substantially unanimous. I do not indeed go so far, for the present at any rate, as regards details as the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale did. I shall be satisfied if the Council will accept the view that it is necessary to create Advisory Committees to help the Collector in the discharge of his executive functions, the details being elaborated by the Government subject to the approval of this Council. Sir, when I invite this Council to accept this principle, I claim to have on my side practically the whole weight of the authority of the Decentralization Commission, for the majority agreed in the recommendation that the practice followed by some Collectors of consulting their District

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

Boards on questions beyond their legitimate sphere should be extended. My Hon'ble friend opposite, Sir William Meyer, went a step further. He said that 'the practice should be general'—I think I quote his words. Therefore, the necessity of the Collector taking advice in the discharge of his executive duties is admitted by the majority of the Decentralization Commission as well as by Mr. Dutt. The only point of difference is that, whereas the majority regarded District Boards as a suitable organization for the purpose, Mr. Dutt recommended that separate Advisory Committees independent of the District Boards should be created. I venture to submit that the whole weight of argument is in favour of Mr. Dutt's view. The District Boards are created for a particular purpose; you want them for a general purpose; their unsuitability is obvious. Then, Sir, as I pointed out yesterday, the District Boards are largely officialised bodies consisting of a majority of nominated members. Are they a suitable organization for the expression of non-official opinion, instructed or otherwise? No, Sir; for that you must look elsewhere. With the advance of public opinion and the growing complexities of administrative problems in this country, the necessity of executive officers of Government being placed in close touch with the people of the country is being felt in an increasing measure. In Bengal a Committee has been appointed and is at present at work to suggest means for the promotion of this object. From the published reports of the evidence taken by the Committee it seems that there is a general consensus of opinion among the educated classes in favour of the view that the only solution of the problem lies in the appointment of Advisory Committees independent of the District Boards Sir, we have heard a great deal about Collectors holding informal conferences with the raiyats. What need is there for intermediaries, exclaims the objector, when the Collector can go straight to the raiyat and talk to him in the language of the raiyat? Sir, there are two difficulties in the way. In the first place the Collector is an overworked official. He is tied to his desk from morning till evening, buried amid piles of reports which he has to read, to digest and to whose volume he has sometimes himself to add. If he can tear himself away from the state of bondage, he is confronted with another difficulty—the difficulty of language Is the Collector always able to speak to the raiyat in the language of the raiyat? Sir, I am myself unable to make a pronouncement on that subject, but I quote the authority of the Decentralization Commission. They took a lot of evidence on the subject and this is what they say: 'We find, European officers, more specially in Madras, Bombay and the two Bengals (that was before the partition, at the time when we had two Bengals), we find that European officers are not sufficiently acquainted with the vernaculars': and they add: 'We consider that the officers of Government, and specially the European officers, are not in sufficient contact with the people.' European officers include Collectors. Therefore, this statement analysed means that Collectors are not in sufficient contact with the people. Therefore, we are driven to this conclusion that, despite the District Boards which the Collectors might have used as advisory bodies, they were not in sufficient contact with the people. Therefore, Sir, the conclusion is irresistible that the District Boards have failed as Advisory Committees on the showing of the Decentralization Commission itself.

"Let us take another objection. If these Committees are appointed, it is said that they will hamper the Collector and weaken his executive authority. Evidently the Decentralization Commission did not take that view, for if they had, they would not recommend even the District Boards as Advisory Committees. How can the Collector feel hampered in the exercise of his executive duties by advice which he is under no obligation to accept? Or how can an Advisory Committee degenerate into a hot-bed of intrigue, as was said by the Hon'ble the Home Member in the debate of 1912, when the utmost limit of their authority will not extend beyond tendering advice which the Collectors need not accept. Sir, in the course of that debate, on the occasion of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's motion, my Hon'ble friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya made a remark that as the Viceroy and Governors had their

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee.]

Councils to assist and advise them, it was only right and proper that the Magistrate-Collector should have his Advisory Committee. To that the Hon'ble the Home Member made the following reply. He said 'there is no analogy between the work done in this Council and the Provincial Councils and the work done in the Collector's office. The Collector is a mere executive officer; he has to carry out policies, not to determine them. I accept the statement; which, however, overlooks one or two very important considerations. The Collector of the district is indeed an executive officer, but he is something more; he is, in the words of a great Anglo-Indian administrator 'the eye and the ear of the Government. Through him the Government sees; through him the Government hears.' All large administrative and legislative proposals before they have materialised into definite measures and policies have to be reported upon by him. They come before him in their formative, their fluid stage. It is then open to him to give them form, shape and direction. Therefore, Sir, I say this, that at an early and important stage, he is in one sense the creater of all measures and of all policies. I think the position is irresistible, and, therefore, is it not necessary, is it not desirable, that he should, even at this early stage, have the benefit of the advice, the corporate and responsible advice, of a body of men like the representatives of local opinion?

"How many blunders would be avoided; how many difficulties overcome; how facile would be the course of legislative and administrative measures, if at their inception, or very near the stage of their inception, the executive authorities were placed in touch with the cultured opinion and the better mind of the land? Take a concrete case. There was no question which in the annals of Bengal in recent times more profoundly stirred the hearts of our people than the Partition of Bengal. It was said at the time that the agitation which it gave rise to was a machine-made affair, that the Bar was pulling the strings from behind and was moving forward the wheels of agitation. My Hon'ble friend there (Mr. Kenrick) was not the leader of the Bar at that time and was innocent of all complicity in this wicked and nefarious conspiracy. However that may be, if we had Advisory Committees at that time, this question of the Partition would infallibly have been placed before them and then the Government would have been in a position to ascertain the genuine sense of the community, and what undoubtedly was a deplorable blunder would have been averted. Sir, in Bengal such questions as the partition of districts, the creation of sub-divisions, the opening of thanas and chaukis, the establishment of honorary benches, are constantly cropping up, and Advisory Committees would afford invaluable aid to the administration.

"Lastly, Sir, I take my stand, so far as this branch of the subject is concerned, upon what is admitted by the Government of India and by Lord Morley himself as the fundamental underlying principle of the reform scheme. I will read an extract from his despatch of 27th November, 1908, which has so often been quoted:—

Your Excellency claims for your scheme as a whole 'that it will really and effectively, associate the people of India in the work not 'only of occasional legislation but of actual every-day administration.' The claim is abundantly justified, yet the scheme hardly pretends to be a complete representation of the entire body of changes and improvements in the existing system that are evidently present to the minds of some of those whom your Government has consulted and that to the best of my judgment are now demanded by the situation described in the opening words of the despatch.

"Well, Sir, the underlying principle of the reform scheme therefore is that the people should be brought into association with the Government in the ever-yday work of administration. In order that this principle may be given effect to and the noble words of Lord Morley vindicated, I commend with all confidence the adoption of this part of my Resolution by the Council.

"I now come, Sir, to the last branch of my Resolution, i.e., the creation of a Local Government board for each province. At present, under existing conditions, control is exercised over local bodies by the Magistrate, the Commissioner of the Division, and in some cases, by the Government. What I propose is that these authorities should be relieved of this power which should be vested in a Local Government board. The advantages of this proposal are obvious. The Collector has multifarious duties to attend to. He is not an expert, and in these days of specialisation every department of Government needs expert knowledge and experience which the Collector does not and cannot be expected to possess. Thus, Sir, under existing conditions efficiency is lost amid the diffusion of duties, the distraction of attention and the absence of expert knowledge. A Local Government board would remove these drawbacks and further ensure uniformity and co-ordination in the working of our system of Local Self-Government. Sir, Lord Morley was inclined to accept this proposal, but he awaited the report of the Decentralization Commission. This is what he said,—it is a small extract and I will read it out:—

> The encouragement of Local Self-Government being an object of high importance in the better organization of our Indian system, it remains to be considered how far in each province it would be desirable to create a department to deal exclusively with these local bodies, guiding and instructing them, correcting their abuses, in a form analogous to the operation of the Local Government boards in this country. That, however, is a detail, though a weighty one, of the question on which as a whole I confidently expect that Your Excellency will find some light in the forthcoming report of the Decentralization Commission.

"The Decentralization Commission, with the exception of Mr. Dutt, voted against the proposal, and the gist of their argument is this: that as their recommendations, by reason of the delegation of power, would restrict the area of Government control over the local bodies, it was no longer necessary to create Local Government boards for each province. Well, Sir, the Decentralization Commission—I speak of that body with the utmost possible respect—could have no forecast of the recent developments of local self-government. The Government of India have been making, and will I hope continue to make, large grants for sanitary purposes. Sanitary schemes and provincial projects arising out of them will have to be considered; and I contend that they will be best considered by a body exclusively devoted to that work and furnished with expert knowledge. Such a body would be a source of inspiration and guidance, the value of which it would be difficult to exaggerate.

"Sir, I have now laid my case before this Council, and I await its judgment. I cannot indeed disguise from myself the fact that, in regard to two at least of the three points covered by my Resolution, the majority of the Decentralization Commission are opposed to me. But, Sir, the Decentralization Commission submitted their report in 1909: this is 1914. India to-day is not what India was even in 1909: great changes have taken place even in the short period of a quinquennium. In the words of the late lamented Lord Minto:

> India has felt the full impact of that wave of progress which is sweeping through Asia bearing on its crest the germs of vast and stupendous changes.

"But the framework of our system of local self-government was fixed 30 years back and it has not been changed since then. In the meantime the administrative machinery in its higher ranges has been re-adjusted to the novel conditions. In 1893 the Councils were enlarged and reformed in pursuance of the Parliamentary Statute of 1892. In 1910 the Councils were again enlarged and reformed in pursuance of the Parliamentary Statute of 1909. But our local bodies were constituted between 1884 and 1886, and they remain what they were. Lord Morley regards them as an integral part of his reform scheme. Obviously the old should be adapted to the new in order that it may respond to the impulses of progress which vibrate through the whole administrative machinery. Sir, therefore, with statesmanlike insight, Lord Morley has called for an advance in the direction of local self-government. The public voice endorses that view, and I submit, with all respect but with the utmost emphasis, that it is the supreme duty of Government to bridge the gulf that separates the demands of an advancing public opinion from the prevailing administrative and legislative conditions, to harmonise them, and, by allaying contention and controversy, to spread broadcast the blessings of peace and contentment.

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee; Mr. Arthur.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

"With these words I beg to move the Resolution which stands in my name."

The Hon'ble Mr. Arthur said:—"Sir, as one who has been a District Officer throughout his service I may be permitted to say something from the District Officer's point of view on recommendation (b) of this Resolution, namely that Advisory Councils be formed to help the Magistrate-Collector in the discharge of his executive duties.

"Those duties are manifold. The Collector is responsible for the peace of a district of perhaps 5,000 square miles and for the well-being of a population of a million or more living in a few towns and 1,400 or 1,500 villages; he is responsible for the collection of revenue and the control of a large revenue staff; he supervises the work of a number of Subordinate Magistrates; he is the head of the Police and of the Forest Department; he is President of the District Board; he is District Registrar; he is Political Agent for any Native States attached to the District; he supervises the work of Municipalities; in consultation with the Executive Engineer he makes out a scheme of Public Works; he is responsible for famine administration and for measures to deal with cholera and plague epidemics.

"Let us now see whether an advisory council could help the Collector in performing these duties. Supporters of the Resolution may say, 'I never suggested that the Council should interfere in this or that duty.' The wording of the Resolution however is that the Council should assist the Magistrate-Collector in the performance of his executive duties, and if a Council were appointed for this purpose, I venture to say that there is no branch of his duties in which they would not sooner or later interfere.

"I hardly think any one will be bold enough to suggest that a Council could assist the Collector in his work as Political Agent. He stands towards the Chief of a State in the position of the accredited representative of Government. How would the Chief view interference in his State's affairs by an irresponsible non-official Council?

"The Collector's work as District Registrar consists in the control of a staff of Sub-Registrars and their clerks and annually inspecting their work in the course of his tour. It requires much technical knowledge and it is obvious that a Council could not assist in its performance.

"The Collector is the head of the Forest Department with the Divisional Forest Officer as his Assistant. It lies with him to hold the balance evenly between the opposite extremes of such severity as will allow the Department to become an engine of oppression and a misplaced leniency which may result in untold damage to forests. In such matters as Forest Conservancy would not an Advisory Council be strongly tempted to adopt the popular side and champion petitions for unwise or impossible forest concessions?

"As regards public works the Collector is jointly responsible with the Executive Engineer for bringing the needs of the district to the notice of Government and seeing that he spends almost half the year on a tour which takes in the whole district, I think no one could be better qualified than he to judge of the merits of conflicting claims on the public purse in this direction. Taking human nature as it is, would not individual members of his Council inevitably favour works to benefit their own neighbourhood? Does not one of the foundations of a Collector's successful administration consist in his known independence of local interests?

"As President of the District Board the Collector has in the members of that Board and of the subsidiary Taluka Local Boards, Advisory Councils, more or less useful according as their members take interest or otherwise in the works. No council independent of these Boards could help the Collector in this branch of his duties. Here as elsewhere multiplicity of advice means confusion.

"A Collector has to manage a large Revenue and Magisterial Establishment. He has to make appointments and promotions, grant leave, etc. Sir, to do justice in promotions in a large and scattered staff most of whose members the Collector sees only once a year is of itself a difficult matter. I once had to decide on the merits of a clerk described in the last note by the Head of his office as 'Hardworking, but idle'! I think it will be admitted generally that while an establishment can be controlled by one man it cannot be controlled by a Council.

"The Collector as District Magistrate is the head of the police force of the district with the District Superintendent as his Assistant. It is scarcely necessary for me to point out the impracticability of a Council helping him in this branch of his duties.

"So too as regards the rest of his work as District Magistrate. He may at any moment be required to take strong action to prevent or to quell a riot, on his quickness and accuracy of judgment and strength of character many lives may depend, and failure to act at the right time may have serious and far-reaching results. And, be it remembered, this action may be called for at any place in an area of perhaps 100 miles by 50. How could a council help him in such an emergency? He would require not one but several councils, each for a given area, and then before acting on advice proffered he would have to assure himself both of the impartiality of his advisers and of the soundness of the advice they tendered. Their advice might be directly opposed to that of the local Magistrate, the Deputy Collector or Mamlatdar. The District Magistrate would become enmeshed in a hopeless tangle of contrary opinions and his action paralysed at a moment when decision was essential.

"A District Magistrate however has not only to deal with emergencies. There is a great deal of routine work to be done by him if the magisterial work of the district is to be efficient. The returns of cases tried by Subordinate Magistrates come in every month. A careful inspection of these will reveal much. I don't mean that it will enable the District Magistrate to remark that column 12 has been wrongly filled in! By calling for and reading the records of a certain number of cases he will get an insight into the work of Subordinate Magistrates which must be useful and which may, as I have found by experience, be invaluable. Interference by a council in such work would be undesirable—and indeed illegal.

"In famine time, as may be supposed, the Collector is taxed to the uttermost. He must watch the conditions closely from the day that crop failure is a certainty. He must be prepared to start famine works where necessary and to organize a system of village inspection without which the aged and infirm would die of starvation. He must arrange for village dole distributions, kitchens, fodder operations and takavi advances for land improvement and for the purchase of seed and cattle; he must decide promptly what suspensions and remissions of revenue are necessary and throughout he must be constantly on the watch to see that arrangements work smoothly and to prevent oppression and peculation. Successful famine administration depends upon intimate knowledge of the conditions in the stricken area. It is further work that does not admit of delay. A Council would seriously impede the Collector at such a time.

"In plague and cholera epidemics the Collector does what he can with the aid of the Civil Surgeon and the sanitary department. He may have to take unpopular measures with a view to saving life. That is all in the day's work for him, and I do not see that a Council would help.

"The Collector has confidential work on a variety of subjects. I don't think it has ever been suggested that a Council should have anything to do with this, but it must be remembered that confidential information may materially affect his action and how could a Council judge of the desirability of the action without knowing the grounds on which it is proposed?

"Sir, have I not said enough to show that the work of a Collector is in its very essence personal? He may deal with every correspondence on his table and barely touch the fringe of real administration which depends on his personal contact with the people.

"I would like now to say a few words about the district tour which plays so important a part in the work of the Bombay Revenue Officer. Except in the rains the Collector and his Assistants are generally on tour and are in close touch with every section of the population. They are constantly visiting villages and they hear petitions every evening in camp. It is the tour which is the basis of successful district administration. From the day he takes over a district a good Collector is constantly informing himself as to what is going on throughout his charge. The whole district forms his Advisory Council. To limit his advisers to a definite body of men would be to hamper and fetter him at every turn. Sir, allegations have been made in this Council and outside it that the Collector and his Assistants of to-day are out of touch with the people, cannot speak their language and need some medium of communication. This is one argument adduced in favour of Advisory Councils. The Civil Service is silent, it makes itself heard neither in the press nor on the platform and the libel is frequently accepted and passed on without investigation. I have been a District Officer for the past 25 years and have come in contact with a large proportion of the District Officers in the Bombay Presidency, and I can say from my own knowledge that the allegation is the direct contrary of the truth. I have had a large number of Assistants serving under me and I cannot call to mind one of over three years' standing who has not known the language sufficiently to converse freely with the people, visit their villages without an interpreter and make himself acquainted with their wants, while many become really proficient. Why, Sir, for seven months in the year the Assistant Collector hardly meets an Englishman, while he is talking the vernacular all day. Sir, I do not wish to be misunderstood. There are four vernaculars in use in the Bombay Presidency—Marathi, Guzerathi, Sindhi and Kanarese. It is not in reason to expect any Civilian to master them all, and I do not say that an Assistant Collector suddenly transferred from Sind to Kanara would necessarily know the language. I do say that he would get a very good working knowledge of it in his first two years there.

"The allegation to which I have referred is a peculiarly infelicitous one to receive currency in such a period as the past fifteen years. I suppose no more disastrous time has been known in the Deccan during the past century than the decade from 1897 to 1907. During that period in Satara, the district of which I held charge for half that time, one-fifth of the population died of plague while there were three distinct famines and several bad seasons. In this disastrous time all that I saw was increased activity on the part of touring officers of all departments and a genuine appreciation by the people of the sympathy and help they received.

"Sir, I have pointed out objections to the appointment of a Council inherent in the nature of a Collector's work. What about the difficulties in the formation and method of work of any Council it is possible to devise? Should the Council consist of residents of the headquarters of the district or of different localities? If the former, what knowledge would they have of matters in distant towns and villages? If the latter, how could local knowledge be obtained through them without appointing a Council hopelessly unwieldy in point of numbers? What interests would be represented? Is it proposed to represent all classes?—If so, unwieldy again. Should they sit together to assist the Collector on all subjects or should the different members deal only with subjects in which they or their class are interested? Should they tour with the Collector? If so, how could they attend to their own business or how are they to be remunerated for leaving it? If not, what knowledge could they possess of matters at a distance from their homes and how could they help the Collector in deciding these when he had studied them on the spot and had already the best local opinions, official and non-official? Again, if they are not to tour with the Collector, when and where are they to meet him? It has been suggested that they should meet him once a month at head-quarters. How many of the matters now decided on the spot as they arise are to be hung up for these monthly meetings? What would be the position of the Collector who had to say to applicants 'Oh, I can't possibly decide this question. I must go and consult my Council'? Then too consider the time it would take the Collector to leave his camp and travel, it might be two days' march and back again, and the serious dislocation to his work it would involve. And when he had done this how many of the thousand and one things that have come before him in the month could he lay before them in one or two days, explaining with reference to each the history of the question, the pros and cons, local opinions, etc, and when he had done so what would their opinion be worth? If they had not local knowledge they would be bound to concur in the opinion formed by the Collector on the spot. The Council must then either be reduced to a set of puppets and consultation with them become a farce or they must be required to visit the locality in which the question has arisen. Well, Sir, taking the size of an average district the amount of travelling entailed would be enormous. Men with any business of their own could not do it, and places on the Council would, I fear, be sought by undesirable persons for their own ends. Every District Officer knows the difficulty now experienced in getting the best men to give their time and energies to the work of Municipalities and Local Boards even at their own doors. Assuming that you could get good men able to give the time and physically fit for the amount of travelling to be done—a large assumption—what position would a Collector rushing hither and thither, as questions arose for decision, accompanied by a Council of men of all castes and classes, occupy in the eyes of the people? What language is to be the medium of communication between the Collector and his Council? Is the latter to be confined to English knowing men? If so, it is a very material limitation. It excludes straight off, for instance, every member of the cultivating class Again if the Collector is to deal with the people through an English knowing Council, what additional inducement is there to him to learn the vernacular? On the other hand if places on the Council are not to be confined to those who know English, the Collector had much better deal with the people direct

"Then, too, I would ask what would be the position of the officers on the spot, the Deputy Collector and the Mamlatdar or Tehsildar? Is the opinion of the Council without local knowledge to weigh against that of these highly educated, highly trained, experienced, responsible officers? How many visits of the Council would it take to break their prestige in the eyes of the people?

"Then, Sir, it must be remembered that the Collector has a very great deal of work to get through in a very limited time. In Bombay there is no Collector who has not already as much as he can well do in the day. The only question is what he has time to see to personally and what he must entrust to others Is it conceivable that he could dispose of his work at all if he had constantly to be travelling long distances to consult a Council? His task, difficult enough now, would be impossible.

"Sir, it is the Collector who is the embodiment of Government in the eyes of the people. Anything that weakens his prestige in their eyes weakens the prestige of Government. They understand rule by one man; they certainly would not understand rule by a committee. In administration by committee you will introduce a system wholly unsuited to the country. I deny that the Collector who spends his life among the people takes less interest in and knows less about them than the head-quarter pleader or trader. I maintain that he takes more interest and knows more. Those who vote for this Resolution will vote not for what will bring the Collector into closer touch with the people—he is in close touch already—but for the erection of a barrier between them I object to this Resolution from the point of view of the people, whom it will place under a rule incomprehensible to them. I object from the point of view of existing local bodies, which will have private persons unconnected with them prying into their affairs. I object from the point of view of the Collector's official subordinates, European and Indian, whose work will be perpetually interfered with by irresponsible critics. I object from the point of view of the Collector and District Magistrate, who will find himself hampered at every step, his labours greatly increased and his administration paralyzed."

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Malik Umar Hyat Khan.]

The Hon'ble Malik Umar Hyat Khan :—" Sir, the Resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend may suit the Bengal Province but it does not suit the Punjab I have had a long experience of District Board in the capacity of its member and Vice-Chairman. I realised then that many members were not alive to their duties and responsibilities. There are men who, are asleep and do not know what is going on ; there is another class of men who. though awake, possess little knowledge of what is happening. The rest who know are so weak that they dare not express their opinions in opposition to the official view. They are also prevailed upon by any influencial member amongst them If the latter cares to speak before the meeting and asks for their vote, it is readily promised and given A movement is being made towards the betterment by appointing higher classes, better qualified, and thus more alive to their responsibilities. If an election was to take the place of the nomination it would set back the hands of the clock and all the well-to-do men who can speak on subjects authoritatively would be debarred from entering such bodies. They would never like to stand as candidates fearing humiliation in case of a failure in election. Their self-respect and social status would never permit them to go abegging for votes to the houses of people who would equally feel ashamed of their visit, if the former went to them. Thus inferior class, having no standard of any such thing in their life at all and unable to discriminate between the words self-respect and humiliation, would, easily jump in. In my opinion such a resolution should have been moved in the Provincial Council in an advanced province and not in the Imperial one for the sake of the whole of India. As to the (a) part of the resolution there will be no harm if the Chairman be non-official, but I will prefer nomination to election. As to (b) it will be entirely unworkable The Collectors already ask the advice of the leading men ; but directly the Advisory Councils were constituted, the members would be known to the public, and the people concerned would leave no stone unturned to prejudice them As to (c) the Commissioner of the Division already exercises control over his division ; and if one board was constituted in a province, it would be centralizing more than decentralizing ; and thus contrary to the very meaning of the name of decentralization commission whose proposals are now put forward for discussion.

" Now, Sir, I will just make a few remarks about the desirability of having a separate chairman for the District Board. I think one of my official colleagues has made a sufficiently good case against Advisory Councils by showing the multifarious duties of a Collector. From this it is evident that such a Collector should be jack of all trades, but master of none ; and it is most desirable that any work like the chairmanship of a District Board, should be taken away from him so that he may be able to devote his time to more useful purposes. This shall serve two ends—firstly, that the members shall learn to take the responsibilities upon their own shoulders, as at present all that Deputy Commissioners say has to be done whether right or wrong ; and, secondly, that the non-official member with local knowledge will be able to carry on the work far more efficiently than an already over-worked collector. When I was questioned by the Decentralization Commission, especially by Mr. Romesh Chunder Dutt, regarding the chairmanship of District Board, I explained to him my personal experiences. The District Board, I said, was first managed by Deputy Commissioner. When I got its charge as a Vice-President, I increased the income by a few thousand rupees and during every subsequent year the income continued increasing, till I was sent to active service, first to Africa and then to Tibet, when I had to resign.

" I knew I could further improve many things by taking a personal interest ; such as the Deputy Commissioner could not possibly do, having so many different things to do.

" I am totally against the Resolution as it stands, but if it had recommended that the District Boards should have a nominated chairman, I would have been quite on the side of the Resolution."

[Mr. Walsh.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Walsh:—"Sir, I should also like to say a few words, based on my experience both as a Magistrate-Collector and as a Commissioner, with regard to clause (b) of this Resolution, namely, 'that Advisory Councils be formed to help the Magistrate-Collector in the discharge of his executive duties.'

"The able speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur to which we have just listened, has given full and weighty reasons why the proposed Advisory Councils are quite unsuitable for the purpose for which they are proposed and, if appointed, would have a most undesirable effect on the district administration.

"To form an opinion as to the desirability or otherwise of the proposed Advisory Councils, the following points must be considered?

First.—Is there any need for Advisory Councils?

Second.—Will such an Advisory Council, if constituted, assist the Collector in the discharge of his executive duties?

Third.—Will they lead to the Collector's duties being discharged more efficiently than at present? and Fourth.—If such Councils would theoretically have the above effect, is it practicable to constitute an Advisory Council that will be able to give advice of any value on the many and varied matters with which the Magistrate-Collector has to deal in the discharge of his executive duties?

"The idea underlying this proposal appears to be that it is necessary to bring the District officer into closer touch with the people, and is based on the assumption that at present he is not in touch with the people.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Arthur has shewn for the Bombay Presidency that this is not the case, and as regards the Provinces of Bihar and Orissa and of Bengal, in both of which I have an extended experience of district administration, both as a Magistrate-Collector and as Commissioner, I can also state with absolute assurance that it is not the case. The assertion that the District Officer is not in touch with the people is generally made by those who have no first-hand knowledge of the facts. But, unless contradicated, it is liable to be accepted.

"In Bihar and Orissa and in Bengal every Sub-Divisional Officer has to be on tour throughout his sub-division for a period, generally of four months, in the year, and District Officers for a period varying from three months to four months according to the size of the district, and other considerations. During this time, they are brought into direct contact and relation with the people. The subjects to which they are directed to devote their attention during these tours cover all matters affecting the welfare and condition of the people, and are such as bring them into direct touch with the people in all aspects in which the administration affects their life and interests. When on tour, the Collector has the opportunity of consulting all classes of local opinion, not only of the classes who would be represented on the proposed Advisory Councils, but also of the villagers themselves in their own villages, and of ascertaining their interests. Similarly, in the higher appointments, Commissioners have to be on tour for three months or more, throughout their divisions.

"In addition to this, Assistant Magistrate-Collectors have to pass through a course of settlement training, and many of them are employed for some years on settlement, which brings them into close and intimate relation with the people in their rural life.

"I would therefore emphatically controvert any presumption, that Advisory Councils are needed with the object of bringing the Magistrate-Collector into closer touch with the people. They would, in fact, have exactly the opposite effect. At present the people know the Magistrate-Collector as the head of the district, to whom they can go. The creation of Advisory Councils would interpose a wedge between the Collector and the people, and so far from bringing them into closer touch would separate them.

"As regards the second point, namely, whether an Advisory Council will assist the Magistrate-Collector in the discharge of his executive duties, I think that there can be no question that they will not; but will, on the other hand, impede him in their discharge and render it less efficient.

"In the criminal administration of the district, in the outbreak of epidemics, in floods or other sudden emergencies, it is prompt and not deliberated and delayed action that is needed.

"Another serious objection to Advisory Councils is that they would do away with the reliance and confidence of the people in the impartiality and justice of the Collector, which at present exists. The Members of such a Council, apart from possibly having their own interests, might be liable to outside influence; and whether such Council influenced the Collector or not in his action, it would always be believed by ignorant persons that it did so, and that his actions were liable to be affected by outside influence.

"There is also the possibility of opposition of the Advisory Council on personal, or interested, or party, or other special grounds, which will lessen the Collector's authority, weaken his action, and have a most injurious effect on his authority and on the respect which it is necessary that his orders should carry in the district.

"Another important objection to the proposed Councils is that it will create divided responsibility; as the Collector will feel that he has the advice of the Council to plead in defence of his actions. It is most important, I venture to say, for efficient district administration that the District officer should feel that he is entirely responsible to Government for all his acts.

"If the functions of these Councils are to be advisory only, the necessity for them does not exist, as the Collector has at present the recognised representatives whom he can, and does, consult when occasion arises, the Members of the Municipal Committees, and of the District and Local Boards. He can also consult the leaders or representatives of any section of the community, or of any particular locality, if any special or local question arises in which he feels that their advice would be of assistance.

"An argument that is put forward in favour of the proposed Councils is that they will lead to continuity of administration and that at present a Collector takes charge of his district without any knowledge of it, and it takes him at least a year to become acquainted with it. This argument, however, loses the greater part of its force from the fact that a District officer when making over charge to his successor has to leave a note of all special matters of the district administration. Many of the most important of which are of a confidential nature, whose place could never, be supplied by the continuity of an Advisory Council. There are also in Bihar and Orissa and in Bengal most complete District Gazetteers, which give the Collector full information of the conditions of the district. I admit that it takes a new Collector some time to get to know his district personally. But the knowledge that is essential, the personal knowledge at first hand, comes, not from consulting an Advisory Council, but from his first touring season in the district.

"Lastly, even if Advisory Councils would be of assistance to the Collector in his executive duties, or would lead to greater efficiency in their discharge which, as I have shown, is not the case, it would not be possible without making the Council of unweildly size to create a Committee which would be able to give the Collector advice of any value on the many different subjects of administration and the many different purely local questions, with which he has to deal. The Hon'ble Mr. Arthur has shown us how very diverse duties are.

"For these reasons, I must oppose the Resolution for the constitution of Advisory Councils."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis:—"Sir, my humble experience points to the conclusion that, as a matter of principle, the recommendation embodied in the first of the three clauses of the Resolution is good, and should be supported. But it must at the same time be recognised that the claim or fitness of a particular local body to have a non-official chairman must be determined upon the merits. Local circumstances play an important part, and it is difficult to lay down an inflexible rule. Broadly speaking, sufficiency of competent men and absence of faction premised, direct official connection with the boards should be withdrawn, and supervision, if any, I mean official supervision, should be exercised from without and not from within. This condition is fulfilled in the case of District Councils at important centres in the Central Provinces, where public-spirited and capable non-officials are found in decent numbers.

" Chairmen of District Councils at those places may therefore be recruited with advantage from non-official members. I am sorry I cannot agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Abbott in his wholesale condemnation this morning of non-official chairmen of local bodies in this country. Councils that have non-official chairmen in the Central Provinces have justified the confidence reposed in them by Government. It follows that in rural areas the absence of the favourable condition mentioned above makes experiment in the desired direction difficult. Local Boards, which correspond, I believe, with the sub-District Boards mentioned in Mr. Dutt's recommendation, must therefore continue under official control. I here speak of the Central Provinces only. I am not competent to offer an opinion about the local conditions in other Provinces. As far as I can see, the dispute is not at all about the principle. The Government policy has all along been to encourage and develop local self-government on the suggested lines, but expansion is necessarily a process of slow evolution, and its success depends to a large extent upon co-operation between officials and the local bodies.

" I cannot accord the same amount of support to the second recommendation about Advisory Councils, though I have the highest respect for the memory and opinions of the late lamented Mr. Romesh Chandra Dutt whose idea it was. I have more than once expressed the conviction that they should not be associated with district administration. Both before the Decentralization Commission and in this Council I have maintained that position. My views on the point remain unchanged. The District Officer would no doubt be well advised to seek the advice of prominent non-official gentlemen on special occasions, but this he does already. More than this will not be sound policy in my opinion. With due deference to what has been said this morning by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Banerjee, I still think that division of responsibility in district administration has its risks which had better be avoided. Divisional Commissioners, who are generally officers of mature experience with a sufficiently large charge, may have Advisory Councils. The material for such Councils is ampler in their case and the risks of mistakes are less, especially because the consultation will ordinarily be about general lines of policy; but here too I would not make such opinion binding on the Commissioners. The responsibility must in all these executive matters remain undivided. There are emergencies, as pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh, when it is necessary that District officers should take immediate action, and it is undesirable in the public interest that their decision and action on such occasions should be fettered or circumscribed in the manner suggested in the Resolution.

" On the third head I have very little to say. When concerted action among several scattered units becomes desirable, it is obviously advantageous to have a sort of joint board for particular purposes. The principle has been followed in the Central Provinces, and we have for each Division one Local Fund Engineer, i.e., an officer for a number of districts. The system initiated by the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock, as Chief Commissioner, has worked well. It is economical and prevents waste. In the present complex administration, efficient and economical arrangements have a paramount interest for us. Joint action in selected spheres has great possibilities for good. But the main thing is to find out from experience the lines where such action among the local bodies can be taken. I support this principle too. It must, however, be clearly understood that in all such matters the local administration should before it introduces any such reforms, ascertain the extent to which these reforms are necessary and desirable in view of the economic development, of civic morality and of intellectual culture of the people committed to its charge."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali Khan :—"Sir, while I appreciate the motive that prompted the speeches of the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh, I am still of opinion that Advisory Councils in selected areas, if formed, cannot fail to be helpful to the Magistrate-Collector. Such Councils, while not interfering with his executive functions, may offer him valuable suggestions and thus help him to solve more successfully several complicated questions affecting district administration.

"In describing the functions of a Collector the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur seemed to have very nearly exhausted the catalogue of human activities. It is for the very same reason, viz., that a Collector has too numerous functions that an Advisory Council is suggested as a helpful course."

The Hon'ble Sardar Daljit Singh :—"After the speeches I have heard, I am inclined not to give my silent vote against the appointment of Advisory Councils for Collectors. Such restriction of the powers of a responsible officer like the Collector is sure to create many difficulties in good administration in the country. Private responsibility in the matter of district administration is likely to give trouble where there is so much party spirit."

The Hon'ble Raja Kushal Pal Singh :—"Sir, in the United Provinces, the Magistrate is not exofficio Chairman. The District Board regularly goes through the formality of electing its own Chairman, and may, if it chooses, elect a non-official gentleman, but in practice the office of Chairman is always held by the Magistrate and the Government has not yet thought advisable to permit election of any other person. The District Magistrate being the Chief Executive officer of the Government in the district, it follows that his election as the head of the District Board introduces Government control from within rather than from without. There is a general feeling in the United Provinces that District Boards have practically become a department of the Government administration, that their work is done by an official element within the boards themselves and that their proceedings are subject to excessive outside control. In my humble opinion in all these districts where suitable non-officials are available and special obstacles do not exist, they should be allowed to be elected as Chairmen. Even if it is thought necessary that in the present circumstances the Magistrate should remain Chairman of the District Board, I think that the Government of India should urge upon the Local Governments the desirability of giving effect to the following recommendation of the Royal Commission upon Decentralization in India :—

At the same time the Collector-president should not arbitrarily over-ride the opinions of others, but should be a sympathetic Chairman, and should bear in mind that not the least important of his functions is to assist in the political education of the members.

In paragraph 534 the Royal Commission upon Decentralization in India say,—

We consider that the District Boards, which include leading officials of the district as well as representative non-officials, afford a convenient instrument for furnishing advice to the Collector upon matters which, although not included in their administrative sphere, affect the district generally, or important portions of its area or people. We understand that some Collectors do already make use of their district boards in this way; but we should like this practice extended.

In the footnote it is mentioned that Mr. Meyer, now the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer, would like to see it made general. The above recommendation of the Decentralization Commission, especially that of our distinguished Finance Member, will be a step forward in the direction of co-operation between officials and non-officials, which is greatly to be desired. In support of this recommendation I rely on the opinion expressed by the Hon'ble the Home Member in opposing a similar resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale.

" He said—

There is nothing that surprises me so much in all the speeches that I have heard as the apparent contempt with which the speakers have referred to such bodies as District Boards and the members of the District Boards and Municipalities. "

The Hon'ble Maharaja Ranajit Sinha of Nashipur:— " Sir, with your permission, I will take up item by item, the Resolution which my Hon'ble friend on my right has just now moved. In the first part of his Resolution he says that the Presidents of district and sub-district boards should be elected. My experience in this respect is limited to Bengal, where the sub-district boards which are known by the name of local boards have got the privilege of electing their own Chairman, and in the majority of cases they do elect one of their number as Chairman.

" As regards the district boards I should like that the franchise may also be extended, but the difficulty is that the Chairman of a district board has not only to preside at the meetings of the board and to look after the office duties, but he has also to make tours throughout the district in looking after the roads, bridges, pounds, and sanitary and educational wants of the different local boards situated within his district; and so it will not be possible in every district to get a suitable man among the non-official gentlemen who will be able to devote their time and energy to do the duties which the chairman of a district board has to perform now-a-days. But, Sir, I think an experiment might be made in some of the advanced districts where suitable persons can be had who may be willing to undertake such duties. But, Sir, I think that the meetings of the district board should not be presided over by the Magistrate of the district. In cases where the Chairman is the Magistrate, I think the meetings should be presided over by the Vice-Chairman of the district board. The members would then be able to discuss matters much more freely than they can do so at present out of regard and respect for the head of their district, which makes them reluctant to contradict or overrule him in many matters in which he goes opposite to their views.

" As regards the Advisory Councils for which my Hon'ble friend has asked, he has not said in his speech whether he wants to vest these Advisory Councils with any statutory powers. I am not one, Sir, who can recommend that the Magistrate should be hampered in his duties by the creation of Advisory Councils with some statutory powers so as to overrule him in his discretion in any administrative matter. But if the Advisory Councils are not vested with any statutory powers, I think those bodies would be quite useless, because they would not be able to compel the Magistrate to accept their views, though of course it is desirable that the Magistrate should have some chosen advisers whom he may consult as regards important matters of administration. It is said that district boards are equivalent to Advisory Councils in some places. My friend the Hon'ble Raja Kushal Pal Singh has also said so. But as far as my experience goes as regards Bengal, in Murshidabad district, where I had been a member of the district board for upwards of 15 years, I never found a single instance in which the Magistrate consulted any member of the district board as regards any administrative matter. Still, I am not in favour of hampering the work of the Magistrate and Collector by creating any council which may have any power to overrule him or to fetter his discretion in the administrative functions which he has to perform.

" As regards the third part of the Resolution, I have no objection to Local Government boards being formed in each province for exercising control over rural boards and municipalities; because now-a-days I think sanitation forms an important part of the programme of municipal and rural areas, and it is necessary that there should be a board to supervise the work in those respects."

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Mr. Wynch.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Wynch:—"Sir, when I first read this Resolution I was inclined to view it very much in the same light as the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur, who has, it seems to me, very fully exposed the impracticability of associating an advisory council with the Collector to assist him in the performance of his ordinary every-day executive duties

"But as I listened to the Hon'ble Mover's speech it seemed to me that he did not advocate quite such a close association of the Council with the Collector as all that. I understood him to say that the scope of the advisory council's functions should be prescribed by Government. The only instance he gave us in illustration of his proposition, indicating its utility, was that such councils would have been of immense use to Collectors in Bengal at the time of the partition of that province.

"Well, Sir, taking this view of the functions of the advisory councils, I must say that I do not see any need for them. In Madras we have District associations, sometimes Taluk associations, District and Provincial conferences, and the Legislative Council, to say nothing of the Press, and it does not seem to me that there is any necessity to add to all these sources of information as to the wants and wishes of the people by the appointment of advisory councils. If the opinion of these councils is to be taken only on questions of such widespread interest and importance as, say, the partition of a province—or possibly, the separation of judicial and executive functions, or the enlargement of the Legislative Councils, then I am afraid the occasions on which they will be convened will not be very frequent. As private Secretary to His Excellency the Governor of Madras for five years, I had the unique opportunity of learning something of the wants and wishes of the people of that province from one end of it to the other as expressed in addresses presented by Municipal Councils, District Boards, District Associations, deputations of ryots, Planters, and local associations of all sorts and kinds; and speaking from that experience I should say that the most striking feature of those representations was, if I may use the term without any disparagement, the extremely parochial nature of the requests made.

"Now that is precisely my own experience as a Collector and District Officer. The matters affecting the interests of the people, outside the ordinary every-day routine of administration are such questions as irrigation projects, railway projects, Forest grievances, town-planning schemes, schemes for improving congested areas, sanitation and water supply. Now with regard to these the people on the spot are consulted as a matter of course and their wishes ascertained as far as possible, and I cannot see what possible advantage an advisory council would be to a Collector in such cases, even if, as suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee in the first part of his Resolution, the Collector is to be divorced from the District Board. In such a case the Collector, I take it, would prefer to work with and through the District Board in dealing with questions coming within the sphere of that body and in the same way with regard to Municipal Councils and so forth, rather than with an outside irresponsible body such as an Advisory Council.

"There is only one other point that I wish to touch on in the Hon'ble Mover's speech, and that is, the statement which he makes on the authority of the Decentralization Commission that Collectors now-a-days are so immersed in work, and so ignorant of the vernacular, as to be out of touch with the people of their Districts.

"I think that this statement is being pressed a great deal too far, and in support of the protest made by the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur, I should like to refer the Council for a moment to the proceedings of a debate in the Madras Legislative Council which took place last November. A resolution was moved by a non-official member that 'This Council recommends that the Governor in Council may be pleased to issue instructions that every District Collector do hold a conference of the leading ryots of his district in the principal town of the district in the beginning of each official year, etc.' In moving that resolution the Hon'ble non-official member said that 'the

[Mr. Wynch; Rai Sri Ram Bahadur.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

Collector of a district now-a-days is so fully occupied over his daily official routine of work that he finds it hard to spare time to go about and mix with his ryots, to learn first-hand direct from the ryot what his needs and wants are.' And other speakers followed in much the same strain. The Chief Secretary the Hon'ble Mr Horne in reply said: 'It seems to be an accepted article of belief, conventional belief, that the modern district officer is a mere clerk, a glorified file-shifter, who is tied to his table and so immersed in a sea of papers that he never goes out into the district, never sees things for himself, but sees everything through the eyes of interested subordinates and cannot be approached by the ryots. Now, Sir, that is not the case. I have been a district officer myself for most of my service and have travelled about the district of this Presidency for more than thirty years.' He then went on to twit one Hon'ble Member who had supported the resolution for forgetting the lessons that he had learnt when he served on the Forest Committee which travelled over a considerable portion of the Presidency. He said—

It is within my recollection that my Hon'ble friend when brought into contact with district officers doing district work, could hardly refrain from expressing his almost pathetic astonishment at finding that his beliefs were wrong and that these officers were not secluded behind a cordon of peons and orderlies; that they moved about in the villages alone and unattended; that they were careful to see things for themselves; that they were not instructed by interested subordinates; that any one who wished to speak to them could do so; and that they were not entirely ignorant of the vernaculars.

"A non-official member who followed admitted that there was a good deal of misapprehension on the point and that too much had been made about district officers not knowing or understanding the wants of the people. What the Hon'ble Member did plead for was that there should be more latitude allowed to Collectors so as to, make the Government more personal.

"Now, this ideal, which I may say is the tradition handed down in Madras from the days of Sir Thomas Munro, whose minutes were quoted in the course of the debate I have referred to, seems to be totally incompatible with the ideal of advisory councils, if, as inevitably would happen, their functions were to be extended, as the resolution in fact suggests they should be, to associate with the Collector in the administration of his ordinary every-day executive functions."

The Hon'ble Rai Sri Ram Bahadur:—"I rise, Sir, to support the Resolution though not in its entirety. The first portion of the resolution relates to the election of Presidents of District Boards and sub-district Boards. I know that the Decentralization Commission has not recommended this step; but that Report was written in 1909, and it was based on evidence which had been taken in the year previous; so that, more than 6 years have now passed, and as the Hon'ble Mover of the resolution has said, India is advancing and the times in which we are moving are different from what they were six or seven years ago. I support the resolution to this length, that though not in the province as a whole but at least in selected districts of the province the experiment should be tried, and non-official persons should be allowed to be nominated or elected as chairmen of the District Boards. There was a time, Sir, when it was apprehended that if a district was to be placed under the sole charge of an Indian, difficulties might arise, but experience has shown that it is not so, and the districts under Indians are as ably administered as districts under Europeans. Therefore, Sir, as I have already said the time has come when there should be a relaxation made in the rule and the expression of opinion which was made by the Decentralization Commission should not be adhered to.

'Sir, I take up the second part of the Resolution, which is that Advisory Councils be formed to help the Collectors of Districts in the discharge of their executive duties. The Hon'ble Mr. Arthur and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh have given a formidable schedule of the duties which are preformed by the Collector of a district; but, as I understand the wording of the resolution, and as the

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Rai Sri Ram Bahadur; Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar; Major Blakeway.]

Hon'ble Mr. Wynch has said just now, the Hon'ble Mover simply asks for advisory councils. He does not mean that in any matter brought before the members of the council, the Collector should be bound to follow their advice; all that the resolution asks for is that a council of this sort may be started, and if the advice of the members be sound and the Collectors find that it is worth listening to, he may follow their advice; it does not mean that any advice that the members give should, as a matter of course, be accepted. I can give, Sir, two instances from the United Provinces, in which the principle has been given effect to. That far-seeing statesman, Sir John Hewett, our retired Lieutenant-Governor, has done two things in this respect, one by statute and the other by standing orders. By statute he has embodied in the Court of Wards Act, which was passed in the year 1912, a provision that each district officer should have a district advisory committee to advise him in Court of Wards matters. The rules lay down that it is not incumbent on him to follow the advice; but it will place the Collector, who is exofficio in charge of the Court of Wards, in a position to gauge the feeling of the public in regard to matters on which the advice is sought, these committees have been constituted, and they are working in consonance with the district officer. The second measure which was introduced by Sir John Hewett in the standing orders issued by him was that divisional conferences should be called in the United Provinces. The Commissioner of a division calls together a select number of people from his division, and asks their advice on points which are of public importance; and opportunity is also given to the gentlemen so assembled to express their views and to propose any measure that they consider to be for the welfare of the people. These are the ways in which the advisory councils can be formed.

"As regards the third point, Sir, so far as the United Provinces are concerned, I do not think there is any necessity for the establishment of a Local Government Board there. We have a Sanitary Board in the United Provinces on which there are non-official members also; and so far as matters of sanitation and cognate subjects are concerned, the Board does discharge its duty properly, and the non-official members are in a position to put before the Board the views which are entertained by the people of those provinces. Therefore, Sir, I support the Resolution only so far as the principle of the formation of advisory councils is concerned. As regards the third point, there is no necessaty for a Local Government Board in my province."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar :—"Sir, I beg leave to support this Resolution. It may be contended on behalf of the Government that these recommendations are based on the opinions of a single member of the Royal Commission and not the unanimous opinion of the Commissioners. Considering, however, the great weight that attaches to the considered and mature opinions of the late Mr. R. C. Dutt, I think his opinions are well worth acceptance by the Government of India. Of special importance are the recommendations for the formation of Advisory Councils to help the Magistrate-Collector in the discharge of his duties without hampering his executive power and a Local Government Board in each province for exercising control over rural boards and municipalities. It is the laudable desire of the Government to bring the administration into close touch with the people and this object can be well served by the creation of Advisory Councils to help the Magistrate-Collector in the discharge of his duties. The next proposal for the formation of a Local Government Board has obvious advantages, which will be apparent to the Government; and it is not necessary that I should take up the time of the Council by attempting to labour the point."

The Hon'ble Major Blakeway :—"Sir, the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee's interesting Resolution, like his last resolution, reflects his desire to advance the cause of self-government in India, but I should like to venture a few criticisms on clauses (a) and (b) regarding the election of the Presidents of Rural Boards and the appointment of Advisory Councils for Collectors in the light of my own experience of district administration.

"So widely do the degrees of progress towards complete local self-government differ in the various provinces of India that whereas in the Central Provinces proper the President of the District Board is elected and is generally a non-official and whereas in those Provinces, also, ⅔rds of the members are elected by Tahsil Boards and representatives of mercantile classes and professions, in the North-West Frontier Province, which I have the honour to represent on this Council, the Deputy Commissioner (corresponding to the Collector of the District in a Regulation Province) is ex officio President and the District Board members are all nominated. Between these two extremes in provincial methods lie almost all the variations which are possible in the systems of election and nomination of the President and Members of Rural Boards. But the Hon'ble Mover wishes to start removing the official heads of these offending bodies in a spirit reminding me of the queen in a certain well known and popular story book whose favourite solution of any little difficulty found expression in the order.—'Off with his head,' regardless of the circumstances of her victim's case or his possible excuses. On behalf of my Province I may say that we cavil in no way at the policy enunciated in Home Department Resolution of the 18th May, 1882, which was issued by Lord Ripon's Government and has been freely quoted to-day to the effect that the extension of local self-government then inaugurated was primarily not to reform administration, but to serve as an instrument of political and popular education. Our acceptance of this policy is evinced by the fact that the extension of the elective principle to a proportion of the members of our Municipalities is at the present moment under consideration. But in the case of our rural communities, I would assure the Hon'ble Mover that at their stage of development they are not prepared for the advance which he would like to see made and has embodied in a Resolution of so general and sweeping a character as that now before the Council.

"As regards the actual merits or demerits of the proposal to substitute elected for nominated or ex officio Presidents, I might ask the Council to rely on the fact that after an exhaustive examination of the subject the Decentralization Commission, with the exception of the late Mr. Dutt, recorded their opinions against this proposal as also against the other proposals embodied in the Resolution. But, since Hon'ble Members are of course at liberty to form their own conclusions, in place of making this appeal to them to accept the opinions of another body however authoritative, I would urge them to consider the advantage, where the system of District Boards and official Presidents already exists, of continuing to associate the District officer, who can be trusted to have the interests of his district at heart, with the leading men of the neighbourhood in the friendly discussion of local projects connected with roads, education, medical relief, sanitation, etc If the election of Presidents were generally introduced, to require the Collector to submit himself to election would depreciate his authority, as pointed out by the Commission, and in most cases the measure would of course imply that the Collector would vacate his seat. In this matter, I do not lay undue stress on the loss to the District Board of his administrative experience. If we accept the fact that local self-government is to be educative we can make up our minds to some administrative drawbacks. But what I wish to emphasize is, that even in those localities where competent Presidents may be forthcoming, this joint association of the District Officer and the principal residents in work for the public welfare is in itself a definite and very real political asset in the administration of the country. It brings together the Collector and the leaders of the people, it enables the Collector to some extent to sound popular opinion on matters not directly connected with District Board proceedings, and provides him with a convenient opportunity, should necessity arise, of explaining measures with regard to which misapprehensions may have occurred on the part of the public. All this is sacrificed if the Collector be separated from the Board, and

I suggest that the adoption of such a measure would furnish immediate ground for the charge, which, with or without justification, is frequently levelled against Government regarding the growing aloofness and detachment of the administration. In a lesser degree these remarks must apply also mutatis mutandis to Sub-district Boards, though of these I cannot claim personal experience

"Now, Sir, coming to clause (b) of the Resolution regarding the appointment of an Advisory Council to the Collector, a matter which has been debated before in this Council, I dare say that it may be argued, as indeed it has been argued by the Hon'ble Mover, that the difficulty, which I have suggested as being involved in the disassociation of the Collector from the Presidentship of the District Board will be met by giving him this Advisory Council. The Collector, it can be urged, will thereby be enabled to meet the local men of importance and to talk over current topics with them. He will be kept in touch with local opinion, while they will be enlightened regarding the motives of Government. But at the best I can only describe the creation in a district of an additional Committee of Advice in such circumstances as a cumbrous administrative expedient. I fail to see the advantage of the formation of another local assembly when a District Board and one or more Municipalities already exist, and when moreover the very members of this proposed Advisory Council would almost certainly be members of one or other of the existing local bodies, as these bodies are always composed of the men whose social position or personal talents have raised them above their fellows. Another argument against an Advisory Council, though, as this has been dealt with by the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh, I need not labour it, is that it is very possible that the existence of official advisers, whether or not the Collector might be at liberty to dissent from their advice, wou'd lessen the sense of responsibility of a district officer for official acts performed in accordance with their recommendations, a consummation which would be most undesirable. If, Sir, you will pardon a remark, which verges on a platitude, I would say that there is nothing so detrimental to good administration as an elusive responsibility.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar referred, during the debate on the last Resolution, to a defect in Lord North's Governing Constitution of 1773, namely, its excessive centralization, of which the correction was undertaken by the Indian Councils Act of 1861. But, as regards division of responsibility, I should like in support of my own case to quote the estimate of the chief cause of the failure of that Governing Constitution, which is given in the work "British Dominion in India" by that distinguished officer and litterateur, Sir Alfred Lyall. I now have this volume under my hand. Sir Alfred Lyall, at page 179, remarks that,—'It is easy now to perceive that this ill-constructed governing machinery, which stands towards our latest systems in the same relation as does the earliest traction engine to the present locomotive, contravened some primary principles of administrative mechanics,' and goes on to say—'But in 1773 the chief executive authority at Calcutta was vested in a majority of the Council—the Governor General having only a casting vote—so that in a Government, where promptitude and unity of action were all important, every order was arguable; and where opinions differed, no measure passed without violent controversy'.

"The Hon'ble Mover has not favoured us with any information as to how he would like his scheme to work in practice, so I do not claim a parallel between his Advisory Council and the Governing Constitution in the practical details of his scheme, whatever they may be. I think, however, that the picture of that lamentable controversy within a Council, given us by Sir Alfred Lyall, in consequence of an ill-conceived measure, should be kept constantly before us.

"But these objections—the multiplication of local bodies and the dispersion of responsibility—might be accepted perhaps, supposing that a Collector could be certain of receiving the best advice from an Advisory Council, and that this advice could be obtained by him in no other way. It is, however, when we come to examine this aspect of the matter, I fear, that the Hon'ble Mover's case proves weakest. It is impossible to conceive a state of affairs where a Collector would not invariably seek and obtain the opinions of his Indian visitors likely to be of value to him and these private interviews would still remain open to him even if he were debarred from the Presidentship of the District Board or Municipality and, pace the Hon'ble Maharaja Ranajit Sinha, from opportunities of initiating informal discussions at meetings of these bodies on matters of general interest after disposal of the regular agenda. Again, as the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur has pointed out, why should a Collector be limited to certain official advisers even if he is free to accept or reject their advice? Surely he should not only be allowed but encouraged to get the very best and most instructed expert advice on every one of the very numerous subjects which come up for decision in district administration. wherever and however that advice is obtainable. The whole district should be open to him for the purpose. I can imagine that as regards a question of crops or irrigation a peasant working in a field outside the Collector's gate might be a most competent adviser, that no one would be so well suited to voice the objections to a tax on hawkers as an itinerant sweetmeat seller. and that a master in a Primary School might have valuable notions on the subject of the co-operation of village headmen for the extension of education, while I am certain that many a prisoner's remarks on the subject of jail diet would be well worth hearing. even if they could not be quoted. I mention these few instances to show the diversity of advice needed by the Collector, the possibility of his obtaining it on occasion from the lowliest members of society with whom, so far as my own Province is concerned, he would certainly be able to converse, and the impossibility of getting together a body of competent men whom he could consult with confidence on every occasion. It would be an awkward situation, also, both for the Advisory Council and the Collector, though I have no desire to lay especial stress on this possibility, should some measure under discussion be entirely opposed to the personal interests of all or most of the Councillors.

"In these circumstances, Sir, to sum up my view of the case, the proceedings of an officially constituted body, with the functions advocated by the Hon'ble Mover, would inevitably tend very soon to become purely formal, and his Advisory Council would be of no more practical use in the every-day work of a district officer than a ceremonial Durbar. Its drawbacks as a consultative body, therefore, appear to me to be even greater than its administrative disadvantages, which I have already discussed, and on the grounds stated, I must oppose the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Srijut Ghanasyam Barua:—"I consider the first part of this three-headed Resolution to be of the greatest importance, and I have already expressed my views as to the part that the scheme of local self-Government is expected to play in the development of the constitutional ideas of the Empire. It is my earnest conviction that if real and fairly rapid development of the scheme of local self-Government among the bulk of the people is aimed at, it should be made a cardinal principle that the president of all Local Boards and all Municipalities should be an elected non-official, the District and Sub-divisional officers always standing aloof from the Chairmanship and guiding the Boards from without. In the Resolution of the Government of India of 1882 it was made perspicuously clear how the presence of the head of the District or Sub-division even as a member of these Boards would operate as a drawback to the free ventilation of opinion and the real education of the people. Indian opinion has repeated itself again and again that that is the true view of the case. Lord Morley declared himself in perfect accord with that view and approved the arguments on this head in unmistakeable terms only a few months before the publication of the Report of the Royal Commission upon Decentralization in India.

"It is extremely disappointing to find, Sir, that the Royal Commission in spite of all this came to a different conclusion with regard to the Chairmanship of District and Sub-district Boards and put the Indian Member of the Commission (who must have himself filled the offices of the District and the Sub-divisional officer during his career of service) to the necessity of recording the note of dissent in question. One may reasonably suspect that their decision was influenced by official opinion, and that that opinion was weighed by considerations of power. But even for power as the Resolution of 1882 pointed out Lord Ripon's scheme affords an ample and higher field if only it be taken and worked in the right spirit. It is certainly more honourable to be an Examiner than a teacher, and to be a teacher than a class mate of superior parts. That was the sort of better power that the District officers were asked to aspire for; and unless it be incapacity that should deter them from looking for it there is little reason to despise it. 'It really opens to them,' the resolution set forth, 'a fairer field for the exercise of administrative tact and directive energy.' They should really be proud of thinking themselves above the Boards by taking the position of teachers and guides for them, without being one of their members however useful his position as such might be for purposes of efficiency.

"With the greatest deference to that august body, I venture to submit that the reasons advanced by the Royal Commission in support of their conclusions do not appear to be quite convincing. To make myself clear I crave the indulgence of the Council to allow me to go into the issues raised a little in detail.

"(1) Their first argument is that though a quarter of a century had passed since the pronouncement of Lord Ripon's Government the position that rural boards should elect non-official Presidents was, as regards district boards, reached only in the Central Provinces.

"Now, Sir, analysed with only a little care, this argument results not in favor but against the conclusion drawn, namely, that in the present circumstances the Collector should be the president of the district boards. The Resolution of 1882 distinctly pointed out that if success was to be achieved the people themselves were to be entrusted with real power and real responsibilities; that where that had been done in the past, results were always encouraging. The Resolution insisted that even if there were failures and disappointments in some cases,—and such were only reasonable to expect—the policy was to be earnestly pursued with temporary checks and suspensions and good results were bound to follow. Now why has the position been reached in the Central Provinces and not elsewhere? It cannot with any seriousness be argued that the Central Provinces are superior to Provinces like Bengal, Bombay, Madras or even the United Provinces in either education or instincts of self-government. Then why have the Central Provinces attained the object and the others not? The only answer that forces itself upon us is that Lord Ripon's policy was pursued there and that by sincerely following it even a second grade province, like the Central Provinces, have come up to a good standard of efficiency. It would have been a good argument if the Commission could shew that repeated attempts were made with elected non-official chairmen in such and such places but they always failed. But the fact relied upon by them only proves that the other Provinces have not been given a fair chance in spite of the declared intentions of the Government of India and the Secretary of State. Mere provision in the Act is nothing, unless the official position is voluntarily given up.

"Sir, there are more reasons than one why Boards in which the Chief District official plays a direct part have not been able to elect non-official chairmen although almost all the Local Self-Government Acts provide for such election. The first and foremost reason is given by the Commission itself, i.e., that when the District or Sub-divisional officer stands as a candidate, his defeat by a rival candidate would impair his authority in the district The result is that neither a rival candidate is easily available nor a sufficient number of members to support one, if one had the boldness to come forward. Indeed few men will venture to offend him by so impairing his authority.

[Srijut Ghanasyam Barua.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

"Secondly, a feeling is general that there is no possibility of free action in these Boards and that a member must be prepared either to automatically endorse the proposals of the official Chairman or to expose themselves to the risk of unpleasantness. The consequence is that many capable and energetic men keep aloof and consider it better wisdom to do so.

"Thirdly.—There is, as far as I know, no suitable provision for the recoupment of expenses of travelling. A Chairman will no doubt have to work, if he works properly, at some sacrifice to his income and profession. That much may be set against his public spirit. But always to spend from his own pocket even out of public spirit is too much to expect or justify. We do not expect that even from the Members of this Council or of the Parliament.

"(2) The second ground taken is that to remove the Collector from the post would be to dissociate him from the general interests of the district and instructed public opinion in some local matters and that he will be converted to a mere tax-gatherer and repressor of crime. Although the importance of these two powers is sought to be minimised, I don't think they are small powers by themselves. But I am glad that the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur and the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh have given a long list of powers with which district officials may well afford to remain satisfied and think they should be able to do without the small power of being the Chairman of the Local Board. The idea really is not to dissociate him at all. He is desired only to look to them from outside the Board, and if the Board is amiss in any matter he should set it right by check, remonstrance and guidance. As a matter of fact local men will know better to deal with these interests and instructed public opinion in these matters will come more freely through and to the members of the Board than to the official head of the place, the members of the Board being necessarily more easily accessible.

"(3) The third point taken is that the Chairman of the District Board should be a man of administrative experience. I submit that this experience may be acquired by the non-official chairman as the officials do. If necessary, some preliminary qualifying tests may also be imposed. This argument does not, I may say by the way, apply to Assam where there are no District Boards, all sub-divisional Boards being independent.

"(4) Fourthly, it is said that general knowledge of the district and constant travelling is necessary. This requires, as I have said, only an impetus in the shape of travelling allowance.

"(5) Fifthly, they say that as the final decision rests with the collective body which will be the elite of the district, there should be no reason to fear that the presence of the Collector will prevent free ventilation of opinion. But that this is not the case has been repeatedly said by all men capable of giving an opinion. It is also proved on their own premises. In paragraph 7.4 they say 'the preponderance of non-official opinion especially in Madras, the two Bengals and the Central Provinces, is in favour of an elected non-official president'. This proves two things, first that in the Central Provinces where there are non-official presidents, they have been appreciated and are preferred to officials; (2) that where this is not the case—as in Madras and Bengal—it is the impotency of the members in the presence of the official Chairmen that has stood in the way of their having non-official Chairmen.

"(6) Lastly, they say that it is unfortunate that the Collector should be looked upon as an outside authority instead of as a necessary complement to the board. The question really is not of authority or efficiency, but of the best mode of teaching the people a higher civic life. The Collector's guidance is admitted to be necessary and he is desired to exercise all his directive energy to properly watch and train them up. But real popular education being found to be interfered with by his presence in the board, he is desired to exercise his power from without. It has been admitted that Collectors appeared to have in some instances been in the habit of ruling rather than guiding. Notwithstanding this, they express a hope that, though this is unfortunate, it should not be difficult to make sympathetic Chairmen of all Collectors in time. This hope, Sir, has been always expressed, from the days of Lord Ripon at least, if not earlier; but naturally enough expressed in vain ; for it is really a matter of individual tendencies of men, and such tendencies cling to them in spite of advice or sermon. I do not think sympathetic is the proper word at all. Perhaps every officer is sympathetic in his own way, and he has not much reason to be otherwise ; but it is the manner in which that sympathy is used and expressed which really matters so much. The question is whether he has always the capacity to express it in a way suitable to train up the members and whether they have the capacity to be free in their discussions when there is a difference of opinion with him ; also whether, when the Collector is ready at hand to give the best decisions in all matters, it is possible for the members to have that practical training which would result from independent initiatives of their own, which alone can be real tests of education and experience. On the whole, Sir, this is a delicate position which deserves to be abandoned, when it is admitted that some Collectors have been arbitrary. The moral effect left on the members will naturally be that the impressions made by one arbitrary Chairman will be carried to many others who are not arbitrary.

"I submit it, Sir, as my sincere and earnest conviction that the cause of both the Government and the people cannot, in the present stage of India's development, be better served than by educating the people as much as possible to a higher level of civic life ; and for the bulk of the educated class—the class which deserves the greatest attention in the matter—there can be no better field for this than the Local Boards. Intelligent non-official activity in these Boards should therefore be freely encouraged and all possible objections and drawbacks removed.

"With these expanded Councils at the top and the proposed village authorities at the bottom it would be only imprudence not to freely and rapidly develop these intermediate bodies which so intrinsically affect both the top and the bottom.

"If we want good exercise of discretion in elections to the Imperial and Provincial Councils, if we want the village authorities to be properly guided and advised, and if we want to strengthen the faith of the educated classes more and more in the character and ideals of British rule, we should, I think, freely use the District, Sub-District and Municipal Boards to train them up and to develop in them real public spirit and a real sense of public duties and responsibilities.

"We cannot ignore the fact that the English education so long given in our schools and colleges has been doing its work steadily. The younger generation are daily growing up full of advanced ideas with an awakening to higher ideals of public and private life. And unless these ideas and that awakening are properly controlled and guided and diverted from fantastic theories to healthy, practical fields of work, they will always be in danger of being misconceived, wasted or abused or of bursting out in uncongenial lines. I also feel that this popular and political education cannot be real or proper unless the members of these Boards become conscious of their free and responsible existence ; and for this they should have Chairmen whom they can elect or depose at their pleasure and with whom they can have fearless discussion. It is only then that the members will be compelled to be intelligent workers and the Chairmen cautious guides.

"I therefore support the first part of the Resolution.

"With regard to the second part, my experience is with regard to my own Province (and I speak of my own Province only) and I do not think it is at all time for advisory councils for the district officer to be made compulsory. Of course the district officer in some cases may be given the option of having any representative or individual opinion that he wishes to have from the public, but to make it a rule that there shall be district advisory councils whose advice he will have to follow will only, I think, work against the proper administration of the district by the district officer."

The President :—"The Hon'ble Member's time is up."

[Mr. Madhu Sudan Das; The Vice-President.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Madhu Sudan Das:—"Sir, the discussion on the advisory Council which is a part of the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr Banerjee has brought into prominent relief a long and elaborate category of the duties of the Collector. It cannot be denied, nor has anything been said amounting to a denial of the fact, that the duties of the Collector have increased immensely within the last half century.

"If any one here of my Hon'ble Colleagues remembers what a Collector used to be half a century ago, how much he was in touch with the people, and what interest, I should say affectionate interest, he took in the people, I suppose he will join with me in saying that that Collector has disappeared like the Phœnix without leaving even his ashes behind. It is a matter of fact that the ever-increasing demands of an ever-increasing administration upon the time and attention of the Collector have practically driven him to take shelter against public intrusion, against visitors, behind a barricade of red tape, files and papers The number of vernacular languages has increased. It has been considered a libel upon the Civil Service, and expression was given to that feeling by the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur, because it has been remarked in certain quarters that the Collector of the present day does not know the vernacular languages sufficiently well to mix with the people and to know the feelings of the people. There was a time, I remember, when it was proposed to abolish a certain language—the Uriya language—and actually to substitute the Bengali language in its place. Mr. John Beames took up the case I should like any Collector of the present day to see all that he wrote on the subject, and tell me how many Collectors there are now who could handle a subject like that—a linguistic question—in the same masterly way that he did. Not only that but I know of grammars of vernaculars written by Collectors. Where is that Collector now?"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I must ask the Hon'ble Member to keep to the point. The point is that certain action should be taken now, not what Collectors were in the past."

The Hon'ble Mr. Madhu Sudan Das:—"Advisory Councils are not necessary. This fact has been very emphatically remarked by all the official Hon'ble Members who spoke on the subject. If the duties of the Collector have increased, and if the Collector feels it necessary that under the altered state of circumstances he should seek information from a certain body, and the Decentralization Commission say that he can have such information and such advice from the District Boards, I should say that that would be one reason why he should not be President of the District Board. Unfortunately, for some reason or another, the very presence of the Collector seems to have a paralysing effect upon the tongue or some other effect upon the cerebral regions of the members so that they cannot give free expression to their opinions. But the Collector is at liberty to consult that Board without being its Chairman. It has also been brought to the notice of this Council during the discussion that the Presidents of the Local Boards are elected. On the other hand these District Boards send their elected representatives to the Council. And yet the District Boards standing midway between the Provincial Councils and the Local Boards, have not the power of electing their own Chairman. As a matter of fact the Vice-Chairman very often does the duty of the Chairman and, while he actually bears the burden of the work, and the Chairman, the Magistrate gets the credit for it, it is not likely that non-official gentlemen will find sufficient inducement to take up the work. Also in this connection one sees the very reverse of the natural order of things or what one would expect to be the natural order of things. We find that in the Central Provinces they have the privilege of electing their own Chairman and in the United Provinces too they have the same privilege. Considering that the Central Provinces and the United Provinces were always considered behind Bengal, I should have expected that coming from a still less advanced Province, we should have had the advantage of electing our Chairman. But it does not seem that a Province which is less advanced always has the advantage of electing its Chairmen. It seems as if the privilege of electing the Chairman—a privilege of local self-government had been extended to the people in an inverse ratio to their advancement in other respects. The simple reason seems to be, as was mentioned by the Hon'ble Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis that this was introduced by the Hon'ble the Home Member when he was the Chief Commissioner of the Province, and I suppose the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock has not left the reputation of being a very unsympathetic man behind him in the Central Provinces.

"With these remarks I support the first part of the Resolution that the District Boards should have the privilege of electing their Chairman."

The Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar:—"Sir, the Resolution consists of three parts As regards part (a), it is exactly similar in principle to the four divisions of the previous Resolution, and therefore if I at all wish to say anything on the subject it cannot be very different from what I said on the previous Resolution. As regards the previous Resolution I thought the Hon'ble Mover had a very weak case, but as it occasionally happens despite the weakness of his case it derived strength from the weakness of the resistance of the Hon'ble Mr Porter on behalf of Government who, instead of referring him to Local Governments, has given him hopes and said that the matter would be considered. So my opposition become futile. I will say nothing more on that subject, but at the same time I would beg to submit that my objections were not met either by the Hon'ble the Mover or by the Government. Therefore, I am perverse enough to adhere to my previous attitude. I oppose the Resolution, part (a).

"As regards part (c) that a Local Government Board be formed in each province for assisting and exercising control over rural boards and municipalities it is also somewhat an important question; but I am not quite sure whether the Hon'ble Mover means a statutory board or a board appointed by executive order.

"He certainly does not mean a board consisting of honorary members. If he wants a local Government Board of which the members will be paid men, there will arise the question of finance and it will probably have to go before the Secretary of State. I assume that it will have to be done by statute. It is not for me to say—of course I do not profess to understand the operations of the grand machinery of the Government of India at home or here—whether it will have to be done by a Statute of Parliament or by a Statute of the Government of India or by any other means. I therefore say nothing upon it.

"There remains only the second part (b)—that Advisory Councils be formed to help the Magistrate-Collector in the discharge of his executive duties. On this point there has been a very warm and interesting debate. I have followed it with considerable attention. The arguments advanced and the statements marshalling the facts against the proposal were admirably arranged. I fully recognise the difficulties pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur, the Hon'ble Mr. Wynch, and in a more or less degree by the Hon'ble Mr Walsh and others who all could not see any possible advantage in the creation of advisory boards. I listened with great interest to what they said They seem to think that the Indian world will go to ruin if these advisory boards are created and the character, position and prestige of District Officers will be reduced to a cipher, and that whether it was viewed from the point of view of the Collector, of the Government or of the people, there would be no compensatory advantage of any kind. Well, I am sorry to say that it is impossible for these Hon'ble gentlemen to expect agreement with them on the part of non-official members of this Council in the statements they made and in the attitude they have disclosed. In my humble opinion, they would have made their case much stronger if they had put forward the pros and cons of this question, and contrasted the resulting advantages with the resulting disadvantages This question of advisory boards, Sir, is so large that if we were to go into its details we are likely to be confined and lost in our endeavour to find a solution. All that is now proposed is that the principle should be accepted. The nature of the functions of these boards, whether their members should be appointed by nomination or by election or both, in how many places in a district, where they are to meet, at headquarters or elsewhere—these are all matters of detail which cannot be gone into now with advantage. As regards the principle itself, it has been resisted on various grounds. For my part, I think these boards will be in the highest degree useful. I am not one of those who believe that the modern Collector is an inferior being, morally and intellectually, to his predecessor in title and office. It is true that in the good old days Collectors had more time and they were more in touch with the people; but to say that on that account they did better work, or that they were morally and intellectually better men is to lose sight of actual facts. They were very kind, very generous, as a rule; but they were very often guilty of acts of zabardast from which the modern Collector is free. In the interests of the Collectors themselves, advisory boards would be most useful. Now, my Hon'ble friends over there spoke of diminution in prestige and diminution in responsibility if advisory boards wese granted. It is somewhat difficult to examine the nature of the demand made on behalf of prestige, because I myself do not understand what prestige means exactly. My own belief is that real prestige grows where the District Officers are more and more useful in the discharge of their duties and grow more and more popular. Diminution of responsibility there may be, but with diminution of responsibility there will be more popularity, because any odium attaching to measures which he would accept and adopt if he were left alone would now be transferred to the shoulders of the members of the advisory council. To that extent the people would not in future blame the Collector alone but would blame those also whom the Collector consulted. Therefore, with the diminution of responsibility there would be the compensating advantage of diminution of odium, diminution of unpopularity.

"Then, in regard to the next point, and this point has been pressed on various grounds It is said that the Collector has, and will have, access to a lot of people for seeking information. In this matter, you will kindly excuse me for a little plain-speaking. I must say that for various causes intercourse between European district officers and the people of this country is becoming less and less in many places I absolutely decline to go into the question as to whose fault it is to be attributed I am prepared to grant it is owing to our fault for the sake of argument. But the fact is there. Now the fact being there, the next question arises whether it is desirable for the Collector to be guided by the opinions of persons who do find their way to him and speak to him in private. I have known disastrous consequences, and even to the personal misfortunes of particular individuals arising out of these informal private and secret inquiries. Such inquiries, if worth making, should be made in company. What I do claim is that the Collector would be in a far better position to understand the needs of the people if he made his inquiries in public, at least in company. I always attach great importance to inquiries made in company. I should like to place him in company where any inaccurate or biased information or opinion will be immediately corrected, where what one says will be soon public property. I should like at least three or four persons to be with him when he seeks information. From that standpoint, I respectfully submit, an advisory board constituted of some three or more members would be a distinct advantage.

"If we can form a judgment in this matter from the questions put by the Royal Commission on Decentralization, I am inclined to think that they were originally more in favour of advisory boards than not. In a question put to the Hon'ble Mr. Bradley, who was examined in Madras on behalf of the Local Government, they asked:

It is rather difficult for a new man to distinguish between people who can give good advice and people who are really wind-bags or people who advertise and push themselves or look after their own interests only?

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar.]

Mr. Bradley replied :—' That is the reason why I think it would be difficult to appoint an Advisory Council.'

"I echo the suggestion implied that some of the people who now find their way to European rulers will be wind-bags, people who advertise and push themselves or look after their own interests. I do not know who suggested the question to the Royal Commission, but the question is there. And what does Mr. Bradley say? "It is because of the character of these people that I don't want an advisory council."—Not because responsibility will be diminished; not because prestige will be diminished; not because the Collector will have no time to consult them. Then you have another district officer in Madras—the Hon'ble Mr Cardew—who is now the Chief Secretary to Government of Madras. He was questioned on this subject. He says his only objection is that the Collector will have to do his work twice over if he has advisory boards to consult.

Question.—Then the danger of doing work twice may exist under both conditions? (That is whether you have an Advisory Council or not).

Answer.—Yes, but I submit that it is absolutely certain that you must do the work twice when you have to discuss it with a Council.

Question.—Would it not be better to discuss a thing twice than perhaps to dig a tank twice?

Answer.—I see the point; but at the same time I fancy that the number of cases where you would dig your tank twice would be very small.

"That is the evidence of the Hon'ble Mr. Cardew, who is now Chief Secretary, and will presently be a Member of Government of Madras. His objection was delay and not anything like the objection raised here in the debate just now. But the most important authority that I should like to quote is the late lamented Sir Herbert Risley, Member of this Council. I will read a few passages from his evidence.

Question.—Are you in favour of the creation of (a) Advisory, (b) Administrative Councils to assist Divisional District officers?

Answer.—I think there is much to be said in favour of creating Advisory Councils to assist Divisional Commissioners. Such Council would be the natural complement of the Provincial Advisory Councils which it is proposed to constitute; they would give the leading men of a division an interest in public affairs and some insight into the practical difficulties of administration; they would render the extension of the Commissioner's powers more acceptable to the public; and they would furnish that officer with a body of reliable and responsible advisers whose opinion would carry a considerable weight if they were carefully selected. In my opinion the divisional Advisory Councils should consist of not more than six or seven non-officials recommended by the Commissioner and appointed by the Local Government for a period of 5 years, subject to renewal. In making his recommendations the Commissioner would have regard to the desirability of representing the districts forming the division, important classes and interests, but no hard-and-fast rule as to proportionate representation could be laid down, at any rate at present. I do not think it would be desirable until further experience had been acquired of their working to give such Councils powers of administrative control, reserving to the Commissioner the right to reverse or modify their orders at discretion. At starting I should prefer to make them purely advisory in the hope that after the actual system had been in actual opertion for a few years, the free working of advisory methods, unfettered by rigid rules of procedure, would indicate in what directions a further advance could be made. It might be possible for example to make it a condition in certain definite classes of cases that the Commissioner should only exercise the enlarged powers conferred on him with the concurrence of a majority of his Council, and that where the Council did not concur the Commissioner would, if he proposed to carry the matter further, be obliged to refer it for the orders of the Local Government. But, as I have said, I would begin on a purely advisory basis. If relations of mutual confidence are thereby established, as I hope and believe will be the case, the rest will follow of itself. To start with a fixed division of powers will give rise to antagonism and distrust.

"Nothing could have been more moderately said. All that I would say, Sir, is that these Advisory Councils may at first be purely consultative bodies; and I have no objection—although I was once for having these members elected—I have no objection to these members being altogther selected on recommendations made by the Collector or District Officer to begin with. They will, in the beginning, be purely consultative bodies, and I cannot at all see how such a body could hamper the Collector. On the other hand, they would make, as Sir Herbert Risley puts it, the new powers conferred on him more and more acceptable to the public. I know that we do not have Divisional Commissioners throughout the country; in some places there are Divisional Commissioners, and in other places there are no Divisional Commissioners at all; therefore what he says about Divisional Commissioners must, in my opinion, certainly be applied to Collectors, where there are no Divisional Commissioners. The alarm taken by the Hon'ble official members here, Sir, simply proves the transition from the patriarchal and autocratic to the democratic age; and if their argument be pushed to the logical extreme, they would do away with the Parliament in England. I know that in the evidence given before the Royal Commission very many of them, in regard to appellate powers, were against appeals and were for having their own orders final. Therefore I respectfully submit that the alarm raised by the Hon'ble official members here simply shows their own personal and strong convictions quite bonâ fide to and at the same time indicates the transition stage from one-man rule and patriarchal government, from occasional zabardast, to law and system and democracy."

The Hon'ble Mr. Abbott:—"Sir, regarding Advisory Boards, from my experience of Collectors for over 30 years in the United Provinces, I think that they lose no opportunity of encouraging in every possible manner people to come forward with advice. Any one who may doubt this has only to go to the Collector's bungalow in town or in camp in the district, where he will find callers of all classes of people. It will be surprising to find what the Collector knows about the people, and they will tell you that the Collector lost no opportunity of getting all information about the people and the district. Any council as suggested might tie the hands of the Collector to the few. Besides, such a council would not be satisfactory as ably explained by the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur. I am sure I am voicing many of the non-official members here when I beg leave to dissociate ourselves from the words of the Hon'ble Mover to the effect that the district officers are not in touch with the people nor proficient in their languages.—"

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"They are not my words; they are the words of the Decentralization Commission."

The Hon'ble Mr. Abbott:—"It is expressions such as these that give the world wrong and false impressions, helping to disparage the finest service in the world. I regret I am unable to support the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. Pandit:—"Sir, I do not wish at this late hour to take up the time of the Council with any long speech on this Resolution. The first item of the recommendations which are now under discussion is one with regard to presidents of district and sub-district boards; and as the Central Provinces have been referred to by more Hon'ble Members than one as being in the happy position of having the right to elect the chairman of the district board accorded to members of that body, it is necessary to point out, without admitting the correctness of the adjective applied to my province by Hon'ble Mr. Barua from the small province of Assam and other Hon'ble Members, and without entering into a comparison of the province in other respects with other provinces whether belonging to the first, second or third grade, that the system of local self-government was developed much earlier there than in any other province. Even before Lord Ripon's famous resolution of 1882 was issued, Sir John Morris, who was then the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, had already generally introduced popular representation on local fund, municipal and station committees performing work which later on devolved upon the local self-governing bodies; whereas in other provinces election was in practical operation in places which could be counted on the fingers of one hand; and if these bodies have obtained that right, they have fully justified it, as will appear not only from the fact that they have on the district councils two-thirds of their members elected and an elected chairman, but from the verdict which was pronounced upon them in 1913 in Sir William Holderness' Report on Moral and Material Progress. It is stated there 'Only in the Central Provinces was popular representation on the local bodies generally and successfully introduced in 1874 and 1883, and that success still continues.' If the other provinces have also made similar advance and have passed through the same stages of training, I should certainly support the recommendation contained in this Resolution; but on this point I agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar that these questions had better be dealt with in the provincial legislatures, which will be more competent to deal with the exact requirements of their provinces in this respect.

"Sir, the second recommendation is the one round which the fiercest controversy has raged to-day. We have heard from Hon'ble Members who have spoken of the advantages that will accrue from its adoption. Hon'ble Members on the Government side, or rather official Additional Members, have also spoken expressing their opinion with regard to this proposal. The Hon'ble Mr. Arthur drew a harrowing picture of what would happen if the Resolution were accepted. We all realise that the proposition in the very wide terms in which it is couched would not be acceptable to the bulk of Hon'ble Members who are desirous of finding a practical solution of the problem. Everyone will, however, agree that there are several matters in which it is highly desirable that before the district officer takes action he should consult public opinion, and then act on the lines of the policy which has met with general approval. I was a witness before the Decentralization Commission, and in my recommendations I put forward three or four of the objects to which the functions of such advisory councils might be limited. The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale, in pressing on this Council a resolution of a similar character two years ago, put forward a concrete proposal allowing only a limited scope to these advisory councils of the District Officer. I believe the Hon'ble the Home Member also would not be altogether against the creation of some such advisory bodies, not perhaps at this moment, but in course of time; if I have read his opinion furnished to the Decentralization Commission correctly. The Hon'ble the Home Member had been Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, where his experience of non-official public men was, I hope, not altogether disappointing; and where, I gather, it was so far encouraging as to enable him to recommend that in course of time it might be possible to have advisory bodies drawn from district councils. He said in his note aforesaid dated the 8th January, 1908: 'It is no doubt from the district councils that formal advisory councils for the district officer, for the Commissioner and for the Provincial Administration may be gradually built up.' Expressing with reserve, as the matter was still in correspondence with the Government of India, he wrote 'while, however, the constitution of such councils on a formal basis is a question of great difficulty, I entertain no doubt whatever of the benefits to be gained by constant and informal consultation with intelligent representatives of the various classes. Our officers are trained to do this. Every measure of any importance that is adopted is discussed beforehand, whether it be by summoning a few representative men or by conversation with individuals, or at informal gatherings of the people, in rural areas; and this practice must continue to increase if we are to keep pace with the times. I cannot say what prevails elsewhere in India, but in this Province a very general confidence is reposed by the people in their district officer once they have learned to know him.' The advisability of consulting representative public opinion is admitted and the step of getting a body even for the limited purpose of obtaining opinions which will be offered in a spirit of responsibility is not a big one to take. I feel sure that such a body, however limited its functions may be in this respect and however great may be the latitude allowed to the district officer to override the opinions submitted by such a body, will, if such a body is constituted, be most valuable in arriving at a proper conclusion; for then we shall not only have responsible opinion, but these very same gentlemen constituting the advisory body will be trained to look upon questions in a certain intelligent and responsible way and will thus be in a better position to look at, and give an opinion on, the questions referred, which will harmonise with that of the district officer, if sound. Not only that, but there will be other advantages, that of giving the people the satisfaction of knowing that some at least of their representatives are associated in matters in which there is a likelihood of there being some feeling on the part of the public against any measure which might be taken by the district officer. The Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee has, no doubt, not put forward a cut-and-dried scheme, for there must be difficulties which are necessarily inherent in such a proposal as that of advisory boards. But if Government will be prepared to take some steps in order to create some body like this, I am sure that the country will feel grateful, and that it will be a germ which will develop into a healthy plant and bear fruit that will be relished by the country as well as by Government.

"The third part of the recommendation is not one of very great importance. I am sure that in every provincial Government there is a department in charge of an officer who deals exhaustively with this branch of the work. I therefore would not go to the extent of asking that the Government should accept this Resolution in the comprehensive form in which it has been moved. I would content myself with an expression of my general support of the principle of having these advisory councils, however limited their scope may be."

The Hon'ble Mr. Porter:—"Sir, this Department is concerned only with sections (a) and (b) of the Resolution. As regards these I have only to emphasise the point mentioned by previous speakers that Mr. Dutt failed to convince the Decentralization Commission, who rejected his proposals in paragraphs 795 and 871 of their report. The general proposals of the Commission with regard to District Boards are still under consideration, and the Hon'ble Member will understand I can make no statement at present. I am unable, so far as this Department is concerned, to accept the Resolution, for the reasons which I gave in dealing with the previous Resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock:—"Sir, I wish to confine my remarks to section (b) of the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee, and would like to point out that this is an absolutely and totally distinct subject from the other portions of his Resolution, and from the opinions given in the Council, it is quite certain that no person can give a vote on all these together, either for or against them; and if any opinion in this Council is sought ultimately by division on the Resolution a separate opinion should be obtained on section (b). I may say at the outset that the proposal for advisory councils for Collectors was opposed by me two years ago most strenuously in this Council, and I will affirm that I will oppose it on behalf of Government no less strenuously than I did before. This is not a matter on which I am prepared to express sympathy, which I do not feel; or to hold out prospects of future conversion, of which I feel no possible chance.

"But I will make it perfectly clear, I hope, to the Council that my reasons in opposing this Resolution are not due to any preference for bureaucratic ascendance, to any dislike to the expansion of local self-government, or to any opposition to democracy. My reasons, as I shall explain them, will be that the whole scheme is impracticable, that it is radically defective, that it has no part in the present system of administration and that it cannot possibly have any part in any future system of administration under which greater powers of local self-government are given to the people of this country.

"The motion to provide Collectors with a body of recognised councillors reflects a kind of sentiment which is very prevalent in these days, in which imagination seems to turn to councils, committees, conciliation boards, et hoc genus omnes, as the one panacea for all the ills the flesh is heir to. Some minds seem to be captivated by the idea that nothing good or right can be done by any responsible authority until a large number of comparatively, or perhaps totally, irresponsible people have told him what to do and how to do it. The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale, in his resolution of two years ago, favoured a Council of 9 members, partly elected and partly nominated, to be attached to the Collector with powers that would be merely advisory to begin with. If I understand the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee aright, he merely wants a body of consultants to whom the Collector can apply for advice if he requires it, but to whom he need not apply if he does not require it. But, Sir, before we start upon steps of this kind, we must be satisfied whither they are leading. Before we are caught by the seductive glamour which enthusiastic members, like the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee, seek to throw over this seemingly attractive and harmless proposal, we must ask ourselves how long such a set of councillors, voluntary consultants or whatever they are called, would continue to be satisfied with this humble role; how long it would be before everyone would be asking, when a Collector had done something, whether this Council of his had been consulted or not; and I can almost call up to my imagination the way in which an Hon'ble Member, like the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee, would thunder forth his denunciations in this Council and ask whether the Collector had consulted his Council, what their advice had been, whether he had taken that advice, and if not, why not! Most surely before long we shall be face to face with these developments which Mr. Gokhale foreshadowed, viz., that if the Council agreed with the Collector, he might do a thing; but if they disagreed, he must refer the matter to higher authority. Whether Mr. Banerjee contemplates that result or not, that is the sure result of his proposal. In fact, there would be no responsibility left at all with the Collector; for if he followed the advice of his Council, he would be able to say, like Adam, 'the Council advised me and accordingly I did'; whereas if he did not follow the advice of the Council, he would not be able to act himself but would have to seek the orders of his superior officers. If the Collector had a council of this kind, he must either remain its master, as in Mr. Banerjee's proposal, i e., he must have the power to consult it if he chooses, or not to consult it if he does not choose; to take its advice if he wants it, or not to take its advice if he does not want it: or he must become its servant, as in Mr. Gokhale's proposal. In the former case, the Council would be superfluous and unnecessary, because the Collector can always consult whom he pleases; in the latter, the Collector would be bound to become weak and irresponsible, and his authority would be undermined. The Collector, Sir, is not a president of a legislative assembly which discusses only principles or measures. He is from day to day faced with concrete facts with men and things, and he has to carry out a policy and apply it to the cases and circumstances before him. If he is applying this law in a judicial or quasi-judicial manner, he has to apply it according to the law and the evidence, and you cannot saddle him with compulsory jurymen. Remember that the only parallel for appointing consultants in coming to decisions upon concrete facts, is one in which the consultants are not the same men each time; they are collected ad hoc, and both parties have the right of challenge. Can you imagine that the Collector's decision in an executive matter affecting men and things ought to be subjected to the vote of a small fixed body of Councillors? Now however much the ideal, which, as I said, attracts certain minds, might seem desirable, it is absolutely useless, as Mr. Achariar has suggested, to commend an ideal unless you pursue it further and examine the practical realities of the situation. We have had able speeches and thoughtful speeches from many Hon'ble Members, official and non-official, and I feel that on this occasion I have more non-official support in my opposition to this proposal than I had in the last debate on this subject. I am glad to feel that we have made some converts. Well, when you come to deal with these practical realities, you have got to see whence the men are to be obtained with the leisure, the application, the knowledge, the independence and the reliability to advice the Collector regarding the execution of his multifarious duties? The non-official classes have to find suitable men for local boards, for municipal committees, for the Provincial Legislative Council and for the Imperial Legislative Council. Such suitable men are not usually numerous, men who can afford time for extra work of this kind, who can put aside their private business and devote their time to public affairs; and I am confident that at the vast majority of mufassal stations they would not be forthcoming at all. Again, supposing you find the men, how can they advice the Collector to any real purpose without having before them the papers of the case to study at leisure? Everyone who has experience of committees knows how hopeless it is to go into the room and give your opinion on agenda which are placed before you for the first time. The Hon'ble Members who have narrated their experiences, as district officers, have enumerated the duties of Collectors and the extraordinary difficulty there would be in his attempting to perform those duties with the aid of Councillors of the kind suggested, and I am ready to give just the same emphasis as I did before to the imoossibility of carrying out duties of this kind with a body of the kind that would result—not the ideal Hon'ble Members hold out to us, but the actual body of men that you would find in those districts to carry out that ideal, of which I am convinced they would fall far short. You would have a body of advisers from among the local notables, and these local notables will acquire an importance in the eyes of the district which will cause all sorts of influences to be brought to bear upon them. As I said two years ago, so I repeat to-day, the Collectors' council will become a hot bed of intrigue You cannot get men for the councils with no friends, no relatives, no enemies, no feuds and no factions Once let it be thought that the Collector can be influenced in his action through his council by influences independent of the merits of the case, and the whole fabric of public confidence in his impartiality is at once undermined.

"Well, Sir, I intended to deal at some length with one of the features of the case, viz, that the Collector needs an interpreter to interpret to him the minds of the people; that he does not know what is the non-official opinion on the subject, because there is no one to tell him. I think the example given by the Hon'ble Mr Banerjee was most extraordinarily unfortunate. He referred to the partition of Bengal. I appeal to Hon'ble Members of this Council and ask whether any addition of local notables to the Collector would have caused him to hear or see more of the feelings that agitated the Press and the Public about the partition of Bengal than he was able to do from those around him. The Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee talked about the Collector being the eyes and ears of the Administration. Well that means that the Administration wishes to get from him things that he has seen with his own eyes and heard with his own ears. They do not want him to give to them the second-hand, third-hand, fifth-hand, eigth-hand information, or whatever it may be, which he would obtain from these local bodies; they want him to report the real state of the feelings of the people.

"Hon'ble Members in discussing this proposal have talked about what they call the non-official view. I know what is meant by the non-official view on public questions of policy which can only be appreciated by the educated classes, but the doings, the acts of the Collector, what he does, what he carries out, whom he punishes, whom he rewards, whom he helps, whom he reprimands, on these you want a different kind of non-official view to the non-official view of which you are speaking. You want the non-official view of the millions who are the people, and not the non-official view of the people who live at headquarters and who read newspapers and think they express the complete opinions of the masses. You want the real non-official opinion. Sir, although I am opposed in toto to this proposed development of Councils for Collectors of the kind described (and no one can attach more value than I do to our officers being in close touch with the people and obtaining the opinions of the people first hand and from the people themselves and in using those opinions to the best advantage), I say with the utmost sincerity, although I come from a Province which an Hon'ble Member has described as 'second-rate,' that, if I have attained to any success in my official career, it has been due to the fact that I have endeavoured at all times and at all seasons to ascertain the opinions of the men who have the most experience, whether they were politicians of extreme views at the headquarters, or not, down all the various grades till we came to the aborigines in the jungle. All through my career I have endeavoured to obtain the opinions of the people of all grades who understood the problems and not to depend on information repeated to me from various sources, and that is the advice which I have always given to all young officers of the Civil Service whom it was my duty to train in their work. Sir, I do not fail to attach importance to consultation with the people and to ascertaining their views. That is the whole basis of our system of administration in India, but I do not want to have these intermediary bodies of middlemen thrust as a barrier, as many district officers have described it, between the Collector and the people whose interests he is trying his best to serve. As the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur very properly remarked, the Collector's Advisory Council are the people of his district.

"Then, Sir, what I wish to point out to this Council is that this system can form no integral part of the system of administration in this country. You have certain local matters which are handed over to local self-government; you have other matters which are managed by Provincial administration, and you have other matters which are managed by the Imperial administration. As regards local matters, you create your local boards and your municipalities and you hand them over those powers which you think they are worthy to perform; and you may from time to time, as time goes on, hand to them greater powers. There is no place for a council of this kind with the Collector. He is the executive officer. Under him you may have a local body which he supervises, or again you may have a body such as a large municipal corporation with an executive officer under him whose instructions he takes. But in the carrying out of his duties, which are executive duties, no one could possibly suggest the necessity, in any system of government that we may have, of providing the executive officer with a fresh set of councillors Take a big municipality or corporation, they may be the people who decide the general policy and who give orders, and they have under them a chief executive officer who carries out these orders and who is given various powers, but nobody would dream of providing the chief executive officer to the municipality with a fresh set of advisers or a fresh council of his own; and just so is it with the Government. Substitute for the municipal corporation, or whatever the body is, the Government. They have their executive officer and he carries out their orders and instructions, and for these duties which are entrusted to him he is the one responsible authority and he must do it. Let him consult his trusted officials, let him consult all non-officials, not only those at headquarters, but also all non-official persons wherever he may find them and where he may value their advice. Those are the lines on which I look forward to the development of local self-government. If the time comes to take away some of these powers which are retained by the Government in its own hands and hand them over to the local bodies, then the local bodies can exercise those powers; but as long as those powers are not given to the local bodies, the Local Government and its officers must exercise them with the Collector as their executive officer. There is no place whatever for the Hon'ble Member's Council. When the change is made, whenever it is made, it will come by the devolution of powers to the local bodies and not by hampering the Collector with a council of his own.

"I am sorry to detain the Council, but there is one more matter on which I should like to lay stress, as nobody has placed it before us to-day; and that is that every non-official speaker appears to have ignored the value and the importance attaching to the Indians who serve the Collector in various capacities as tahsildars and Deputy Collectors. No one seems to think they count for anything in interpreting to the Collector the opinion of the people around him. In my opinion, from my experience (and, after all, officers who have served in the districts are the only ones who can speak with experience on that point) in my opinion and from my experience, I say, it is a calumny to say that these officers either do not know what is going on in the district and do not know the feelings of the people, or if they know them, are afraid to express them, because they think the Collector will differ from them. It is, I consider, incorrect, it is unfair to them, and I repudiate in respect to our Deputy Collectors and our trusted Indian officials any sort of censure or blame of that kind. But any one who puts that plea forward cannot ignore the natural results of the argument. If Deputy Collectors and if these officials cannot be trusted to represent the views of the people among whom they serve to their superior officers, because they think they may offend them and not get their promotion; then what becomes of the general demand for entrusting higher powers to these same officers and for asking for them to be employed in greater numbers.

"I do not accept the imputation that is sometimes alleged to attach to our worthy hard working and honourable men who are Deputy Collectors and tahsildars. I do not accept that; but if you seek to say that these men are of no value, then I say it is not correct. But if it were correct, the only corollary is that these men are not fitted for the higher appointments which Indian non-official educated opinion is always asking for them.

"Therefore, Sir, on behalf of Government I cannot accept this Resolution. I say that there are not the men, and if there were the men, there is not the business for them to transact; and if there were the men, and if there were the business for them, why then you cannot entrust it to them because the whole work of the Collector will come to a stand still while men were discussing and debating what should be done until the time for doing it had gone by. If these Councils were to be given, the Collector himself would become the figure-head of an organization of men and not an executive officer; he would cease to fulfil the functions for which his appointment was created. If Collectors are overburdened, if there office work keeps them away from the people, relief is to be obtained not by a further engrossing of their time by associating them with Councils, where their time will be taken up in trying to convince their Councils or in being convinced by their Councils, but in reducing the area of their charge to manageable limits; and then, as time goes on, with future developments, to delegate greater powers, and further powers to the local bodies for which they may have shown themselves worthy."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"Sir, I must confess to a sense of surprise at the warmth of the reply which has been given to my observations by the Hon'ble the Home Member. His usual manner is one of calmness and moderation and I confess to a sense of disappointment at his attitude and the warmth of that attitude in regard to this Resolution. I will say also this that I have followed his observations with the keenest possible interest and before I came to this room I read with close attention the Hon'ble Member's speech in reply to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's motion. I do not find any new matter brought up to-day, but the old arguments set forth with a warmth of feeling which he did not display on that occasion.

"Sir, the Hon'ble the Home Member is pleased to suggest—I hope I have correctly interpreted him—that this is the thin end of the wedge, that I want this Advisory Committee to be appointed as a mere consultative body, that the Collector will be at liberty to brush aside the recommendations of this body, but that when Collectors have done that, somebody occupying my seat in this Council will come forward and thunder forth his anathemas against the proceedings of the Collector. I have had not the smallest idea of anything of the kind. 'Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof' is the dictum of the practical administrator, and I hope and trust that my Hon'ble friend the Home Member will accept it. We cannot afford as administrators to take long views of things; we have sufficient work for the day and we do that. Will the Hon'ble gentleman tell us what will be the future of this Council, whether it will remain a consultative body or whether it will be something more—whether in the course of succeeding developments it will not become the irresistible and the unresisted master of the Government? As you ask me to take a long view of things, I am prepared to accept the challenge and await the result. The Parliament of England was at first a small consultative body summoned by Simon de Montfort, and it is the institution that governs the British Empire to-day. We are not at liberty, sitting here as practical administrators, to look far into the future. We discuss questions on their merits without reference to future developments that may take place. I venture to submit that ought to be the attitude of every practical and sound administrator sitting here and presiding over the destinies of a great department dealing with the affairs of an Empire like this.

"Sir, it has been said that the Collector ought to be at liberty to consult whomsoever he pleases. He does that now. Why should you then fetter him with a Council, is an argument which the Hon'ble the Home Member has brought forward. The Collector is certainly at liberty to consult whomsoever he pleases. Even if he had a Council, that liberty would not be taken away from him. But if there is a constituted Council, there is the guarantee that the Council will advise with a sense of responsibility; but when you go to A, B and C, to this wind-bag and to that wind-bag, to this man trying to advance his own interests, and to that man trying to advance the interests of his relatives, where is the guarantee that the advice will be sound and disinterested? Therefore, when we suggest an Advisory Council, we suggest a responsible body who will neither be wind-bags, nor interested persons. Thus, there is a distinct advantage in having a Council of this kind advising with a sense of responsibility.

"Then, Sir, it has been said that the responsibility of the Collector will be taken away from him if there is such a council I fail to understand how that will be so. It is an advisory body; the Collector will be the master of the situation. The Hon'ble the Home Member has himself acknowledged that. I do not want to make this Advisory Committee the master of the Collector but rather, if I may so express. myself, a servant of the Collector. If my servant gives me any advice about any particular matter and I disdain that advice, does my sense of responsibility depart, or is it even in the smallest degree restricted? I accept the figure of speech which the Home Member has made use of, in interpreting the sense of my resolution and accepting that view, I ask that if the Collector dispenses with their advice, refuses to be guided by it, how is his sense of responsibility lessened in the smallest degree? I am surprised, Sir, that in this Imperial Legislative Council an argument of this kind should have been brought forward and by the Home Member. I must say, Sir, that I am thoroughly unconvinced by the arguments of the Hon'ble the Home Member, the country will remain unconvinced; every educated Indian will read those arguments and he will confess to a sense of regret that an argument of this kind should have been brought forward by an Imperial Minister for the purpose of defeating a motion which is calculated to strengthen the administration, to add to the elements of sobriety in our public life, to stimulate public spirit in the country, and to strengthen the Collector in the discharge of his executive functions. I confess to a sense of great disappointment, but I feel bound to give expression to it in the most emphatic manner possible. The Hon'ble the Home Member says that he has got converts to his views this time whom he had not before. I rejoice at the announcement, I desire to congratulate him on the converts he has secured. I do not know who they are, but if he has got them, so much the better; the country will not indeed miss them.

"Sir, with reference to the first part of my Resolution, I propose to withdraw it after the assurance that has been given by the Hon'ble Mr. Porter. With regard to the third part I may just mention this fact that this proposal was made in Lord Ripon's time. My memory carries me back to those days, and Lord Ripon suggested a Board consisting of three members, the Sanitary Commissioner was to have been one of them, an Indian gentleman was to be the second, and there was to be a third member. That proposal fell through owing to financial reasons. I have been trying to find out the papers, but I have not succeeded. I made an application to the Government of Bengal, and the Government of Bengal was not able to give me the papers. The papers may be in the Secretariat of the Government of India. I am distinctly of opinion that with the development of local self-government that is now taking place you must relieve the local officers of the power of control and you must confide it in a public body furnished with expert knowledge and devoted exclusively to local concerns. Sir, this motion. will, I fear, not be accepted by the Government of the day, but I have not the slightest doubt, if I have the smallest provision into the future, that the time will come when a Local Government Board will be established in every province.

"Sir, the first part of the Resolution is withdrawn, and I ask you, Sir, to put the other parts of the Resolution separately, if I may be permitted to make that request."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"Part (a) is, by permission, withdrawn Parts (b) and (c) will be put separately."

Parts (b) and (c) were put and rejected.

RESOLUTION RE AMENDMENT OF TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—"Sir, I rise to move the Resolution which stands in my name :—

That this Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the opinions of Local Governments be invited as to the desirability of amending the last paragraph of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act in the following manner, that is to say, to add in the first line after the words 'this section' the following words 'or in section 48 of the Registration Act (III of 1877),' and in the last line after the words 'security thereon' to add the following words 'and such mortgages shall have the same effect as regards priority as if they were registered.'

"The reasons which have induced me to move this resolution are the conflicting decisions which have been given by the Calcutta High Court. It has been the invariable practice in this country since the decision of the Privy Council in the case of Varden Seth Sam versus Luckputty (9 Moore I. A.) —that was a case from the Madras Presidency—to recognise equitable mortgages without question. But the decisions which have recently been given at complete variance with the former decisions render it necessary to amend section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. Sir, I beg to point out to this Council that ever since the enactment of this section 59 it has been the practice for banks and private capitalists and other money-lenders to lend large sums of money on equitable mortgages: and it is a great facility to traders to take money on the deposit of title-deeds, because the execution of regular mortgage not only involves a large expenditure of money, time and labour, but sometimes, when it is exposed, goes to impair the credit of a merchant. Under these circumstances merchants as a rule, when on a sudden they are called upon to raise money, whether it be to meet hundis or to enable them to conduct their business more satisfactorily, usually resort to the practice of raising money on the deposit of title-deeds. For a long time—as I pointed out, ever since the decision of the Lords in that appeal case from the Madras Presidency, and more particularly, since the enactment of the Transfer of Property Act, it has been the practice of banks and private capitalists and money-lenders to advance large sums of money on the basis of what is called an equitable mortgage, and which is created by the mere deposit of title-deeds with the lender and the validity of such mortgages has never been questioned, rather it was held in the case of Coggan versus Pogose, which was a decision of Mr. Justice Pigot of the Calcutta High Court, that an equitable mortgage should have priority over a subsequent registered document relating to the same property. But, in view of the provisions contained in section 48 of the Registration Act, a question has recently arisen as to whether a subsequent registered mortgage should not have priority over an equitable mortgage. If that view be accepted, i.e., that a subsequent registered mortgage should have priority over an equitable mortgage, there will be no necessity for the provision contained in the last paragraph of section 59, because it will lead to loss of money, if not to fraud.

"Now, section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act says:

When the principal money secured is one hundred or upwards, a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested to by at least two witnesses.

"But immediately after that it is enacted:

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karachi and Rangoon, by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immoveable property, with intent to create a security thereon.

"In contradistinction to what is stated in the first part of section 59, which enacts that a mortage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested to by two witnesses, it is enacted in the last portion of the same section that nothing contained in this section shall invalidate mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, etc., by the mere deposit of title-deeds of immoveable property; and this, as I said before, is intended to give facilities for carrying on business.

"I may read a short extract from the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Varden Seth Sam's case—

'There is properly speaking no prescribed general law to which the decisions must conform. They are directed in the Madras Presidency to proceed according to justice, equity and good conscience. The question then is whether the decision appealed against violates that direction or not. The Court of Appeal reversing the prior decisions has decided that the contract was not operative as a hypothecation, or pledge, even between the parties to it. Yet the evidence shows that the plaintiff looked not simply to the personal credit of the person with whom he contracted, but bargained for a security on land. If any positive law had forbidden effect to be given to the actual agreement of the parties to create that lien, the Court of course must have obeyed that law. If the contract of lien were imperfect for want of some necessary condition, effect must have been in like manner denied to it as a perfected lien. But nothing of this sort is suggested in the pleadings or proved. It is not shown that in fact the parties contracted with reference to any particular law. They were not of the same race and creed. By the Mahommedan law, such a contract as the one under consideration, for a security in respect of a contingent loss, would be one, not of pawn, but of trust. It is not declared that any writing or actual delivery is essential to the creation of such trust by that law; but as the contracting parties are not both Mahommedans, that law would not have governed the question of the validity and force of their contract, even in the Supreme Court. The plaintiff is a Christian; the contract took place with parties living within the local limits of the Supreme Court of Madras, though it related to land beyond them. It is not shown that any local law, any lex locirei sitae exists, forbidding the creation of a lien by the contract and deposit of deeds which existed in this case; and by the general law of the place, where the contract was made, that is, the English law, the deposit of title-deeds as a security would create a lien on lands, though, as between parties who can convey by deed only, or conveyance in writing, such lien would necessarily be equitable. In this case there is an express contract for a security on the lands, to which no law invalidating it, effect must be given between the parties themselves.

"Then it was held in a case decided by Mr. Justice Pigot (Coggan versus Pogose), that an equitable mortgage created by deposit of title-deeds would have priority over a subsequent mortgage though registered. Then in another case reported in I. L. R. 33 Cal. 410, decided by Sir Francis Maclean, C. J., and Caspersz J., their Lordships say—

We now pass to the appeal of the plaintiffs (that is, Raja Gokul Das) which deals with the question of priority as between the Company and themselves. The Company say they claim under a registered mortgage, and that they had no notice of the plaintiffs' equitable sub-mortgage, and that they are entitled to priority. The plaintiffs contend that, inasmuch as they are prior in point of time, whether or not the Company had notice of the sub-mortgage, they are entitled to priority, and they put their case in this way. They say that, having regard to the last paragraph of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, the transaction with Dhanpat Singh, that is, the mortgagor here, constituted perfectly valid mortgage to them, inasmuch as it was a delivery to the creditor's agent of the three mortgages, which constituted the only documents of title of the property in question and that this was done with intent to create a security thereon. A mortgage is defined in section 58 of the Transfer of Property Act. No registration then was required under section 59.

"Then later on their Lordships say—

Now, it was decided more than 20 years ago by Mr. Justice Pigot in the case of Coggan versus Pogose that a deposit of title-deeds of certain property under a verbal arrangement to secure payment of a debt, is not an oral agreement or declaration relating to such property within the meaning of section 48 of the Registration Act. Section 48 says that all non testamentary documents duly registered under this Act and relating to any property whether moveable or immoveable shall take effect against any oral agreement or declaration relating to such property unless where the agreement or declaration has been accompanied or followed by delivery of possession.

"The defendants here, that is the Eastern Mortgage Company, wanted to take shelter under section 48 of the Registration Act; but I beg to point out that the Registration Act, i.e, Act III, came into force in 1877, whereas the Transfer of Property Act was passed in 1882. With their eyes open the Legislature expressly enacted that in spite of what is stated in the first part of section 59, nothing said in this section would go to invalidate a mortgage created by deposit of title-deeds. So under this section it was held that this disposed of the contention raised under section 48 of the Registration Act. Then it is said, 'The case is the stronger since the passing of the Transfer of Property Act', which goes to show that irrespective of the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, according to the previous judgments of the Privy Council and the judgment of the Calcutta High Court, in India it has become a wide practice to recognise mortgages created by deposit of title-deeds, and their Lordships pointed out that the case has become stronger since the passing of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The case is stronger since the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, for section 59 recognises such a transaction as a valid mortgage, without the necessity of registration, while section 58 tells us what a mortgage is and section 67 what are the rights of the mortgagee. We therefore think that apart from the question of notice, the Company is not entitled to priority over the plaintiffs, as the former are not protected by section 48 of the Registration Act.

"Then it was distinctly held that in spite of the provisions of section 48 of the Registration Act a mortgage created by deposit of title-deeds should have priority over a subsequently created mortgage, subsequent in point of time. But unfortunately doubts have been thrown on the correctness of those judgments by the strong views expressed by His Lordship, Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., and by the decision of Mr. Justice Fletcher in the case of the Calcutta Bank versus Panchcowry Mitter. In that case the question arose in the Calcutta High Court whether a registered mortgage should have priority over a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds, known as an equitable mortgage of the same property. Under section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act the latter is a perfectly valid mortgage, but it was argued that an equitable mortgage is the result of an oral agreement, and therefore under section 48 of the Registration Act a registered mortgage, though subsequent in point of time, should take effect against, i.e., would have priority over, an equitable mortgage relating to the same property.

"The case was compromised and therefore the point was not finally settled, but the Hon'ble the Chief Justice, Sir Lawrence Jenkins, seemed to be of the opinion that the registered mortgage would have priority; and the decision of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Fletcher in the lower court was to the same effect. It is indeed a matter of regret that Sir Lawrence Jenkins should hold such a view. I may mention here that this very point was raised and fully discussed in the case of Gokuldas versus Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company (Indian Law Reports, 33 Cal., page 410), and it was held in the above case by an Appellate Bench consisting of C. J. Sir Francis Maclean and Mr. Justice Caspersz that an equitable mortgage is not an oral agreement. It is a complete mortgage by itself and as such a subsequent registered mortgage could not under section 48 of the Registration Act have priority over an equitable mortgage.

"However, as stated before, large sums of money have been advanced and are being daily advanced in the presidency towns on the bare deposit of title-deeds relating to immoveable property, on the faith of the provisions contained in section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, that it is a perfectly valid and good security to advance money on the deposit of title-deeds. It will entail serious loss, it will involve sacrifice of large sums of money, to hold now a contrary view, that is to say, to hold that, in view of the provision contained in section 48 of the Registration Act, a subsequent registered mortgage should have priority over an equitable mortgage relating to the same property. As a very important principle is involved and as section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act was enacted with a view to give facilities to merchants and traders for securing money for financing their business without executing a regular mortgage, which necessarily entails large expenditure of money, time and labour and which when exposed goes to impair a trader's credit, and doubts having been cast on the absolute validity of equitable mortgages on account of the strong opinion expressed by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of the Bengal High Court, it has become imperatively necessary from all points of view, specially in the interests of trade and commerce, to place equitable mortgages on a sound and sure footing. Otherwise it would open a wide door to fraud as the following illustration will show.

"Suppose B were to borrow from A in Calcutta the sum of Rs. 50,000 and were to deposit with A the title-deeds of his, that is, B's immoveable property in the district of Dacca, with a view to create a charge thereon; and suppose after the lapse of 6 months or so, B were to sell his above property to C for a lakh of rupees by a registered conveyance, now, if it were held, as it has been held in the Calcutta High Court, that the registered conveyance, though subsequent in point of time, would have priority over the equitable mortgage which is in the nature of an oral agreement and nothing more, would not such an interpretation of the law open a wide door to fraud and be a stimulus to the commitment of fraud?

"The principle of equitable mortgage has long since been recognised both in England and America. In this country equitable mortgages have been accepted without question since the decision of Their Lordships of the Privy Council in Varden Seth Sam versus Luckpathy (9 M. I. A. 307—324) and by the enactment of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Indian Law on the subject has been assimilated to what prevails in other important centres of trade and commerce. It is well known that it takes a very long time to execute a regular mortgage and it involves a large expenditure of money and what is worse the execution of a regular mortgage goes to impair a man's credit. It was to avoid all these, and at the same time to provide prompt and inexpensive means for raising money required for financing business, that the provision of the last paragraph of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act was deliberately embodied in the Indian Statue Law. I have no hesitation in saying that the provision of the last portion of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act has been a great help to merchants and traders for raising money for conducting their business; whatever interpretation may now be put on this section, it is an unquestioned fact that the evident intention of the Legislature was that a valid mortgage should be created by deposit of title-deeds with the creditor. To me the section seems to be clear enough, for though the first portion of section 59 provides that where the principal money secured is Rs. 100 or upwards, a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses, it is, in direct variance with the above provision, enacted in the last portion of section 59, that in case of what is called an equitable mortgage, no registration or attestation would be necessary and that no written document would be required at all, but that a perfectly valid mortgage would be created by delivery to a creditor of documents of title to immoveable property with intent to create a security thereon; and, to prevent fraud, it was further enacted that such a mortgage could only be created in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, etc. I have no hesitation in saying that the Legislature, by enacting this provision, deliberately intended that equitable mortgages, in spite of the provision of section 48 of the Registration Act, should have priority over all subsequently registered documents. To hold otherwise would not only go to neutralise the provision of the last paragraph of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, would not only entail sacrifice of large sums of money hitherto advanced by various banks and private capitalists and moneylenders on the faith of this section would not only go to seriously handicap all businesses and enterprises, but would at the same time open a wide door to fraud; and I beg to add that the good intention of the Legislature would be frustrated and the provision made here would become an absolute nullity, for no one would care to advance money on an equitable mortgage when it is liable to be defeated by a registered document subsequently executed.

"Sir, my prayer is that the opinions of Local Governments and High Courts be invited to the conflicting decisions passed by the Calcutta High Court and in view of the current of decisions passed, it is desirable, in order to remove doubts and anxieties, that section 59 should be modified. If this Council does not accept my recommendation, I would request, as a last alternative, that the Legislature be advised to delete this provision altogether.

"I wish also to point out that the feelings of uncertainty and uneasiness are not mine alone, but are shared by the European banks and solicitors in Calcutta; and I will read extracts from their letter.

Before concluding I may state that the decision of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Fletcher in the case of Calcutta Bank, Limited, versus Panchcowry Mitter and the strong views expressed by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice Sir Lawrence Jenkins, when the matter came in appeal before the Appellate Bench, have thrown considerable doubts on the absolute validity of equitable mortgages, and it is said that the present uncertain state of law on the subject is seriously affecting the business of banks. The following extracts from a case prepared by a well-known and respectable firm of solicitors—all Europeans—for having counsel's opinion on the subject, will go to verify what I have stated. The case was prepared by Messrs Morgan and Co., who are solicitors for a very large number of European banks in Calcutta, in order to seek the opinion of counsel as to what the banks should do in view of the opinion expressed by the Chief Justice.

Counsel will recollect that on the recent hearing of the appeal in the case of The Bank of Calcutta, Limited, against Nanda Lal Roy and others, in which counsel appeared on behalf of the Bank of Calcutta, Limited, a number of questions were raised upon the question of the validity of securities created or purported to be created by the deposit of title-deeds with or without accompanying registered or unregistered memoranda and also as to the relative priority of securities created by deposit with or without memoranda against subsequent securities constituted by registered instruments. The judgment of the Lower Court (Fletcher J.) on the question of priority as well as his observation on the decision in Coggan versus Pogose at the time of the hearing on the matter before him as well as some observations that fell from the Chief Justice when the appeal was being argued have given rise to some doubt as to the present state of law on the subject. Owing to a compromise being arrived at in the appeal, no definite decision was given on any of the points at issue.

The present uncertain state of law upon the question of the securities is seriously affecting the Bank's business, and they desire to be advised as to how far they can safely accept the security of deposits of title-deeds and as to what, if any, formal records of the deposits should be made.

"This will go to shew that the feeling of doubts and suspicions as well as uneasiness which have been created by the above decision of the Calcutta High Court are shared by well known European solicitors and European banks in Calcutta.

"I therefore, with all the earnestness that I can command, appeal to this Council to remove the doubts and suspicions which have been caused and to place the question of equitable mortagage on a sound and sure footing and thereby put a stop to the loophole for committing fraud.

"With these remarks I appeal to the Council either to amend this section and to take the opinion of the local Governments, or to delete the section altogether, so that there might not be any loophole for committing fraud."

19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Sir William Vincent.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—" Sir, with the permission of the Hon'ble the Law Member, I should like to speak on some points which arise for consideration out of this Resolution I shall try to do so as briefly as possible. The Resolution, as I understand the Hon'ble Mover, aims at securing to mortgages effected by the deposit of title-deeds priority over registered mortgages executed on dates subsequent to such deposit.

" Now, the position of the law is that outside the Presidency towns and certain other commercial centres which are referred to in section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, mortgages of immoveable property, when the principal secured by the mortgage exceeds Rs. 100, can in accordance with the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act only be effected by registered instruments attested in a particular manner. Within the towns above referred to, such mortgages may be effected either by registered deed or by delivery to the creditor of the title-deeds relating to the property with the intention of creating security thereon; and section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act provides specifically that nothing in that section is to affect the validity of these equitable mortgages in the towns to which I have referred.

" The Hon'ble Mover is, however, apprehensive that the position of equitable mortgages is not sufficiently secured by these provisions of the law, and he proposes to amend section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act in two ways. Firstly, he proposes to insert in the last paragraph of that section a reference to the Registration Act; and if his amendment were to be accepted, the section would run as follows:—

Nothing in this section or in section 48 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karachi, Rangoon, Moulmein, Bassein and Akyab by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immoveable property with intent to create a security thereon.

"Now, when the Member refers to Act III of 1877, he is under some misapprehension as that Act was repealed in 1908 by the Registration Act of that year.

" The Act of 1908, however, re-enacts section 48 of the Act of 1877, and it is with reference to the later Act that he would doubtless wish his proposal considered. The section, however, does not deal with the validity of mortgages, but with the postponement of one kind of mortgage to another. In other words, there is nothing in section 48 of the Registration Act which deals with the question of the validity of mortgages by deposit of title-deeds, and it seems unnecessary to say, therefore, that nothing in section 48 of that Act should affect the validity of such a mortgage; and I suggest for the consideration of the Hon'ble Member that his proposal in this respect will not meet the object he has in view I need scarcely explain that the question whether one mortgage is to be postponed to another is a separate question from the validity of a mortgage, and, indeed, until a mortgage is determined to be valid, no question of postponement or priority can arise. I think therefore that the Council should hesitate before accepting this part of the Resolution.

" The second amendment proposed is that the words ' And such mortgage shall have the same effect as regards priority as if it has been registered ', should be added to section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. Now, Sir, it may be doubtful whether an amendment of this kind could be more suitably inserted in the Transfer of Property Act or whether it would not be more convenient to provide for what the Hon'ble Member wants by an amendment of the Registration Act. This is a point, however, that can be considered later if the proposal to modify the law is approved. Coming, however, to the real modifications of the law which the Hon'ble Mover wishes to effect, I doubt, in the first place, if it has as yet been proved that any such amendment is necessary or whether the amendment which he proposes will meet the case to which he refers.

" The exact position of mortgages by deposit of title-deeds in relation to subsequent registered mortgages has been before the Courts more than once, and the effect of section 48 of the Registration Act in respect of such mortgages has been specifically considered. One of the best known cases is that decided in 1884, referred to by the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray, in which it was decided that section 48 of the Registration Act—the very section to which the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray refers—did not affect mortgages by deposit of title-deeds; and in another case in 1905 the same view was taken. I have not been able to find any reported case in which a contrary view of the law has been expressed. We have, therefore, decisions for the last 30 years which secure the rights of equitable mortgagees.

"The Hon'ble Mover informs us that the priority of such mortgages has recently been doubted in the Calcutta High Court, and he has been kind enough to lend me a copy of the paper-book of the case referred to. This was, in fact, a case originally decided by Mr. Justice Harington, and the exact question now under discussion does not seem to have been raised at the first hearing at all. The position there was something as follows: an equitable mortgage had been created by the deposit of title-deeds, and subsequently the borrower entered, as it was alleged, into further contracts with his creditor and addressed to him letters stating that the deeds already deposited would remain as security for certain sums named therein; and the question at issue was whether the letters relating to the subsequent agreements should be registered or not, as it was argued that they were the real basis of the contracts in respect of the alleged subsequent adjustments, and that these contracts had not been effected by the original deposit of the deeds. The judgment has no reference to section 48 of the Registration Act, and I cannot ascertain that the question of the priority of mortgages was discussed at all before Mr. Justice Harington. In fact, the only point that was considered was that to which I have referred, namely, whether the letters written by the mortgagor to the mortgagee should have been registered or not. If I may put it so, the fact there considered was not whether an equitable mortgage by deposit of title-deeds should be postponed to a subsequent registered mortgage, but whether for particular advances there was any admissible evidence of equitable mortgage. This case on appeal was remanded to the Court of first instance with certain directions. Mr. Justice Fletcher then, as I understand his judgment, held that the debt for which priority was claimed by virtue of the equitable mortgage was a new debt created after the purpose of his original deposit of title-deeds was satisfied, and that there was a new agreement which gave the charge for this new debt on the documents already deposited. If, therefore, the modification in the law proposed by the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray were given effect to, it is at least doubtful how far the mortgagee in the suit referred to would have been benefited, for the real contention in that case before Mr. Justice Fletcher was that the charge for which priority was claimed was not created by the deposit but by a later agreement."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur:—"Sir, I rise to a point of order. I beg to correct you (Sir William Vincent) in this way, that the letter refers to a subsequent advance, not to the original advance. There were two advances; the letter referred to the subsequent advance; and the question was distinctly raised before Mr. Justice Fletcher whether the first advance under section 59 should have validity over the subsequently created registered mortgage. That was the point raised before Mr. Justice Fletcher and his decision was that it should not have priority over the mortgage under section 48 of the Act."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"As far as I was able to understand the judgment (I saw it only for a short time), I understand that the decision in that case was what I have stated, namely, that the charge for which priority was claimed was not created by the deposit, and there is no indication in the judgment that the learned Judge intended to dissent from the previous rulings of 1884 and 1905 to which I have referred.

19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Sir William Vincent; Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur.]

"Those Hon'ble Members who are familiar with the ways of Courts will know that a single Judge could not have openly dissented from well established rulings in this way without some reference to them. I agree, however, that with regard to the validity of the particu'ar agreement under examination in that case some doubt may have been created in the law by this recent decision, but I submit it is premature to consider the question of amending the law on the obiter dicta of Mr. Justice Fletcher, which are not reported as far as I am aware, or on certain statements alleged to have been made by the Chief Justice of Bengal (of which we have no authentic record) in a case which finally was compromised. I put it to this Council that on vague allegat ons of this kind, that the Chief Justice said this and the Chief Justice said that, it is premature for this Council to consider a question of amendment. I do agree, however, that there may be some doubt as to the particular point raised in this case, and I understand that, if the necessity should arise after the actual facts have been ascertained, the Government will consider the advisability of addressing Local Governments on the subject. I doubt, however, how far these difficulties will be solved in any way by the amendment which the Hon'ble Member proposes.

"I may add, however, that if the question of equitable mortgages is to be re-opened, I think it is at least possible that some of the opinions received will not advocate that any greater protection should be secured to equitab'e mortgagees for the expediency of allowing such protection has at various times been questioned on the ground that it infringes on the principle underlying registration; and indeed such a practice is open to obvious objection. If a lender proposes to lend money on the security of immoveable property in this country, the first and main source of information as to any existing encumbrances on the property is the Registration Office, and if no encumbrances are registered, the lender feels safe in advancing money: and in many cases he does not require that the original title-deeds of the mortgagor should be produced or made over to him. A system, therefore, by which a mortgagee who has taken every reasonable care by having searches made in the Registration Office to ascertain that the property on the security of which he is advancing money is not encumbered is prejudiced by the subsequent ascertainment of an existing mortgage effected by deposit of title-deeds prior to the registered mortgage is open to considerable criticism; the more so, because such a mortgage if effected in a Presidency town may, according to some authorities, affect property outside that area. It is at least possible (I do not put it higher than that) therefore that if the Hon'ble Member were successful in his Resolution he would find that some of the opinions received would not advocate any changes in the law, which might further benefit mortgagees by deposit of deeds.

"In any case, for the reasons that I have already attempted to explain, I doubt whether the amendments proposed are suitable or whether they would effect what the Hon'ble Mover wishes; and I submit that it is entirely premature to ask us to consult Local Governments on a matter of this kind. I submit therefore that the Resolution in its present form is not one which should be accepted by this Council, although the question whether any amendment in the law to meet that particular case is necessary is a matter which may have to be further considered."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur:—"I wish to read a further extract with your permission. Sir William Vincent has been good enough to doubt whether Mr. Justice Fletcher gave such a decision, I say he did so. I have no certified copy of the judgment with me, but it will be evident from the note which has been furnished to me by a counsel, namely, Mr. S R. Das, who is a prominent member of the Calcutta Bar, and other papers, that such a decision was given."

[Sir William Vincent; Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur; The Vice-President; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [19TH MARCH, 1914.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"May I put it to the Hon'ble Member that it would be better if he read Mr. Justice Fletcher's judgment and not the opinion of counsel."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"The point is one which we can decide by the sense of the Council. I take it that there is no need to accept the obiter dicta of the Court."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—"In the judgment given by Mr. Justice Fletcher he expressly held that a subsequent registered mortgage under section 48 of the Registration Act should have priority over an equitable mortgage."*

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"The Hon'ble Member would be in order in reading the judgment, but he would not be in order in reading the opinion of the counsel on the judgment."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"May I rise, Sir, to invite your attention to Rule 3 of the Rules for the Conduct of Business of this Council, which provides that the Council shall ordinarily meet at 11 A. M. and not prolong its sitting after 4 P. M., unless the President otherwise directs.

"I will just say one word The matter raised by this Resolution is one of importance so far as commercial men are concerned, and perhaps other members would like to say something before the resolution is put to the vote. In view of that, you may be pleased to consider whether the Council should not adjourn."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"No Member has shown any desire to speak, and the Hon'ble Member is now replying, so that I think we had better hear him before we adjourn."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—"Sir, I bow to your decision and I will read the judgment.

This cause coming on the 25th day of July instant and on this day for further directions pursuant to the directions given by the Appeal Court on the 11th day of July, 1910, on the report of the second Assistant Registrar of this Court, dated the 4th day of June, 1908, and his further report dated the 19th day of May, 1909; both filed on the 20th day of June, 1909, before the Hon'ble Ernest Edward Fletcher, one of the Judges of this Court, in the presence of Counsel for the claimants—

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"That is not a judgment; that is a decree."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—"That is the judgment. I have also got the decree with me. I am not myself a lawyer. I come to seek the help of this Council. Objections have been taken that the amendments have not been properly framed. I am sorry, but that is not the point, I say. Feelings of uneasiness and uncertainty have been aroused by a recent decision, which goes to reverse previous decisions on this point. That is the question. Would it be desirable in the interests of the mercantile community that, until several lakhs of rupees have been sacrificed by an adverse decision on the point, it would not be proper for the Council to take any action on it? I beg to differ upon that point. However, I will read the judgment.

* If the agreement is oral it would be postponed to a registered document by section 48 of the Registration Act if in writing under section 49 ....

[19TH MARCH, 1914.] [Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur ; The Vice-President ; Sir Ali Imam.]

On this aspect of the case it appears to me impossible to determine the respective priorities of the two charges. But, as above indicated by me, I should hold that in so far as the properties comprised in the registered charge to the Bank and the documents deposited with the Roys are common to both, the Bank by virtue of the registration of their charge obtained priority over the Roys. The cases cited during the argument have little bearing on the point in question, for I think that the evidence shows that on the 3rd September, 1901, a new debt for Rs. 22,000 was created, and that there was an agreement that the title-deeds deposited on the 14th August, 1894, should continue as a security for the repayment of the said sum and interest thereon. In the circumstances of this case that agreement not being effected by a registered document is postponed to a charge created by registered document affecting the same property.

The costs of the hearing before me will be dealt with by the Appellate Court.

"The judgment distinctly provides that, so far as the same property is covered by both the equitable mortgage and the subsequent registered mortgage, the subsequent mortgage would have priority over the equitable mortgage. This is the case decided by Mr. Justice Fletcher. I therefore beg to suggest, whether the amendments have been properly framed or not, that before serious loss is caused to the mercantile community by holding that a subsequent registered mortgage should have priority over an equitable mortgage, and in view of the uncertainty and feelings of uneasiness which have been created by this decision, it is extremely desirable. I do not mean to say that the legislature should at once take up the matter—that the Governor General in Council would be pleased to invite the opinions of the Local Governments and of the several High Courts as to whether it is or it is not desirable to amend the section in a particular way. I therefore beg the Government of India to invite the opinions of the Local Governments as to whether or not the particular section should be amended in a particular way. That is what I pray for."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" That is not the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—" That is my Resolution, and how would the Council be prejudiced by inviting opinions I cannot see."

The Hon'ble Sir Ali Imam :—" May I say a word, Sir. The Resolution of the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur is one in regard to which we in our Department had some discussion, and after very careful consideration it was decided that the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent would deal with it. As a matter of fact it has been dealt with, and, if I may say so, the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent has said that this matter cannot at present come up for consideration, but that hereafter, if an occasion arose, there would be time enough to consider the arguments which have been advanced by the Hon'ble Member. Well the Transfer of Property Act is one in regard to which, in my Department, I receive many suggestions, and we have in view the revision of some of its various provisions. Therefore, it seems to me that the Hon'ble Mover need not at present press his Resolution, because in the reply which has been given on my behalf by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent, encouragement has been given to him to hope that hereafter this matter may receive the consideration of Government. It seems to me that the Hon'ble Mover is more or less under the impression that there has been want of sympathy on our part so far as the Resolution goes. As a matter of fact there is no want of sympathy at all. The form in which the Resolution stands is open to objection, and we are not disposed to send it to Local Governments to invite their opinions. But hereafter the substance underlying the Resolution will probably come up and will no doubt receive our very careful consideration. That is the position, and I think, if I mistake not, that is what the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent said in his speech."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—" Sir, after the assurances given by the Hon'ble the Law Member, I have no hesitation in saying that I withdraw the Resolution, as he was good enough to say that it will receive the early attention of the Government of India. I understand that the Transfer of Property Act is going to be revised, and I wish that the matter at that time will receive the careful attention of the Government of India. I am very much obliged to the Hon'ble the Law Member. "

The Resolution was, by permission, withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE FURLOUGH RULES FOR THE PROVINCIAL CIVIL SERVICE.

The Hon'ble Srijut Ghanasyam Barua :—" Sir, as it is very late in the day, and as I think it will be better to have an interview with the Member in charge on the subject, I will not move the Resolution this Session. Therefore, I would like to have your permission to withdraw the Resolution, keeping the right of moving it later, if necessary. "

The Hon'ble Mr. Wheeler :—" I will be very happy to explain any point connected with his Resolution to the Hon'ble Member on which he may wish for information."

The Resolution was, by permission, withdrawn.

The Council adjourned to Saturday, the 21st March, 1914.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE INDIAN COUNCILS ACTS, 1861 to 1909 (24 & 25 Vict., c. 67, 55 & 56 Vict., c 14, AND 9 Edw. VII, c. 4).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Saturday, the 21st March, 1914.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble SIR HARCOURT BUTLER, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., Vice-President, presiding, and 47 Members, of whom 41 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Rai Sri Ram Bahadur asked :—

Quantity and cost of country and foreign made paper bought by Government of India and Local Governments.

1. "Will the Government be pleased to supply the following information :—

(a) The total approximate quantity of country made paper (in reams or pounds) bought annually by the Government of India and the Local Governments and Administrations, together with its approximate annual cost to each Government or Administration.

(b) The total approximate quantity of foreign made paper (in reams or pounds) bought annually by the Government of India and the Local Governments and Administrations, together with its approximate annual cost to each Government or Administration.

(c) The names of individuals or firms in India and England who have contracts for the supply of paper to the Government of India and the Local Governments and Administrations.

(d) The total approximate quantity of paper manufactured annually by the Indian Paper Mills."

[Mr. Enthoven; Rai Sri Ram Bahadur; Sir Robert Carlyle; Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis.] [21ST MARCH, 1914.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Enthoven replied:—

"(a) and (b) A statement* is laid on the table showing approximately the total quantity of country and foreign made paper purchased during the years 1910-11, 1911-12 and 1912-13 under the heads 'Imperial,' 'Provincial' (except Bombay and Madras), 'Miscellaneous' including Railways, Bombay and Madras, together with its approximate cost. Separate figures for each Local Government and Administration are not available.

"(c) Paper supplied from England is obtained by indent on the Director General of Stores at the India Office. It is not known from what individuals or firms the Director General procures the necessary supplies. In India, the following firms have contracts for the supply of paper to Government:—

"The Titaghur Paper Mills, Bengal; the Bengal Paper Mills, Bengal; and the Deccan Paper Mills, Poona. Purchases are also made from Messrs. Parthasarathy Nayudo and Perumall Chetty and Sons, Madras.

"(d) About sixty million pounds of paper have been manufactured annually by the Indian Paper Mills during the three years ending 1912."

Appointment of Additional Sanitary Engineers in United Provinces.

2. "(1) Is the Government aware whether there are urgently required measures for the improvement of sanitation in the United Provinces, which cannot be taken in hand for want of a sufficient number of Sanitary Engineers?

"(2) (a) Has any requisition for the appointment of Additional Sanitary Engineers been received from the Government of the United Provinces?

"(b) If so, have any arrangements been made for the appointment of such officers and if so, when are they likely to take up their appointments?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Carlyle replied:—

"(1) The Government of India are aware that there is in the United Provinces a large number of schemes for the improvement of sanitation to be carried out, and the Government of the United Provinces has represented to them that the existing establishment of Sanitary Engineers is inadequate to deal with these schemes as expeditiously as they desire.

"2 (a) The answer to the first part of the second question is in the affirmative.

"(b) On the recommendations of the Government of India the Secretary of State was asked to sanction the appointment of two additional assistants to the Sanitary Engineer. These appointments he has sanctioned and he is now taking steps to secure the services of engineers possessing the requisite qualifications The Government of India are not at present in a position to say when the engineers who may be selected are likely to take up their appointments."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis asked:—

Amendment of Order VI, Rule 14, of First Schedule, Civil Procedure Code.

3. "(a) With reference to the Government reply to my question of 29th March, 1910, suggesting an amendment of Order VI, Rule 14, of the First Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908, have Government made the promised inquiry, and if so, with what result?

"(b) Have Government received lately a number of memorials on the subject?

"(c) If so, does Government propose to take any steps with a view to the amendment of the rule in question so as to authorise agents to sign plaints?"

* Vide Appendix.

The Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock replied:—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member appears to have overlooked the receipt by him of the Home Department letter No. 1695 of the 2nd December, 1910, to his address, in which the results of the inquiry suggested were considered, and reasons given for not proceeding with the amendment of the rule referred to.

"(b) The answer is in the negative.

"(c) The Government of India do not propose to take any further steps in the matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. Barua asked:—

Provision for accommodation of Indians of position for medical treatment in Delhi.

4. "(a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that there is no provision in any hospital in Delhi for the accommodation of Indians of position for treatment?

"(b) Is it a fact that Mr. B. Borooah, Proprietor of the firm of Messrs. B. Borooah & Co., lately met with a serious motor accident, and was admitted into the Hindu Rao's House Hospital?

"(c) Is it a fact that he was asked to quit it before he was fit to be discharged, and if so, on what grounds?

"(d) Is it a fact that the said hospital is maintained out of public funds?

"(e) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, do the Government propose to consider the desirability of making suitable provision for Indians of social position either by making the existing hospitals or some wards in them open for such accommodation or by making separate arrangements?

The Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock replied:—

"The only public hospital in Delhi is that maintained by the Municipal Committee. The accommodation therein is doubtless susceptible of improvement, and in fact an application has been made for a grant-in-aid towards that purpose, but pending the construction of the new city, in which a hospital will necessarily find a place, there are obvious reasons for proceeding with deliberation. When the establishments of the Government of India were removed to Delhi, hospital accommodation was arranged for their use in two houses, but these were not intended for the general public, except in emergency cases, if accommodation was available.

"Mr. Borooah was thus admitted to the Hindu Rao's House Hospital, but when it was ascertained that the injuries were not dangerous and that he could be moved, he was taken to an hotel.

"It may be mentioned that the medical treatment afforded at all three hospitals is the same. The Civil Surgeon is in charge, while the House Surgeon is an Assistant Surgeon."

The Hon'ble Sardar Daljit Singh asked:—

Raids in North-West Frontier Province.

5. "(1) Has there been any increase in the number of raids by trans-frontier tribesmen in the North-West Frontier Province in the last six months?

"(2) What steps (if any) are being taken to protect the subjects of His Majesty in the aforesaid province from such acts of aggression?

The Hon'ble Mr. Wood replied:—

"(1) There has been no marked increase in the number of raids by trans-frontier tribesmen in the North West Frontier Province during the last six months. The impression that such has been the case is probably due to the publicity given in the Press to the audacious outrages recently committed at Khairabad and Jehangira Railway Stations, coupled with two raids by Bunerwals in the Mardan Sub-division and a raid at Takht-i-Bahi by the Utmankhel tribe.

"(2) Steps have been and will continue to be taken to protect the subjects of His Majesty from such acts of aggression. The Khairabad and Jehangira cases are being dealt with through His Majesty the Amir of Afghanistan, in whose territory the perpetrators reside; and local measures have been taken to secure the safety of passenger trains travelling at night and to protect railway stations. On the 23rd February, the Malakand movable column proceeded into Buner territory and destroyed the villages of those tribesmen chiefly concerned in the Mardan case and a general blockade is now in progress against the Utmankhel tribe as a punishment for the raid committed at Mardan. A letter has also been addressed to His Majesty the Amir of Afghanistan on the subject of the Khost outlaws who are responsible for a number of outrages on the border."

BUDGET FOR 1914-15.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"I rise to present to the Council the Budget of the Government of India for 1914-15. The preliminary estimates which I laid before the Council on the 2nd March have been revised in the light of our latest information. The Financial Secretary's explanatory memorandum has also been checked and brought up to date.

"The final figures of the Revised estimate for 1913-14 and of the Budget estimate for 1914-15 are given in the statements* which I have to-day laid before the Council. The broad results of the revenue account are brought out in the table below, which Honourable Members will be able to compare with the corresponding tables given in paragraphs 7 and 20 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement:—

	BUDGET, 1913-14.			REVISED, 1913-14			BUDGET, 1914-15.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	Total.	Imperial	Provincial	Total.	Imperial.	Provincial	Total.
Expenditure . . .	51·718	32·193	83·911	52·290	31·309	83·599	52·981	34·048	87·029
Surplus (+) or Deficit (—).	+1·326	—2·913	—1·587	+1·487	—·602	+·885	+1·256	—3·206	—1·950

"The alterations which have been made in the figures of the Financial Statement are few and of no great importance. They involve no modifications of the financial proposals which I placed before the Council on the 2nd March; and all that I need do is to refer to the changes in the briefest possible manner.

"In our Revised estimate for the current year, we have made a few corrections, the net result of which is to raise the Imperial surplus by £159,000 and to reduce the Provincial deficit by £139,000. The Land Revenue is coming in better than we expected in Burma and the Punjab, and also, so far as the current year is concerned, in the United Provinces. Under this head a total improvement of £154,000 over our previous Revised estimate is now anticipated, of which Imperial will get £96,000 and Provincial £58,000. The March sale of uncertified opium in Calcutta has resulted in an increase of £33,000 in our Opium revenue. There is also a rise of £27,000 in the Miscellaneous receipts in England. In view of our latest revenue returns we have made some reduction in the Revised estimate of Excise revenue, but it is more than counterbalanced by improvements under Customs and Forests. The total Imperial expenditure in the current year will not materially differ from our previous Revised estimate; but in the Provincial Section a further lapse of £75,000 is now anticipated mainly under Education, Medical and Civil Works.

21ST MARCH, 1914.] [Sir William Meyer; Sir Reginald Craddock.]

"As regards the Budget of next year, the Imperial surplus is now expected to be about £24,000 less than the preliminary estimate, and there is a small reduction in the Provincial deficit. The Budget estimate under Land Revenue has been reduced by £133,000 in the United Provinces, where the deficiency in the winter rainfall will necessitate higher remissions than had previously been allowed for. The whole of this loss will fall on Imperial, for reasons which I have already explained in introducing the Financial Statement—in brief, the operation of the guarantee system. On the other hand, some improvement is expected in the Land Revenue collections in the Punjab and Burma, and of this increase Imperial will get £45,000 and Provincial £54,000. Thus on the whole the Imperial share of Land Revenue has come down by £88,000, while the Provincial share has gone up by £54,000. In view of the rise in the average price which took place at the March sale of uncertified opium, we have decided to raise the estimate of average sale price for the ensuing year from R1,600 to R1,700 a chest; and we have accordingly increased the Budget estimate of Opium revenue by £88,000. An expected decrease of £20,000 in Army receipts is counterbalanced by an equivalent reduction in the total grant for Military services, the net provision for Military services as a whole being thus kept unchanged. Provision has been made for an increase of £20,000 in the Miscellaneous charges in England which has recently been advised by the Secretary of State. In the Provincial section the increase under Land Revenue already mentioned, and a smaller improvement in the Excise revenue, are almost wholly counterbalanced by somewhat increased provision for expenditure made by some of the Provincial Governments.

"Turning now to Ways and Means, I have no changes to record in capital expenditure and none of any importance in receipts on capital account In consequence of the net improvement of about £300,000 in the revenue account in the current and ensuing years, and of an increase in the net receipts from certain miscellaneous remittance transactions, the total cash balance in our treasuries in England and India at the end of 1914-15 will be about £500,000 more than our previous estimate. The remittances to the Home Treasury by means of Council Bills have been increased by £500,000 in the current year; and the cash balance in our treasuries in India is now estimated at about £12½ millions on the 31st March 1915, the cash balance in the Home Treasury on that date standing at about £5 millions."

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock:—"Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act V of 1898, and the Court Fees Act of 1870. In the 16 years that have passed since the present Code was made law, various defects in it have been brought to light. It is inevitable that in a Code of such magnitude and importance imperfections should from time to time be revealed. The legal profession has grown in numbers and the number of cases in which accused persons are defended by counsel is annually increasing, and, as is only natural, the correct interpretation of the various provisions of the Code becomes a matter of greater argument and discussion. Nothing is more surprising sometimes than the manner in which a new interpretation of some section finds expression in the judgment of a Court. I have the greatest respect for the acumen of the legal profession, and in spite of the fondness of lawyers for precedents. they somehow manage to find exceptions to the rule that there is nothing new under the sun. In the course of years these points of doubt and difficulty accumulate until it becomes essential to undertake various amendments of the Code. And a periodical amendment of the Code has thus been a feature of its working ever since its first enactment.

"In the present instance the Police Commission made certain suggestions in connection with some of the sections of the Code which are concerned with police work. These suggestions were referred to Local Governments and their replies, together with other accumulated suggestions that have been made from time to time by one or other authority were collected, and a collection of these was sent out again to Local Governments in 1910. In sending their replies advantage was taken by High Courts and Local Governments to put forward various other proposals, suggested by difficulties either in the practical working or in the interpretation of particular provisions of the Code, which have been brought to light from time to time by various authorities, judicial and executive, who had experience of these difficulties. The whole of this large mass of suggestions and opinions has been examined most carefully by the Government of India. The present Bill is the outcome of that examination and of the sifting of the very numerous suggestions that have been received. Although the Bill contains 143 clauses, yet it makes no alterations in the main principles and structure of the Code and the modifications are largely matters of detail and not susceptible of presentation in a condensed form. The Statement of Objects and Reasons which accompanies the Bill is, however, particularly full and detailed and will enable the various amendments to be studied at leisure by the large class of people who take a real interest in the working of our criminal law, and it would be merely to take up the time of the Council unnecessarily were I at this stage to attempt any detailed analysis or explanation of these clauses individually. To do so I should indeed have to read out the whole of the Statement of Objects and Reasons. There will be ample opportunity for their careful study before the next stage is reached, and in addition to the material now available there will be the further opinions and criticisms on the Bill from Local Governments, from the High Courts and the public generally. These will in due course be collected and laid before a strong Select Committee of this Council. In these circumstances I will not take up the time of the Council further. I am merely asking for leave to introduce the Bill; it is not, as I have said, in any sense a revision of the Code; it merely singles out all those sections regarding which diversities of interpretation have come to light or in which practical working has shown practical defects. With these few preliminary remarks I move for leave."

The Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar :—"Sir, I venture to congratulate the Hon'ble the Home Member on the shortness of the statement accompanying the Bill. In my humble opinion it is as it ought to be formal and non-controversial. So the Bill will go before the country without any instructions from Government or this Council; but I desire, for a second, to point out that the time has come for throwing open the whole Code of Criminal Procedure for revision by this Council. We have now three Bills to amend the Code, one as to which leave is asked for just now, the other one introduced a few days ago in relation to enlarging the law as to contempt of Courts, and thirdly, the Bill, embodying the much vexed rescue provisions on which we had a full dress debate the other day on the motion that it be republished. Thus we have three different Bills all modifying one Code, and we shall be bound to have three different Select Committees and three sets of discussions thereon in Council. I believe it will save a considerable amount of the time of Council if all these Bills are consolidated into one Bill, and if that Bill is circulated after being introduced at the next Simla session. As has been pointed out by the Hon'ble the Home Member, the Code is substantially in the form in which it was enacted some 50 years ago; there have been amendments, from time to time; and I think it is time to revise the whole Code, principles and provisions. The more important reason, I think, is that Hon'ble non-official members who might like to introduce amendments to general parts of the Code will be at a considerable disadvantage. Although our rules are meagre on the subject, I believe the practice in Parliament and elsewhere is that amendments must be relevant to the other amendments introduced by the Bill or consequential or somehow related to them. I must grant that this principle has been liberally construed and applied; still, if any amendments which Hon'ble Members might propose to move are far too remote or not at all connected in some way or another with any of the amendments introduced by Government in any of the three Bills, they will have to introduce new Bills for embodying their amendments. Although, as I have said, our rules are not quite comprehensive on this point, they are likely to work hard in application in the light of the practice obtaining in Parliament, and Hon'ble Members will be hampered in the introduction of what they believe to be very desirable amendments to the existing law. I therefore pray that Government will be pleased, while these three Bills are being examined by the public, to consider the desirability of introducing a consolidating and amending Bill, so that the whole Code might be placed before the Council for revision. I have not yet had an opportunity to read the present Bill, but we are told that this Bill will consist of 143 clauses; and as the Code contains some 565 sections, this comes to less than ⅓rd and more than ¼th of the Code; and if to this we add the provisions of the other two Bills, it becomes sufficiently bulky. Assuming that we are in a position to introduce amendments relating to the Bill or consequential upon it, I believe the number will be multiplied by two or three So the work in three sections will be enormous in all. I have been for some time endeavouring to move a resolution to recommend the appointment of a small commission of experts, as in the matter of the Code of Civil Procedure, to examine the subject and to prepare a draft Code. I now beg leave to place before the Council and before the Hon'ble the Home Member, without throwing any obstruction in the way of sending out these three Bills for public opinion and for the opinions of the Local Governments, the desirability of introducing one Bill, consolidating these three Bills, on the ground of economy of time, and in view of giving greater facilities to Members to discuss the whole of the Code of Criminal Procedure."

The Hon'ble Malik Umar Hyat Khan:—"Sir, I rise to second the proposal of my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar. I have been for a long time advocating particularly the re-consideration of the whole law, and I think it requires seeing into. If that is done, I think that in future there will be less difficulty whenever there is a Bill forthcoming. If whole Bills are put before a Committee, as I asked one or two years ago and since have been asking more or less regularly, and if the whole thing, i.e., the criminal law, was seen through, there will be no difficulty in future, and people both outside the Council and in it will be able to put before the Government their views about certain sections. Many difficulties have been experienced in regard to the procedure of several cases carried on in keeping with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, and I do not know whether I am in order in referring to them.

"Sir, I think one of the causes why the administration of justice has not lately been carried out properly is the way in which the law is administered. Every one knows, I think, that there are certain defects in administration. For instance, supposing a man saw a man being murdered. he would be the last person to go to the Government officials and say that he had seen it, because if he did, the first thing would be that his zamanat would be taken; all that time the work at his home would suffer; then he would be cross-examined and after being examined by the police he would have to go to the Court, to the Magistrate, then to the Sessions Court and then to the Chief Court. There are the expenses for one thing; and another matter is the way in which these people [pointing to the Hon'ble Mr. Achariar, a lawyer] are allowed to cross-examine; they put all sorts of questions, showing that the man is a blackguard and that he is telling lies. These are the reasons why people do not come up; they say 'what is the use of appearing before the Court.' If the accused gets off the Government does not take care for the life and property of the witness and it is said that something is wrong in his evidence. Then again the same accused may murder or do something wrong or burn the house of the witness; he can do anything he likes if there are no witnesses forthcoming There is another difficulty; if there is one witness and he is a true witness, it may be said that he is mistaken. It is not possible that there should be two or three men present when the crime is being committed. Sir, I think if a man in Council desires to put forward his amendment or anything like it on the criminal law he should be allowed; and if anything is to be done at the time in the way of amendments of certain portions of the law, why not have it done thoroughly and revise the whole law?

"In urging these views I know I have taken up the time of the Council. But when amendments are being prepared, I think everybody should be allowed to put forward his views."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Sir the difficulty which is created by the present practice of asking for leave to introduce a Bill which is not before the Council has been well illustrated by the speeches delivered. None of us except the Hon'ble the Home Member and the Home Department know what the particular provisions of the Bill are to introduce which leave is asked for. The two Hon'ble Members who have spoken have made many suggestions for amending the Code, but for aught we know, if the Bill were before them, they might have been satisfied that the amendments which they wished to introduce were covered by the provisions of the Bill. We are also placed in this difficulty that we are asked to vote either for or against the motion for leave to introduce a Bill without knowing anything of it. This is the second time when I have drawn attention to the disadvantage arising from the present practice. and I hope the Hon'ble the Law Member will take the matter into his consideration with a view to amend the rules so as to provide that before a motion is submitted to the Council asking for an expression of opinion for or against it, there should be material enough before the Council to enable it to judge whether it should vote for or against the motion."

The Hon'ble Rai Sri Ram Bahadur:—"Sir, my friend the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya has placed before the Council the disadvantages under which we work in not having the Bill before us. In the short speech which the Hon'ble the Home Member has delivered just now there are some hints, but they are not sufficient to place us in possession of sufficient facts on which we could give an intelligent vote. The Bill, Sir, which has now been introduced is the third Bill relating to the amendment of the Criminal Procedure Code. We had first the Bill which was introduced at Simla in September last regarding the law affecting minor girls, then we had another Bill introduced two days ago the object of which is to amend the law relating to contempt of Courts. Now we have a third Bill to-day. We do not know, Sir, what are the special provisions of this Bill, but I must represent to the Council that such a procedure is not satisfactory. If there be one consolidated Criminal Procedure Code, it would be advantageous to the Bench, the Bar and also to the general public. Then there is another disadvantage under which the public will labour; they will not be in a position to make any suggestions for new provisions to be incorporated in the Bill, nor to suggest any improvements of some of the existing sections. I may suggest that the security provisions in the Code have not been found to be up to the mark, nor the provisions with regard to temporary orders under section 144. The subject of recording confessions is also one that requires reconsideration. There has been a great deal of correspondence on the subject; but I need not refer to its tenor at present. Then, Sir, there is the question of appeals against the orders of acquittal on behalf of the Government. There is another important provision of the Act, and that is the revision of the orders of lower Courts by the High Courts, on which there have been so many divergent rulings. I would mention another and the last instance, and that is the maintenance clauses of the present Criminal Procedure Code. If a Bill revising the whole Code be introduced, all these questions may be taken up by the Select Committee and the matter may be set at rest. With these remarks, Sir, I support the motion."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"Sir, I understand that in the House of Commons, when leave is asked to introduce a Bill, it is more or less a matter of form which has to be complied with. Are we going through a mere matter of form, or is this House called upon to record an intelligent vote upon the motion which is made by the Hon'ble the Home Member? If it is merely a matter of form, such as apparently is the practice in the House of Commons, I have nothing to say, but if this House—"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"May I rise to a point of order, Sir? This is not a House of Parliament: this is the Council of the Governor General for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"I just want to point out that I am discussing the question that if this is a matter of form, we have nothing further to say, but if we are to record an intelligent vote upon the motion made, then I agree with my Hon'ble friends who say that ampler materials ought to be placed before us in order that we may be able to do so. I think that is a simple issue, and I don't think that the Hon'ble Member is justified in interrupting me in this matter—"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I think that I may rule that, as a matter of practice of this Council, a motion for leave to introduce a Bill is frequently treated as a matter of form."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"Then I have nothing further to say."

The Hon'ble Mr. Madhu Sudan Das:—"Sir, as the proposal is a matter of form, the only course left to us would be to propose, when the other two Bills come up, that their further progress be stayed, and if, on examining the amendments which are proposed to be made in the Criminal Procedure Code, Hon'ble Members find it desirable, the three Bills may be allowed to be considered together. I think the Hon'ble Home Member ought to be prepared to receive suggestions of that nature, should the amendments proposed in the Bill now introduced show that it would be better to consider all the three Bills together."

The Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock:—"Sir, with reference to the various remarks that have been made by Hon'ble Members upon this motion, I should like to say that there are two methods by which Bills are brought before the Council. In one set of circumstances, with the special sanction of the Viceroy, previous publication of the Bill is made before the subject is brought before the Council at all. When that is done, it is unnecessary to make any formal motion for leave to introduce the Bill. On the other hand, if it has not been previously published, the procedure is to move for leave to introduce it. Now, it is perfectly clear, and no one would wish to deny that Hon'ble Members who have not had a Bill before them are naturally not able to commit themselves to any definite expression of opinion on the details of that measure, and consequently, what generally happens is that the general principles of the measure are explained by the Member who is moving or leave to introduce it, and with regard to those general principles so far as they appear from the speech the Council are at liberty to express their primâ facie opinion as to whether, on hearing his explanation, they are desirous of the Bill being introduced and of the subsequent steps being taken, i.e., publication and so forth. That has been the case with the various Bills that I have had the honour to introduce in this Council. I have explained the general principles and Hon'ble Members have generally either given their adherence to those principles or expressed dissent, as the case may be, in both cases reserving their opinion on matters of detail.

"In the present Bill, as I have explained, the variety of clauses is such, and the details involved are such, that there can be no general principle for me to expound. I have stated that the amendments are designed either to meet the cases of different interpretations or of practical difficulties in work, and if the Council accepts this motion it merely means that they agree that, when in the course of working the law differences of interpretation arise and practical difficulties are felt in practical working, it is desirable to have a measure to set at rest doubts regarding their interpretation and to remove those difficulties which have been experienced in the practical working: that is all that the Council is asked to assent to to-day.

"Suggestions have been made by the Hon'ble Mr. Achariar, the Hon'ble Mr. Sri Ram and the Hon'ble Mr. Das, that as we have other Bills before us for amending certain parts of the Criminal Procedure Code, all three Bills might be taken together. Now, Sir, as I have explained, the present Bill deals with those amendments of detail which experience has shown to be necessary; the two other Bills to which reference has been made represent something much more than this. Although the Bill in connection with minors was, for convenience, included partly in the Code of Criminal Procedure, it was partly concerned with amendments to the Indian Penal Code. Furthermore, it was introducing new principles as well as new procedure into our law, and it would complicate matters enormously if a Bill of this kind, the objects of which I have explained, were to be joined up with matter of the kind contained in the Bill for the better protection of minors. Similarly, as regards the Bill dealing with contempts of Court, that Bill is essentially an amendment of the Indian Penal Code and the amendments which it proposes in the Criminal Procedure Code are purely consequential amendments following on that Bill.

"Then again it has been suggested that the proper way of dealing with this matter would be to have a complete revision of the whole Code of Criminal Procedure, so that every portion of it might come under the scrutiny of the Council and it might be amended from beginning to end. Well, Sir, that is not at all the object which we have in view. In putting forward this Bill our object is, as I have stated more than once, to remove difficulties which have been felt and not to re-open and rip up the whole of our criminal procedure from beginning to end. Although these clauses may be numerous, many of them represent extremely small changes. The Criminal Procedure Code has, I think it may be said, stood the test of time very satisfactorily, and if we were to dream of undertaking the task of ripping open the whole of our Criminal Procedure Code and starting again from first principles, I do not know how many years would be occupied by so colossal a task, and meantime these necessary amendments, the necessity of which has been demonstrated by the practical working of fifteen years, would have to remain entirely in abeyance.

"For these reasons, Sir, I will ask that the motion for leave to introduce the Bill be now put."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock:—"Sir, I now beg to introduce the Bill and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local official Gazettes in English, and in such other languages as the Local Governments think fit."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"The Council is adjourned to Tuesday, the 24th instant, at 11 o'clock. I may remind Hon'ble Members that the practice of this Council is that speeches on the budget debate are limited to 20 minutes."

The Council adjourned to Tuesday, the 24th March, 1914.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE INDIAN COUNCILS ACTS, 1861 to 1909 (24 & 25 Vict., c. 67, 55 & 56 Vict., c. 14, & 9 Edw. VII, c. 4).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Tuesday, the 24th March, 1914.

PRESENT :

His Excellency BARON HARDINGE OF PENSHURST, P.C., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., I.S.O., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 60 Members, of whom 52 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis asked :—

1. "Has the attention of Government been drawn to the leaders in the issues of the Amrita Bazar Patrika of 6th and 9th March current, headed 'The Famine and Famine Insurance Fund'? Famine Insurance Fund.

"(b) If so, does Government propose to make a full statement on the subject of this Famine Insurance Fund, with a view to remove popular misconception, if any, on this subject?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"The Government have seen the leading articles referred to in the question.

"The objects of the grant and the purposes to which it is applied were fully explained by my predecessor in replying to a Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale on the 9th March, 1910. The past history of the question has also been summarized on pages 188-189 of Volume IV of the Imperial Gazetteer.

Briefly, the grant remains at its original figure of Rs. 1½ crores, though the fact that under the conventional valuation of the rupee at 2*s*. then current, this sum originally represented £1½ million, and is now equivalent to £1 million only, appears to have caused some misapprehension on this point. Half the grant is applied to such irrigation and railway projects—in practice almost exclusively to the former—as are definitely expected to confer protection against famine on the area which they serve. The remaining half is applied in good years to the financing of productive capital expenditure, that is, for the most part to railway construction, and thus contributes to the improvement of communications which now so greatly mitigate the unhappy consequences of a defective rainfall by enabling food supplies to be moved freely to the areas affected and by conducing to a more uniform level of prices. These allotments have also materially strengthened our general financial position by leaving us with a smaller volume of unproductive debt than would otherwise have been attained, and so improving our borrowing powers in years of actual famine. Finally, when famine does occur, this reserve of revenue can, if necessary, be applied to actual famine relief, and as Hon'ble Members are aware under a recent but somewhat technical development of the system, the burden of such relief has now to a large extent been transferred to the shoulders of the Central Government. The Famine Insurance Grant thus continues to serve its original purposes in a very real and valuable way,—more effectively indeed than if the Government had rigidly adhered to the exact form of the earliest experiments in this direction."

The Hon'ble Raja Jai Chand asked :—

Raids in North-West Frontier Province.

2. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any measures for the better protection of life, person and property of British subjects in the North-West Frontier Province are under consideration? If so what?

"(b) Is it a fact that gangs of wandering Pathans from beyond the border, generally known as Hing sellers in the Punjab, commit crimes wherever they happen to resort among British subjects? If so, does Government propose to authorise the police to remove such gangs from villages and other places which they frequent or where they put up?"

The Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock replied :—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to the Hon'ble Sardar Daljit Singh.

"(b) The matter is one for the Local Governments concerned, but it is thought that the evil is overstated in the terms of the Hon'ble Member's question."

The Hon'ble Raja Jai Chand asked :—

Memorial from landholders of new colonies in Punjab.

3. "Has the Government of India received any memorial from landholders of new colonies in the Punjab? If so, has Government considered the memorial and what, if any, is its decision thereon?"

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Carlyle replied :—

"The answer to the Hon'ble Member's question is in the negative."

BUDGET, 1914-15.

His Excellency the President :—" I would remind Hon'ble Members that the limit of duration of speeches to-day will be 20 minutes, and I must ask them to adhere strictly to that rule."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis :—" My Lord, the very lucidity of the Financial Statement is likely to divert the public attention from certain important points. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer's frankness is attractive, and the innovations he has introduced have, with some exceptions, our hearty approval. The increased facilities for deposit in the Post Office Savings Bank, the bigger Rupee Loan and the accommodation to trade out of Government surpluses are all measures in which the Hon'ble Member has the country with him. Each has its own set of wholesome effects upon the economic condition of the people. But the necessity, or even the utility, of a reserve of two crores of rupees against ' capital commitments ' after capital expenditure has been fully provided for is not clear. The practical extinction of our opium revenue from the China trade, after symptoms of an abnormal vitality during the last few years, taken along with the record loan provision of 17 crores of rupees in 1914-15, though for capital expenditure, is matter for serious consideration. India will not be reconciled to the inevitable consequence of the British Opium policy by the fact, emphasised by the Hon'ble Finance Minister, that ' in China . . . . cultivation still continues in several of the provinces, and there is still a large local demand for opium and a considerable amount of local production.' My Lord, the surrender of an annual revenue of five or six million pounds sterling from sentimental or ethical considerations is a unique historical act the merit of which disappears from its being forced upon us. It is difficult to overlook the fact that, but for this loss, our borrowings would be considerably less. I am aware, according to some, our annual loans are not onerous because they are reproductive. But whether unproductive or reproductive, they spell increasing indebtedness, and it will be conceded that indebtedness is worse than freedom from debt. Anything, therefore, which reduces the revenue and increases this indebtedness is serious. Besides, the budgetted loan of 17 crores of rupees is not all for reproductive works. A dispassionate consideration of the whole situation will justify the claim India has more than once put forward for a substantial contribution from the Imperial Exchequer by way of compensation for the loss of our handsome opium revenue.

" My Lord, the railways bulk large in the budget; they absorb two-thirds of the total allotment for capital expenditure. And this when the Hon'ble Finance Minister himself draws pointed attention to the uncertainties and the unsatisfactoriness of the railway profits. I have always maintained that, though the railways for their civilising influence and economic results are valuable, the time has come when only a cautious advance should be made in the matter of extension of trunk lines. Improvements have become more necessary than extension. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer indeed has acted upon this principle, and the allotment for construction next year represents a small proportion of the total. On the other hand, there is large scope for activity in branch lines and feeder lines, and extension should be encouraged by Government as much as possible. The Hon'ble Finance Minister refers to the existing liberal rules regulating construction of branch lines, but nothing is said about feeder lines. In my humble opinion, Government should encourage the construction of these lines by guaranteeing a small return upon the capital outlay. A Government guarantee will prove far more stimulating to private enterprise than a District Board guarantee. I hope the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer will favourably consider the advisability of adopting this policy if only to provide safe and sound investments for the people

" While I am on this subject of railway development, it is but bare justice that I, an old friend with an intimate knowledge of his capabilities and work, should record on the eve of his retirement our appreciation of the solid services rendered by the Hon'ble Sir Trevredyn Wynne in this matter of railway development.

" My Lord, an examination of the capital expenditure leads to the agreeable discovery that the fears of the opponents of the transfer of the Capital to Delhi have been falsified by the care and watchfulness evinced by Government in the settlement and execution of the programme of construction. The expenditure has been well kept down, and maximum of economy appears to be the determining principle with the further guarantee against waste supplied by the close personal supervision of Your Excellency. We all hope New Delhi will provide to the people an inspiring example of town building at a minimum of cost and within a short time, and will be a capital city worthy of this great Empire.

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has shown commendable solicitude for local bodies in providing a recurring grant of £40,000 'for the remission of a number of miscellaneous contributions which local authorities at present pay to local Governments as a return for services rendered.' May we expect that he will in the same spirit relax the rules relating to 'lapse' in grants, and thereby increase the financial resources of those bodies? The existing system encourages, at times, thoughtless and wasteful expenditure, as there is always present a desire to spend during the year the whole amount to prevent lapse. This, as can well be seen, does not contribute to economy in administration.

"My Lord, the steady growth of revenue from the sale of postage stamps for postal purposes (Rs. 2,97,73,000 in 1913-14 against Rs. 2,47,43,396 in 1910-11, or an increase of 20 per cent. in four years) suggests a further concession in inland rates. The increase in the maximum weight of a single letter carried for half-anna to two tolas would be greatly appreciated. The maximum weight for one anna is ten tolas as against one tola for half-anna. The disparity is too great. The concession, I am sure, will not entail any serious and permanent loss of revenue.

"My Lord, agricultural improvement is a subject of perennial interest to us, and the only criticism I feel justified in offering, especially after the sympathetic speeches of the Hon'ble Sir Robert Carlyle on the Revenue Resolutions of this year, is that Government has shown reasonable interest in the matter, and that, in view of all the circumstances, the advance we have made is satisfactory. It is further gratifying to note that moderation in assessment is an aim which the Government has kept steadily in view. The recent encouraging references made by the Hon'ble Sir Robert Carlyle to the decreasing proportion borne by the land revenue to the total revenue of the country and his desire to see a still further improvement in that direction will, I am sure, have a moderating and wholesome effect upon settlements and assessments in the country.

"My Lord, agricultural improvement and moderate assessments do not exhaust the reforms so necessary for the amelioration of the economic condition of the people. There is another great need. The increased pressure upon land, admitted by all, should be relieved, and that can only be done by encouraging industrial development. And in connection with this question of industrial development the need for a change in the economic policy of this Government is becoming acuter everyday. My Lord, practically all India wants protection, and failing that, many would be content with a preferential tariff. And, as an enabling condition, we claim fiscal autonomy. Our claim is founded upon the highest considerations of justice and fairness as also the exigencies of the situation. The Indian feeling on these points is rapidly growing in volume and intensity. It is not for our industrial development alone that we demand this change in our fiscal relations with the Imperial Power, but the growing financial needs of this Government supply an equally powerful reason. It is true the extinction of our opium revenue from the trade with China has not so far directly necessitated additional taxation, but the fact must not be ignored that our expenditure is equated to some extent by revenue derived from some imposts regarding the wisdom of which public opinion is, by no means, unanimous. Reasonably heavy customs duties would enable Government to readjust taxation and relieve them of all anxiety for revenue. But without fiscal autonomy we are helpless. My Lord, we would bless the loss of our opium revenue if the consequential financial necessities of this Government help us to secure this autonomy. Out of evil cometh good, and even that detestable growth of a militant civilisation, anarchism, has evoked an outburst of loyalty from all sections of the people, has rallied round Government the sober elements of society, and has brought into relief the splendid devotion and fidelity of the Indian public servant. God grant, the loss of our opium trade with China is attended with good, and leads to the grant to us by the Imperial Government of a far more substantial benefit than an Imperial contribution, fiscal independence.

"My Lord, one word about a Provincial matter. The Central Provinces from all report have advanced rapidly in education, public spirit, financial resources, revenue and importance, and the time has come when the question of raising the status of the local administration may be sympathetically considered. I beg to repeat here the submission I have made before that we should now have a Lieutenant-Governor.

"My Lord, I cannot conclude without expressing, on behalf of the Province I represent, our sincere joy at the successful termination of the labours of the South African Inquiry Commission, the members of which have approached the subject in a spirit of reasonable compromise. To Your Excellency whole India is profoundly grateful for your determined and patriotic stand against unjust treatment of the Indian settler in South Africa. We all feel that, but for Your Excellency's bold, statesmanlike and timely interference, the South African Indian question would not have been settled so satisfactorily. My Lord, allow me to point out that Your Excellency's efforts in this behalf have been well supplemented by the earnest and skilful advocacy on the spot of this Government's able and experienced representative, I mean the Hon'ble Sir Benjamin Robertson. I feel a peculiar pride in that the effective interpretation of your wishes on the spot should have fallen to the lot of a Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces."

The Hon'ble Malik Umar Hyat Khan :—"My Lord, while congratulating the Hon'ble the Finance Member for making the best of a year of somewhat indifferent prosperity consequent on drought and other causes, I will briefly allude to some other points which are directly or indirectly connected with the Budget, since no alterations proposed to further any scheme or suggestions leading thereto can be effected without the aid of money. During this session many various points have been brought under discussion on which the members have had the fullest opportunity to ventilate their views. The more the members put forward various subjects in the form of Resolutions and initiate debates of this character, the less important and fascinating feature do the Budget speeches assume on the last field-day.

"I am glad to say that I am getting more and more satisfied with the changes effected by the Government. It has been a strange coincidence that many of my suggestions have been approved of in spirit and accepted in total or part thereof. I do not desire to suggest that Government was exclusively moved by my observations, but I can safely say this much that a necessity was felt by the Government to move in the direction advocated by me. I stated in my last year's Budget speech that my suggestions about changing the law regarding state offenders, inflicting on them severer punishment, increasing the power of Criminal Investigation Department, reforming the educational system and shifting the capital, met with the approval of the Government to a great extent. I emphasised the necessity of a general change in criminal law and procedure, and I am glad to find that the Bills are now introduced to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code; and I am sure that similar further amendments will continue to be introduced when the Government realizes the troubles suffered by the individuals in getting justice, which I have alluded to briefly in connection with the presentation of one of the above Bills. I laid stress on the urgency of making the Press Act more drastic and efficient than its present form. I am glad to find that the Government by rejecting the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee's Resolution have indicated that there is no intention to restrict or relax the provisions of the Code. I also hope that a further move will be made to put a permanent stop to a paper the security of which has been forfeited more than once.

"Dealing with this subject I would like to suggest that there should be an official journal translated in widely spoken languages and circulated in masses to counteract misconceptions created by ill-informed papers about the motives of the Government and their officers, as the present Government Gazettes are insufficient to meet such a necessity. I complained last year against the insufficiency of time given to the Members to discuss various important matters; but I am very glad to find this year that such has not been the case.

"As to the resolutions in respect of which last year I invited the Government to show more sympathy, I think that matters have much improved as a whole, but at the same time I must confess that the language in which they were couched, and the nature of their wholesale demand for the appointment of different committees composed of official and non-official members and consultation with local Governments, were of such a type that if they had been adopted and non-official members freely taken on the above committees, there would have been no non-official member left in this Council to-day to make speeches; and ordinary business of many officials would have materially suffered A great variety of different subjects which I put before the Decentralization Commission are receiving careful consideration, and it will be premature and a waste of time if I alluded to them here in the Council. While carefully going through my previous Budget speeches I find that on most of the matters I am entirely of the same opinion; and, instead of putting them before the Council again, I will only request that a further consideration should be given to them.

"I will now, however, briefly touch on some subjects in which I am particularly interested. The first of these is Islam and its followers in the Punjab, whom I represent. I desire to draw attention of Government to the true sense of steadfast and unwavering loyalty which they have conspicuously and admirably manifested to the Crown and their entire aloofness from the propaganda of sedition and anarchy in trying times of universal commotion in the Near East. This can well be judged from the text of a memorial which they hope conjointly to present to Your Excellency to-morrow. Their conduct and attitude were still more admirable, as some clever journalists, from selfish financial motives and a desire to bring themselves into notoriety, tried to strike a blow at their fidelity; but I am glad to say, in vain. I thank the Government on behalf of the Punjab Mohammedans for their kindly giving a helping hand to a backward community with the express purpose of raising them to the level of the advanced sister communities. For all Mohammedans the reading of their holy book is a religious obligation and as it contains multifarious subjects—social, moral, spiritual, historical and legal, etc.,—to comprehend which a sound education is of supreme necessity and equally obligatory, the Government, I hope, will always afford them every facility to acquire it by granting them liberal funds for the maintenance of their literary institutions.

"Turning to the army, I only remind the Council of my speech I delivered the other day on the Resolution proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Rayaningar in connection with the Nicholson Committee, and, admitting, that a great deal has been done by our previous Commander-in-Chief towards elevating the prestige of Indian officers and bettering the position of the army in general, I am sanguine that we are at the dawn of a new era under the auspices of the command of our present war-lord and that a further advance in the same direction will be made. The advance can only be accomplished by the aid of our Finance Minister, because the increase of pensions and pay, efficiency in various arms, construction of better lines and army defence works, navies and air-craft, etc., require funds. The funds available can safely be utilised by our new Commander-in-Chief, who comes here with not only the matured experiences of the armies of the British Empire, but has also closely studied the problems relating to the continental armies by personally visiting the whole continent and seeing the armies at their respective manœuvres. I hope that some regulations will also be framed in regard to the honorary rank so that the officers newly appointed should not supersede those already holding commissions. As to my detailed suggestions about various matters affecting the army, I do not think it necessary or desirable to trouble the Council in regard to them.

"Turning to the agriculturists, I draw the attention of the authorities again towards the petty land-holder whose income is inadequate to meet his bare requirements of food in the year. He should be exempted from land revenue, as that will be taxing his food.

"Being the oldest member in the Council from the Punjab and speaking on behalf of the Punjabees generally I can say from my personal experiences of rural and urban areas that they have absolutely alienated their sympathies from the anarchical movements and are only horrified at hearing that some of the Punjabees should have been arrested in connection with such sinister movements. But all are of opinion that this movement is not from within but from without and only amongst half a dozen immature youngsters from the population of about two and a half crores. When the Punjab is under the rule of Sir Michael O'Dwyer, it should be considered a settled fact that it will remain a sedition-proof province."

"The Council will remember that I made certain remarks about certain drawbacks in the working of the railways last year; but owing to the transfer of capital from Calcutta to Delhi, a great change for good has come to pass since last year in the Punjab; and, apart from many other lines, there is a line under construction from Sangla Hill to Sargodha and Khushab, which will greatly open up my part of the country.

"It will not only be beneficial for the spread of trade and commerce but will immensely serve the strategical purposes, being a shorter route to the frontier; and it may prove of the greatest value with the aid of another line from Bhera to Khushab. But it is hoped that the lines will be broad-gauged, as otherwise a great deal of the Railway's carrying capacity will be lost for important and useful purposes."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mir Asad Ali Khan:—"My Lord, I rise to congratulate the Hon'ble Finance Minister on the successful Budget he has presented to the Council. In a lean year like the present he managed to show an Imperial surplus of nearly a million and a half pounds This surplus is even more than what was anticipated last year. 'In present circumstances,' says the Hon'ble Member, 'it is desirable to have an unalloted balance of about £1,280,000 to assist us in our heavy capital commitments.' 'Such a surplus,' he adds further, 'also serves the purpose of a reserve against unforeseen contingencies.' It appears to me that the real purpose of a reserve is defeated when the amount is proposed to be utilised for meeting any charges other than unforeseen contingencies. In the absence of any considera-tion for heavy capital commitments, the reserve might have been still further reduced, and a substantial portion of it might have been added to the educa-tional grants. As it is, only £240,000 is available for disposal. Burma carries away a large non-recurring grant of £100,000, and a number of miscellaneous contributions claim a recurring grant of £40,000. But education and sanitation seem destined to receive recurring grants of £60,000 and £40,000 respectively. While 'fully recognising the necessity of adequate provision for the increase in expenditure which the great advance now being made in education and sani-tation must inevitably entail,' the Hon'ble Finance Minister still finds it impracticable to go further than is proposed, as regards Imperial allotments. But I venture to submit that in view to a further increased surplus, he might have allotted an increased grant to education. For a recurring grant of £60,000 is hardly adequate to meet the growing needs of the country. Whether in fat years or lean years education and sanitation ought to claim a substan-tially large share of the Imperial grants, as they have continued to receive during Your Excellency's prosperous regime. While the budgeted expenditure last year on education under Imperial and Provincial heads was estimated at over six crores, the revised estimate has brought the figure down to less than five crores of rupees. I am, therefore, somewhat doubtful if the budgeted figures for 1914-15, now standing at about six crores under Imperial and Provincial heads, may not come down as near the revised estimate for 1913-14. While I plead before this Council for an increased grant to educa-tion, I do deplore the incapacity of the Provincial Governments to spend the large balances in their hands. 'The underspending of the Provincial Governments,' says the Hon'ble Member, 'falls mainly under education and medical.' That the Local Governments should allow the accumulation of large unspent balances may possibly lead to the curtailment of Imperial grants. I should, however, like to remind the Provincial Governments of the copy-book maxim, 'never put off till to-morrow, what you can do to-day.'

"My Lord, I am very thankful to Your Excellency's Government for their liberal and progressive educational policy, particularly as regads the development of Moslem education. My community gratefully appreciates the earnest resolve of the Government of India to improve and promote Moslem education. During the last five years our youths have made considerable progress in education as is evident from the last quinquennial Report on Education. The number of mussalman pupils under instruction has risen by 32·3 per cent. as against 25 8 per cent in the case of pupils of all classes in India. Again, it is very satisfactory to note that there has been an increase of 75 per cent. in the number of mos'em gir's under instruction. These are indeed healthy signs of our national progress.

"Referring to the needs of our community, the Educational Report frankly admits,—'Its needs require special measures; and the account of its progress demands separate treatment.' It is, therefore, necessary, My Lord, that a portion of the Imperial grant towards education should in future be ear-marked for moslem education. Satisfactory as the progress of our youths is in the elementary and secondary stages of education, they have yet to make their way in higher education. 'The community,' says the Report, 'is still very backward in the field of higher education.' While the remedy to a great extent lies in our own hands, we may yet seek the willing assistance of our benign Government. I may, however, suggest the desirability of (a) appointing more mussalman Inspectors of school, and as an experimental measure, a few qualified moslem Inspectresses of school in selected areas. (b) training lady teachers for zenana instruction in private homes, and (c) giving a number of state scholarships to moslem youths to prosecute their studies at colleges in India and abroad. Moreover, in primary and secondary stages of education, special schools with Urdu as the medium of instruction are needed in each province. Minor details as regards the suitability of text books, the mode of instruction, the school fees, etc., may be left to the discretion of the local authorities.

"In the course of his Financial Statement, the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer truly observed, 'Our financial position rests ultimately on agricultural and trade conditions' It is no less the duty of the Government than of the people that continued effort shall be made to promote the agricultural as well as the commercial prosperity of the land. Indians are deeply grateful to the Government for all they have recently done to improve agriculture. Increased facilities for the acquisition of scientific knowledge, measures of relief of agricultural indebtedness, irrigation projects, introduction of the improved methods of agriculture establishment of model farms, and extension of the co-operative movement are the outstanding features of agricultural reform. Just as agriculture is being developed, the trade of India, especially the indigenous trade, My Lord, needs to be developed through State aid. Some good old industries have disappeared under the stress of modern competition. New industries on up-to-date lines have to face certain difficulties, such as want of large capital, skilled labour and effective co-operation. If at this stage the Government would step in and help to promote at least small industries, it would certainly give an impetus to the growth of Indian industries. In my own province something was attempted in this direction, and the successful results showed the wisdom of a new policy. The aluminium and chrome tanning industries were started and worked successfully under Government auspices, until recently they were sold to private agencies. In his admirable Industrial Survey of the Madras Presidency, a chapter added to the last Census Report for Madras Mr Alfred Chatterton remarked :

While the work actually done under Government supervision was by no means inconsiderable since it resulted in the successful establishment of the aluminium industry, of the chrome leather industry, of irrigation by pumping, of the rural industrial factory, and in the substitution of the fly-shuttle loom for the indigenous hand loom over large areas, it may claim even indirect results of greater importance as the operations of the Department of Industries have undoubtedly stimulated private enterprise in every part of the Presidency.

"I venture to submit that the Imperial Government will be pleased to consider a scheme of state-owned or state-aided industries at suitable centres. Small Government factories, workshops, tanneries, and manufactories may be set up as models. Side by side with these concerns, technical schools may come into existence, so that youths trained in these schools may find employment in state-managed industrial concerns. In this way, My Lord, may be met the objection to want of industries for providing trained youths with suitable employment. As the scheme develops and progresses, it is likely to solve to a great extent the problem of the unemployed.

"Quite a number of stores are yearly purchased both in India and abroad for Government use. Some of these can be manufactured or made in state-owned or state-aided industrial concerns, if ever they come into existence. I do not want that the Government should embark upon any large industrial enterprise, but I do want that the Government should give all reasonable facilities and possible aid to indigenous industries, and set up small industrial concerns as models only for a time to come. In the fullness of time, when Government aid is no longer necessary, these Government concerns may with advantage be sold to private companies or parties. I for one feel sanguine that this modest scheme of state-managed industries may be given a safe trial.

"In view to the early disappearance of our opium revenue and the growing expenditure on several objects of public utility, we need more and more revenue to meet the ever-increasing demands on our Exchequer. I may, therefore, suggest the desirability of revising our tariff rates on imported articles, and of raising the customs duties, wherever practicable, purely for revenue purposes. As an alternative I may be permitted to suggest that the question of preferential tariff which was raised and discussed in this Council last year be taken into the serious consideration of the Government. India badly needs protection of her indigenous and infant industries. What form this much-needed protection may take in order to suit Indian conditions is a matter I leave in the hands of the Government.

"Before concluding my remarks, I may be permitted, My Lord, to express my deep thanks as well as the thanks of my community and of my Presidency for the very warm interest Your Excellency has taken in the welfare of our countrymen in distant South Africa. But for Your Excellency's courageous statesmanship and the firm attitude of Your Excellency's Government, the South African question would not have been nearer a practical solution. The recommendations of the South African Commission of Inquiry, so far as they go, are indeed satisfactory. I do hope and trust that the Union Government will see their way to accept them in their entirety."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"My Lord, my first words on this occasion will be words of congratulation to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister for his clear and exhaustive financial statement. The Statement may perhaps be lacking in some of the superficial elements of attractiveness; it may seem a bit prosaic, and a trifle gloomy; but, My Lord, in the simple, clear, direct presentment of the situation and in the evident anxiety which it displays throughout to place the fullest information before this Council and the country, it will stand favourable comparison with previous financial statements and will afford a valuable guide to the exposition of our present financial position. My Lord, in the opening words of the Financial Statement, the Hon'ble the Finance Minister says that it is his earnest wish to maintain the friendly relations between this Council and the Financial Department which have been bequeathed to him by his great predecessor. Speaking for myself, and I may claim to speak also on behalf of the non-official Members, I may say that we warmly reciprocate the sentiment. I may say that both in regard to his Department and other Departments the realisation of that ideal will largely depend upon the attitude of these Departments and the spirit which inspires them under the control and guidance of their honoured chiefs. My Lord, official and popular opinion will sometimes differ; we cannot always see eye to eye with our official colleagues in this Council Chamber; there must be differences of opinion and occasionally they will be expressed with considerable emphasis, but, My Lord, an atmosphere of charity, and of tolerance, of mutual esteem and mutual regard will go far to exercise a soothing influence upon our deliberations and soften the acerbities of our debates. My Lord, an educated Indian taking up the Budget Statement and glancing through its pages has his attention irresistibly drawn to the provision under Sanitation and Education. That is his test; and judging of the present financial statement by that test, I must confess to a feeling of disappointment. We have only a grant of £100,000 for sanitation and education. My friend to the left, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, asked for an extra grant of £640,000; but it was refused, chiefly on the ground that there were large unspent balances in the hands of Provincial Governments, and that even if the Provincial Governments were able to spend the grants which they had budgetted for in the coming year, they would have an unspent balance of over £2,000,000 in their hands. My Lord, I cannot shut my eyes, no body can shut his eyes, to the force of the objection. But who is responsible for these unspent balances? Certainly not the people, certainly not their representatives. My Lord, I quite admit that sanitary and educational projects need to be carefully thought out and as carefully worked out, but Sanitation and Education are the most pressing amongst our problems. As regards Sanitation I will say this that the issues are immediate; and indeed pressing; and that delay is dangerous; for it may mean the loss of human life and the prolongation of human misery. From my place in the Bengal Legislative Council I asked the Government last session to submit statements showing details of proposed expenditure in connection with Sanitation and Education out of the Imperial grants. So far as Education was concerned my request was complied with; so far as Sanitation was concerned, my request was rejected. My Lord, it seems to me that the true solution of the situation lies in the association of the people in the work—the goading influence of popular opinion and popular enthusiasm will spur on Local Governments and quicken their pace. There is a suggestion that I would like to make and it is that Committees of the Legislative Councils of officials and non-officials should be associated with the authorities in the matter of this expenditure. I do hope that an arrangement of this kind, if it goes forth with the imprimatur of the Government of India, will expedite the pace of the administrative machinery. My Lord, on the subject of education I feel constrained to say a word or so about technical instruction. The attention of the Government has largely been devoted to literary education. We rejoice that it has been so, for, whatever national spirit, whatever patriotic impulse, whatever enthusiasm for the public good exists at the present moment, among my countrymen, is due largely to the beneficent and the awakening influence of that education which we have received at the feet of our English instructors. I gratefully acknowledge the fact, I am proud to acknowledge the fact in this Council Chamber, in the presence of the august head of the Government of India. But, My Lord, our industries need to be revived. There is a visible industrial awakening all over the country; it can only be led into fertilizing channels by technical education. The Government appreciates the need of technical education; indeed the Government of Bengal proposes to establish a technological institute, I hope and trust it will soon be an accomplished fact.

"But, My Lord, there is a cloud no bigger than a man's hand which darkens the horizon in Bengal at the present moment. It is proposed to transfer the Sibpur Engineering College from the vicinity of Calcutta and establish it in Dacca, making it a part of the Dacca University. We have not the slightest objection to there being an Engineering College at Dacca, but it would be a deplorable blunder to remove an engineering college, fully equipped for all branches of engineering education, from the vicinity of a great industrial centre like Calcutta. I think in this matter I am speaking with some confidence and voicing the sense not only of the Indian, but also that of the local Anglo-Indian community.

"Intimately connected with the question of sanitation is the question of the waterways of Bengal. Our river system is in a deplorable condition and is a source of anxiety to the public and the Government alike. Many of our rivers have silted up, or are fast silting up; and what has been the result? The drainage of large areas has been interrupted and the country around has been exposed to the attacks of malarious fever. In the Jessore district there has been a sensible decrease in the population owing to the ravages of malaria. The same story is repeated in Nadia. In the Dacca district the Dhaleswari river is silting up. A waterways committee has been appointed and my friend over there is a member of that Committee. But we want funds.

"It is no use elaborating large projects of drainage or irrigation, when we have not got the money. Looking over the secretary's memorandum, I find no provision made for any scheme of water communication in Bengal. Possibly it is due to an omission on the part of the provincial Government, but I do hope and trust that if any such scheme be laid before the Hon'ble the Finance Minister later on, he will give it a sympathetic and indulgent consideration. I rejoice to find, My Lord, that the Italian system, bonificazione, has engaged the attention of the Government of India. It is a double system of irrigation and sanitation. It is associated with a great and honoured name, that of Leonardo da Vinci, who was not only the greatest painter, but also the greatest engineer of his age. It has now been in operation for several centuries in Italy and has yielded admirable results. The central idea of the system is to raise the level of the land and to deepen the level of the rivers. It is expensive, but it is remunerative as well as sanitary. I hope and trust the Hon'ble Member in charge of sanitation will experiment with this system in large areas selected for the purpose.

"Intimately connected with the question of waterways is that of railways, and here, My Lord, I must sound a discordant note. Our Railway expenditure has gone up by leaps and bounds. In 1910-11 it was 7½ millions; in 1913-14 it was 12 millions and more; in 1914-15 the budgeted grant is nearly 12 millions. My Lord, though the Capital expenditure on railways amounts to about 343 millions, the earnings are only 1·14 per cent, very inadequate indeed, looking upon the matter as a commercial enterprise. I do not in the smallest degree desire to minimise the value of railways. They serve to develop the country, mitigate the horrors of famine, offer facilities to the travelling public and are most useful for strategic purposes. None-the-less, My Lord, I think it is the universal sense of my countrymen that no railway construction should be undertaken, except it be for protective or strategic purposes, unless upon commercial lines and financed from capital. I believe that also was the view of Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson.

"'I must not allow our railways,' said he, 'to be, even temporarily, a net burden on the Indian taxpayer.' But, My Lord, there is an ominous note of warning in the Financial Statement which has been laid before us. There is an unallotted balance: I hope and trust that no portion of that balance will be devoted to railway commitments. But this is what the Financial Statement says:—'It is desirable to have an unallotted balance to assist in our heavy capital commitments.'

"One or two words more and I have done: first, with reference to opium revenue, My Lord, I think the Imperial Government ought to come to our rescue. Our financial system has been dislocated, and it has been dislocated largely through the pressure of British public opinion. When that opinion has been paramount in our counsels and we have been practically voiceless in the matter, it is only meet and proper that the Imperial Government should come forward and help to mitigate a situation which was of their making. Sentiment is not sentiment worth speaking about unless it involves sacrifice and its sincerity proved by such sacrifice. Let me not be misunderstood. I do not for a moment advocate the retention of the opium revenue. I do not think we should ever have had such a revenue at all as a part of our fiscal system, for it entailed the ruin and demoralization of a vast population. I do earnestly hope that Your Excellency's Government will plead for compensation for the loss we have sustained

"My Lord, I find that our military expenditure has been rapidly increasing. In 1911-12. it was £19,265,000: to-day the budget statement puts it at £20.500,000 for 1914-15, which is slightly in excess of what it was in the revised estimates for 1913-14. £33,000 have been added as additional pay to officers in the British service owing to concessions which have been made to them. Not for one moment do I say that these officers should not get the increased pay. . If the concessions have been made to them, it is right and proper that they should get the increased pay, whether they serve in India or in England But I claim it as a matter of financial justice to India that this money ought to come from the Imperial treasury. The Indian army serves as an Imperial reserve: it has been so used in the past and it will continue to be so used in the future. This point was pressed with great insistence upon the attention of the Welby Commission. As a matter of Imperial justice, I think the Imperial Government ought to pay for that portion of the Indian army which is in excess of our requirements and which is in the nature of an Imperial reserve. At any rate we pray for this small contribution towards the partial redemption of a long-standing debt.

"My Lord, one word with regard to our provincial finances. Next year our provincial system will be revised. Well, My Lord, Bengal is now practically in a state of bankruptcy. In the budget of 1914-15, the expenditure comes up to about 7 crores (I am stating it in round numbers), the revenue comes up to 6 crores, the deficit being about 1 crore and 8 lakhs. This is an undesirable state of things, and this bankruptcy would have been fatal but for the Imperial doles. My Lord, a province ought to be self-contained, and therefore the provincial settlement should be so revised that we should be able to pay our own way without assistance from the Imperial Government. I have a suggestion to make with regard to Bengal. The land revenue cannot be increased in a permanently settled Province; you give us half the stamps and half the assessed taxes. What I would like to suggest is that the whole of the stamps and the whole of the assessed taxes should be made over to us. Half of the excise, the whole of which we now have, may, if necessary, be made over to the Government of India, for we cannot overlook the danger of having excise as a purely provincial revenue There is the risk of the provincial authorities, of course I refer to the underlings, of stimulating the growth of the revenue by increased consumption. Thus, according to my suggestion (I have worked out the figures and will state them) if we have the whole of the stamps, the whole of the assessed taxes and half the excise, we should have Rs. 3,57,00,000 in place of the Rs. 2,92,00,000 we now have: that is to say, 65 lakhs in addition to the present revenue, which would nearly make the situation equal.

"My Lord, I desire to associate myself thoroughly with the expression of deep gratitude which has been conveyed to Your Excellency by all those who have spoken in connection with your labours in regard to the South African question. The matter has been settled. I cannot say that it has been finally settled. All India feels this, that it would not have been so settled but for the courageous and the noble statesmanship of Your Excellency's Government. This constitutes another of those services which will enshrine Your Excellency's name in the grateful recollections of the people of this country.

"One word more and I am done. I desire to record my most emphatic protest against the observations of my friend Malik Umar Hyat Khan. He says that public opinion demands more drastic press measures. Public opinion demands, if I have rightly understood the trend of public opinion, that the Press Act should be modified, if indeed not altogether repealed. I feel it my duty, from my place in this Council Chamber, to strongly protest against observations which may lead to a misunderstanding of public opinion on this subject."

[24TH MARCH, 1914.] [Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar.]

The Hon'ble Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar:—"My Lord, I congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Member on his lucid and exhaustive exposition of the Budget. It is to be regretted that the conditions which uniformly favoured the period during which the Hon'ble Finance Member's distinguished predecessor held office should be absent on the threshold of the Hon'ble Member's assumption of office, and that his first Financial Statement should have been made under the shadow of famine and a grave financial crisis due to the recent bank failures. We all recognise the need for caution in these circumstances. Much will depend on the rainfall during the next south-west monsoon. Should the rains be timely and abundant the famine conditions in the United Provinces and elsewhere will pass. Should the rains fail, which may Heaven forfend, the country will be face to face with a grave calamity and the budget estimate of Rs. 45 lakhs under the head of Famine Relief may be indefinitely exceeded. The revised estimate for 1913-14 shows £84·484 millions as total revenue and £83 599 millions as expenditure, or a surplus of £·885 millions. In the budget estimate for 1914-15 the revenue is somewhat better, £85 079 millions, but the expenditure is £87 029 millions, showing a deficit of £1·950 millions. The Imperial surplus is estimated at £1,280.000 against an Imperial surplus of about £1½ million in 1913-14. In the Budget under discussion some economy has been exercised under heads of expenditure met from ordinary revenue. Out of these I shall refer only to Education, Sanitation and Medical, the latter two being comprehended in the term Medical. Between 1910-11 and the estimate for 1914-15, it is pointed out, the scale of expenditure under Education and Medical has practically doubled. With submission, I may venture to remark that the real test is whether the expenditure under these heads is adequate and commensurate with the requirements of the country. The Hon'ble Finance Member proposes to make recurring grants of £60,000 for Education and £40 000 for Sanitation. These are recognised as the primary objects of the policy of the Government, but financial conditions do not permit of a larger grant. The Hon'ble Member holds out a hope that next year, if circumstances are propitious, the Government may give stronger practical proof of its sympathy. We are thankful for this assurance, but I should like to ask whether it is right that the shears should be applied to Education and Sanitation, the importance of which is freely recognised, whenever the need for economy arises. The Hon'ble Finance Member observes that the large donations already made by the Central Government have gone far beyond the immediate spending power of Local Governments. Surely it is not meant that Education and Sanitation in India have reached a stage of efficiency at which further expenditure would be a waste. As a matter of fact the expenditure under these heads is far below what is urgently called for in the interests of the country. No amount of expenditure on the improvement of sanitation could be regarded as extravagant, for the health of the population is the most valuable asset of the Government themselves. To say nothing of such terrible scourges as plague, small-pox and cholera, the far reaching evil effects of malaria are becoming visible in every part of the country. It is sapping the vitality and the manhood of the whole population. Malaria is a distinctly preventable disease and much could be done for its abatement if provision were made for liberal funds to grapple with it. Speaking at the foundation-stone-laying ceremony of the Calcutta School of Tropical Medicine on the 24th of last month, Colonel G. F. Harris, Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Bengal, mentioned that such a school was in existence at Naples and possibly elsewhere in Italy. He pointed out that the conditions in Italy are somewhat similar to these found in India and proceeded to add :—'I draw attention to the work done in connection with silting operations with a view to the prevention of malaria and which may prove useful in Bengal.' The only reason why the work done in Italy is not being carried out in Bengal is the paucity of funds.

"Turning to Capital outlay on non-revenue issues we find that the revised estimate for 1913-14 shows an outlay £12,167,000 on railways and £1,330,000 on irrigation. The budget estimate for 1913-14 on railways was 12 millions but this has been exceeded in the revised estimate. The Hon'ble Finance Member says that his predecessor was able to provide in 1913-14 for a railway programme of £12 millions. It was announced sometime ago that this figure would be repeated in 1914-15. Accordingly, the £12-million standard has been maintained in the budget now before the Council, although the Hon'ble Finance Member is unable to give an assurance that this will be done in future. Besides the Secretary of State's bills on India, a rupee loan of 5 crores, subject to the usual reservations, is announced. This will be the largest loan ever raised in India in a single year, and as it will be spent on productive works, no exception can be taken to it. It is always desirable that the Public Debt of a country should be raised, as far as possible, in the country itself. I welcome the decision of the Government to raise the maximum of deposits in the Postal Savings Banks in a single year by a depositor from Rs. 500 to Rs. 750 and the total amount in ordinary deposit from Rs. 2,000 to Rs 5,000. In view of the failure of a number of banks and also bearing in mind the fact that the principal sufferers were people of small means who usually deposited their Savings in the Postal Savings Banks, the expansion of these Banks will be a guarantee of security which will be appreciated throughout India."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—" My Lord, it has become, so to speak, a time-honoured custom, more particularly with the non-official Indian members of this Council, to preface their criticisms of the Budget with congratulations to the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Finance Department, who is supposed to be the dispenser of bounties and giver of doles. But I need hardly assure my Hon'ble colleagues that it is no conventional, but sincere and heartfelt congratulations that I beg to offer to the Hon'ble Finance Minister for the ability he has displayed in framing a Budget, providing not only increasing expenditure under all important heads, but also dispensing the customary doles and at the same time showing a tolerably large surplus without imposing, as was once apprehended, any extra taxation : and all this he has done in the face of adverse and unfavourable circumstances, more or less due to the vagaries of the weather god and the practical annihilation of the large windfalls from opium.

" By the bye, speaking of the opium revenue, that is, the attenuated revenue that we shall now get from opium (2½ crores rupees) and contrasting it with the opium revenue of any previous period, taken at random, say, of 1880-81, which showed a revenue of about 8 crores of rupees, we find what a sacrifice has been made for a sentiment : and all this at the bidding of a few moralists at Home who wanted to appease their moral susceptibilities at the expense of poor India.

" With the practical extinction of this huge revenue in the near future, it is particularly desirable that the Government should be a little more cautious and circumspect in the matter of the ever-growing expenditure.

" It may be said, in this connection, that there is no use in crying over spilt milk, but what we do deplore is that such a huge sacrifice should take place in a poor country like India, where famine, not to speak of scarcity, is something like a permanent fixture. There is scarcely any other country in the world so dependent for its crops on the vagaries of the weather god as India. The thing is that, for want of industries and manufactures in the country, about 72 per cent of the population have to depend for their sustenance on agriculture and agricultural pursuits. There are, I make bold to assert, other causes besides climatic conditions which account for the recurring famines in this country. Even now large tracts in the United Provinces and some areas in Central India, Rajputana and the Bombay Presidency are under the visitation of that grim spectre of famine, and I understand more than 25,000 people are in receipt of gratuitous relief at the hands of a generous Government ; which, it is very gratifying to add, has laid it down as a maxim that no human life should be lost, not one man should die, for want of food. Though it is very generous and laudable of the Government not to allow a single man to die of starvation, the attendant or incidental evils of famine are so numerous and so far-reaching in their effects that it is not so easy to devise suitable means to mitigate the evil results that flow from famine. Not only the victim is reduced to a state of chronic indebtedness, but his whole domestic polity is so disrupted that it takes nearly a whole life before he can be rehabilitated into his former condition. I admit that agriculturists who have enough lands and other classes of people,—namely, those engaged in trade and commerce and others following some professions,—are now much better off, more prosperous than what they were forty years ago. I admit that on the whole people are now-a-days better prepared to face famine and that agriculturists who have enough lands do not feel the pinch of famine; but it is the small and petty cultivators, the non-agriculturists, the artizans, the day labourers and the poor bhadralogues, who are the greatest sufferers from famine. Though symptoms of growing prosperity are visible in the increasing use of the luxuries of civilised life, there can be no denying the fact that in no other civilised country is famine so recurring as in this country. It is to my mind due to the following causes :—

"1. With the increase of population the number of the unemployed is growing larger year by year.

"2. That between the zamindrs, merchants and traders big, or small, on the one hand and the very large and growing body of agriculturists on the other hand, there existed, and even now exist, several classes of people who from generation to generation were wedded to and followed different branches of trade, different callings and different branches of art, and they acquired a certain degree of efficiency and skill by sticking to a particular art or industry and thereby earned enough money for their sustenance; and it must be remembered, in this connection, that the purchasing power of a rupee was far greater than it is now, as all articles of food and other necessary things were much cheaper than what they are now. But, as it is not possible for products of hand labour to compete with the machine-manufactured articles of Europe and America, far less for hand-loom-made cloths to compete with the cotton-manufactured articles of Lancashire, the result is that numerous classes of people, Hindu and Mohammedan, consisting mostly of petty traders, artizans of all grades and classes and weavers, have been thrown out of employment, thrown adrift into this wide world without anything else to fall back upon; and it is these classes who are the greatest sufferers from famine, who have materially swelled the rank of the unemployed. My Lord, I crave Your Excellency's indulgence for speaking out the plain truth that a partial increase of crimes, of which we hear so much now-a-days, is due to these economic causes, is due to what is called in plain language, want, due to want of employment. Pray, remove the want; find out the means for keeping the idlers engaged; all will go on well, for it is the idlers who hatch the greatest mischief; with a belly-full there can be no murmur or grumble.

"I therefore respectfully pray that Government should do all it can to promote the industrial development of the country. Half-hearted measures will do no good. The first and foremost step in that direction, in my humble opinion, would be the immediate establishment of a large and properly equipped Technological College in a busy centre of commerce and industry and of technical institutions, for the present at least, in all provincial capitals. While Government has been generous beyond expectation and has with a bountiful hand supplied ample funds for truly literary education, while Government has been profuse in supplying all the institutions of a civilised life throughout the country, it is deeply to be regretted that the same measure of liberality has not been extended to the promotion of knowledge which would go to stimulate the arts and industries.

"If there is a revival of arts and industries, if the numerous classes of people who formerly subsisted by arts and industries can resuscitate their former trades and callings and find markets for their articles and thereby acquire enough money, we shall hear less and less of famine; for, broadly speaking, it is not so much the dearth of foodstuffs which creates famine, but dearth of money with which to buy foodstuffs.

"We are glad, My Lord, that the Railway Board has been reorganised, and that some changes have been made in its constitution; the result being that the Board, instead of being comprised of exclusively three railway men, would henceforth have one member with financial and administrative experience, and we are glad that Mr. Gillan, who has deservedly acquired a great financial reputation, has been taken in as a member of the Board. But, My Lord, I regret to observe that the present opportunity has not been taken advantage of to enlarge its sphere of usefulness by taking an outsider as its member—I mean a commercial man, with large commercial and administrative experience, and one who has had to control and supervise large factories and mills I dare say a commercial man with large experience of the country and its requirements would infuse a new spirit in the administration of the Board. It is said that the Railway Board is out of touch with the Indian public opinion and more especially with the Indian commercial opinion, otherwise a proposal like the one now before the Calcutta Port Facilities Development Committee involving sacrifice of crores of rupees,—I mean the proposal of removing the entire jute trade from Hatkhola, that is from Calcutta to Cossipur,—could not have been mooted, far less seriously entertained. But, My Lord, which is more congested, Barabazar or Hatkhola? And why has no proposal been made for removing the piece-goods trade from Barabazar? Because our Marwari friends have the weight and support of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce at their back. However, we trust and hope that attempts will henceforth be made to consult Indian commercial opinion in the administration of the Railway Department It is very gratifying that such a large sum as 18 crores of rupees has been allotted for capital expenditure on railways. With the very large additions already made and going to be made to waggons we hope the complaint of the Indian jute and coal merchants for the timely supply of waggons will meet with sympathetic response. It is said that very little heed is paid to the demand of Indian merchants for waggons, and the result is serious loss.

"My Lord, while on this, a few words about a cognate subject would not, I think, be out of place here. I mean the natural waterways of the country, which I look upon as the twin sister of railways; and I say it has an important bearing on trade and commerce. But, My Lord, the regret is that the subject has never received that degree of attention which its importance demands. This country, more particularly Bengal, has been blessed with a magnificent system of rivers and other water channels; they are most advantageous to the country in several ways, but in the eyes of a merchant their principal use lies in furnishing easy and cheap—I say much cheaper—means of transport for merchandise. They are the principal means of developing the trade of the country. It is a common experience and it is well known that, while there is no great urgency for rapid transport of particular goods,—that is, when there is no urgent demand and the market is not sufficiently tempting,—merchants and traders invariably prefer to send their goods by steamers, flats and even country boats; for the freight is much cheaper, there is less wastage and articles are not so much damaged in transit. But the Railway Department, and I may go a little higher up and say that the Government, has always looked upon these rivers with a jealous eye as so many rivals to the railways, as they are supposed to take away a good deal from the earnings of railways; and no money, at least, not much money, has ever been spent for improving those rivers and keeping them navigable; and the result is that most of the rivers have silted up. I can cite numerous instances of rivers in Bengal, commencing from the Bhagarathi near Murshidabad down to the Dhaleshwari and Buriganga near Dacca, which once deep and navigable, affording easy means of transport to the country products, are now high and dry. These rivers are hardly dredged and the Local Government has not money enough, at least cannot spare enough money, to buy powerful and costly dredgers; nor has it sufficient means to keep men with expert knowledge at its disposal for this purpose.

"The Calcutta mercantile communities, both European and Indian, have been strenuously urging for some time for a Grand Canal connecting Calcutta with Eastern Bengal by a direct and short route, and Mr. Lees has elaborated the project of a Grand Trunk Canal which, if carried out, would go to provide a very safe, short and cheap channel for the carriage of all articles of merchandise, specially jute, rice and piece goods, and I say there is no room for jealousy, for, even in the present state of trade and commerce, both the Eastern Bengal and the Central Bengal Railways find themselves utterly paralysed in coping with the daily expanding trade; and I say the capacity of the Eastern Bengal Railway will be taxed to its utmost on the opening of the grand Sara bridge and, secondly, on the opening of the Sara-Sarajgange Railway and other projected railways in the districts of Dacca and Mymensingh. I therefore beg to suggest—rather I beg to urge with all the emphasis I can command—that, taking the railways and waterways as two branches under the same head—internal communication as they surely are and are so treated in all the great countries of the world,—a portion of the annual grant of 18 crores of rupees for expenditure on railways, say to the extent of a crore of rupees a year, should be utilised partly in improving the existing channels which are fast deteriorating and partly in carrying out the Grand Trunk Canal project, which, it is said, will be sufficiently remunerative. It may be said that a waterways committee having been recently established in Bengal, it is the function of that committee to deal with the subject which pre-eminently concerns Bengal. In answer to that I may say, being a member of that committee and knowing full well its working, that it is beyond the power and resources of that committee and, for the matter of that, of the Bengal Government to tackle this subject successfully. It requires men and money which the Provincial Government has not got at its disposal It is a subject for the Imperial Government to take up, and it should be treated as such. For I say the natural waterways are an indispensable adjunct like railways in promoting trade and commerce.

"Before concluding my remarks on railways and railway grant I beg to suggest that, like the East Indian Railway (the premier railway in India and a model of good and efficient management), every railway should have an Advisory Board, and I commend this suggestion to the favourable consideration of the Railway Board. My further suggestion is that every such Advisory Board should have one Indian commercial member in it, for the very presence of an Indian member will have very good and salutary effects in different directions.

"My Lord, Your Excellency's recent announcement at Bombay in connection with the Department of Commerce and Industry and the Commercial Intelligence Department, for bringing them into the closest possible contact with the commercial community, has our hearty approval.

"Before coming to a close, I beg to say a few words on the present banking crisis which has overtaken some of the swadeshi banks in the Punjab and the Bombay Presidency. The collapse of so many Indian banks and the consequent failures of several Indian firms in those provinces are calamities too big to be blinked at. We cannot yet realise what their cumulative effect will be upon the industrial development of the country, but this far is certain that they will set the industrial development of the country fifty years back, if not more. In a commercial crisis like the one we are passing through, it is indeed very reassuring to the commercial public that the principle of Your Excellency's generous and sympathetic policy declared at Madras should have found an echo in the speech of the Hon'ble Finance Member that the Government, through its accredited agents, the Presidency Banks, would always be ready to assist such banks as conduct their business on sound lines. The Indian commercial public would like to know in what circumstances, and under what conditions, an Indian-managed bank would be entitled to ask for financial aid from a presidency bank.

"After what has happened and transpired and the dire consequences which have resulted from the almost simultaneous failures of the several Indian-managed banks, entailing immense loss and untold miseries upon the Indian investing public, there is no denying the fact that it has now become necessary, in the interest of the unwary investing public, that some sort of banking legislation should now be undertaken. But we trust and pray that no drastic legislation should be undertaken which would go to put a stop to further banking enterprises in this country and in consequence retard the industrial development of the country, for I say that industrial development greatly depends on the financial assistance it may legitimately hope to have from Indian banks.

"My Lord, as one hailing from Bengal and intimately connected with the district of Dacca, I beg to express, on my own behalf as well as on behalf of my countrymen, our congratulations on the happy conception of the scheme of concentration of troops of all arms at Dacca and the excellent results which have been secured and the successful manner in which the whole thing has been carried out and the very good impression which it has produced on all classes of people. Though it began in fright and alarm, it ultimately ended in pleasant surprises and in establishing pleasant relations between the European soldiers and the people; and, what was more, in convincing the people that behind the single district magistrate and the policeman, there are latent forces which can be summoned at a moment's notice and which are large and strong enough to crush the wicked and to defend and to stand by the loyal and the faithful.

"My Lord, one word more, the Report of the Solomon Commission is out; the Indian problem in South Africa, which was at one time distracting the minds of the Indian Public, now seems to be within the prospect of a happy solution. The feeling which is now uppermost in my mind and in those of my countrymen is one of deep and sincere gratitude to Your Excellency for the bold and sympathetic attitude which Your Excellency was pleased to take in this question, and I may add that the prospective solution of this perplexing question will be entirely due to Your Excellency's noble exertions on poor India's behalf."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy :—"My Lord, the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer should be felicitated upon his openness and his desire to carry the public with him. In the explanatory speech with which he laid the Financial Statement before us early this month he appears to have broken through departmental reserve and to have overstepped the customary lines. It is to be hoped that he will develop his policy of popularising the annual budget by fuller explanations on abstruse points of Indian finance.

"My Lord, interest in the budget under discussion centres inter alia round two features, (1) the caution in estimate necessitated by the prevalence of famine conditions in parts of the United Provinces, the Central Provinces, the Bombay Presidency and the Punjab; and (2) the unallotted balance of £1,280,000, being the expected Imperial surplus in 1914-15, kept by way of a reserve 'to assist us in our heavy capital commitments,' notwithstanding the capital expenditure of £17,900,000 as against £17,226,000 in the current year. Now, a discussion of the first point will not be profitable. The financial results of the ensuing year alone will show whether the caution is or is not justified. Criticism would be premature, despite of the finding of the Indian Finance Commission :

'Caution . . . . has been carried rather further than was necessary in recent years.'

"The first budget of a new Finance Minister in a period of stress must proceed upon the accustomed cautious lines An innovation is justifiable only on the restoration of normal economic conditions and after the year's experience has disclosed the possibilities of advance. But the proposed reserve requires fuller explanation in the light of the allotments for capital expenditure. It is difficult to see how such a large sum as two crores of rupees, roughly, is necessary during the year to meet sudden calls for our capital liabilities. According to the technical advisers of Government, there is no scope for large outlay on productive irrigation works and New Delhi. Ample provision has likewise been made for outlay from Provincial balances, repayment of India bonds, etc, and Local Loans. Any unforeseen and unavoidable expansion of expenditure under these three heads is unlikely, unless the spread of famine necessitates heavy outgoings in agricultural advances. But the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer's anticipations would discount the chances of this last contingency. Then remains the principal item, railways, for which liberal provision has been made, the allotment for 1914-15 being equal to that in 1913-14, the highest since the Mackay Committee. Any extra demand for railways during the year is improbable and unjustifiable alike How is then the large unallotted balance of £1,280,000 necessary to be put to a sort of reserve in view of 'our heavy capital commitments'? This is a point on which explanation will be welcome.

"My Lord, in connection with these Indian railways, I beg to invite your Excellency's attention to three points, (1) the account of capital expenditure incorporated in the Financial Secretary's Explanatory Memorandum, (2) the appropriation of the 'net' profits, and (3) the special loans raised for financing railways. With regard to the first point, I submit, that the summary of details of the budget grant for open lines given in paragraph 225 of the Memorandum should be more complete. The absence of fuller particulars deprives the public of information most necessary for a correct judgment about the capital requirements of our railways. The amounts allotted are at present shown under two heads, 'Rolling stock' and 'other items,' without differentiation between renewals and additions under each head. This handicaps public criticism about the commercial value of the railways. Such detailed information in the Memorandum alone can show what proportion of the total expenditure for renewals should be charged to revenue account and what to capital account. The present system of appropriation to the general revenue account of the 'net' surplus after deduction from the gross profits from railways of the working expenses and interests, is likewise unsatisfactory. Renewals, as distinguished from other improvements, are the first charge upon revenue. In the calculation therefore of the net railway income due allowance must be made for them. Nothing can be legitimately claimed as net profits until renewals have been fully provided for out of the revenue. It may be that in a lean year there is no surplus revenue out of which to make the provision; it may likewise be that even in a normal year the surplus revenue is insufficient for the purpose. And yet renewals must be financed, and capital expenditure on that head becomes unavoidable. To provide against such contingencies the principles of sound finance would suggest the creation of a permanent depreciation fund out of the abundance of prosperous years. It is false economy to appreciate the surplus income from a concern and leave unprovided the wear and tear of the mechanical appliances. It is indeed urged that provision is at present made periodically for renewals, but the point is that the principle of the arrangement by which the capital employed in the concern is annually added to, not only for additions and other improvements but also for renewals, is neither sound nor profitable. The fact that the surplus profits from railways go to swell the general revenues out of which the multifarious demands of a complex and progressive administration are met, makes the question something more than one of accounts. A false idea is conveyed about our financial position, encouraging demands for liberality in expenditure, while the commercial results of the application of loan capital to renewals are obscured by the imposing figure of surplus profits. I must not be misunderstood. I attach the greatest importance to these renewals. They are absolutely necessary. Constant watchfulness against depreciation alone will maintain the railways in an efficient condition. It follows as a corollary that the surplus income after payment of working expenses and interest charges should be applied in the first instance to defrayal of the cost of renewals, the unspent balance alone being carried to the general account. My submissions accordingly are that in the future the details of renewals and additions should be clearly shown in the aforesaid summary under each head separately, and that allowance should be made for renewals out of the surplus income. The question of a railway depreciation fund must be reserved for future consideration.

"But the special railway loans demand immediate attention. Before I offer any remarks on the subject, I must congratulate the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer upon his loan policy. It marks an advance, and will meet with universal approval in India. Educated India fully endorses the view that Indian capital should be utilised to the fullest extent in our reproductive works. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer deserves our thanks for his intended move in this direction. But Government should be prepared to go further, and, as a matter of general principle, should decide that our reproductive loans must in the first instance be raised in India, and that the London market should be exploited only for the unsubscribed balance. The community looks to the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer for the initiation of this larger policy which is only a development of the policy he has tentatively adopted in the present budget. He has justified his action in increasing the amount of Rupee Loan by excellent reasons. The exigencies of our Exchange policy and the desirability of creating additional gilt-edged securities for the investment of Indian capital supply other cogent reasons. Primâ facie an increase in our sterling debt is a menace to our Exchange policy in so far as it increases our annual sterling liability. Fears may be entertained that the most imposing Gold Standard Reserve located in London will fail to support the sterling exchange should our Home charges be abnormally inflated. The lesser the amount of these charges the greater is the security against a falling exchange. But in disregard of this almost axiomatic truth, our sterling liability is advancing at a rapid rate. In 1904-05 the total sterling debt stood at over £132 millions and in 1911-12 at over £178 millions or an advance of 35 per cent in seven years, while the railway sterling debt nearly trebled during the interval, the figure for 1911-12 being £109 millions as against £40 millions of 1904-05. The annual interest charges upon the total advanced about 50 per cent during the period. The position has not materially improved, despite of the recent expenditure for discharge of debt, in consequence of the additions to our sterling debt since 1911-12. And next year the Secretary of State proposes to borrow £8,000,000 in London, including the amount already raised in anticipation. This is not sound policy. The exchange is surely not strengthened by these sterling transactions. On the other hand, the transfer of the loan transactions to the Indian market must result in a substantial reduction in our sterling liability, and to that extent will contribute to the success of our Exchange policy. These considerations would prove the impolicy of further applications to the London market for reproductive loans.

"The general consideration that the capital of the country should be attracted more and more into safe channels of investment would equally counsel an increase in our rupee loans limited only by the capacity of the market and the needs of the State. In the considered opinion of the Indian Finance Commission, 'any reforms inducing Indians to invest instead of hoarding their saving should be greatly encouraged.' Expansion of the rupee loans is one of the effective ways of doing this. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has taken a necessarily cautious move forward, although the history of this year's new rupee loan, to which he has alluded in his introductory speech, could have suggested a bolder experiment. The amount of tender (R991,05,300) covered the loan (R3,00,00,000) three times over and more, and the average rate of accepted tender (R96-8-0) was fair. That shows we could raise more than five crores without much difficulty.

"One other consideration would justify a change of policy on the lines indicated above. The rapid increase in our sterling loans is to a large extent responsible for the present depression in Government paper. A few years ago, the rupee paper in spite of the uncertainties of exchange, was a favourite investment in England. A stable exchange, far from increasing its popularity there, has had the opposite effect of attracting the bulk of the holdings back to India. In 1902 the total amount held in England was 20 crores and 36 lakhs, but by 1912 the total went down to 11 crores and 73 lakhs. The synchronous increase in our sterling debt furnishes a satisfactory explanation. English investors naturally prefer sterling loans raised in London, and a steady exchange helps them to clear their rupee holdings on favourable terms. And the fact that the price of rupee paper has been maintained in India, notwithstanding the importation of this large additional stock simultaneously with the issue of fresh rupee loans, proves incontestably the strength of the Indian market. The large increase (over 50 per cent) in savings banks deposits (from R15,99,19,789 in 1904-05 to R24,69,49,326 in 1911-12) likewise testifies to the general anxiety for safe investment. Everything thus points to the conclusion that, in their own interest as much as in that of the country, Government should and can safely depend, in a larger measure than in the past, upon the Indian market for their reproductive loans, and should go to the London market in the last resort.

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Finance Minister has referred to the coinage profits of last year and this year (£5½ million upon 25½ crores of rupees coined) with some degree of satisfaction, as the amount has gone to strengthen the Gold Standard Reserve. In my humble opinion, and I am supported by a large body of public opinion, these profits, however, are of questionable value. The policy is unsound; the whole arrangement is artificial and unsatisfactory. The system of currency is artificial, requiring a huge Gold Standard Reserve to prop it up. The profits from fresh coinage may be imposing and even convenient for the time being, but we ought to realise that we are adding considerably to our future exchange difficulties by expanding the depreciated currency. The more artificial rupees we have, the greater becomes our difficulty in dealing with sterling exchange and the greater our dependence upon the Gold Standard Reserve for a firm exchange. The country also is prepared for a gold currency. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer himself alludes to the increasing popularity of the sovereign as a current coin. His opinion coincides with, and lends additional weight to, the views of this Government embodied in their despatch to the Secretary of State of 1911 on the subject of a gold mint. There is no difference about principles. The only practical difficulty is about a gold mint, and this can surely be overcome by negotiations with the Imperial Treasury. The Indian Finance Commission has left this subject of gold mint to be dealt with by the Government of India. It behoves this Government now to apply themselves energetically to the reform, and to introduce at an early date an honest gold currency.

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer's policy of laying out Government balances through the Presidency banks for the support of trade marks another agreeable feature of the year's transactions. These advances would perhaps be more satisfactorily managed by a State Bank, but the needed reform is delayed by the decision of the Indian Finance Commission to have the subject examined by an expert committee, which Government would do well to appoint soon.

"My Lord, speaking of this financial committee, I am reminded of another expert committee, the Army-in-India Committee presided over by Field-Marshal Lord Nicholson. The further substantial increase in our Military Expenditure next year, which will be the highest since 1904-05, following closely upon the report of a committee appointed for discovering the possibilities of reduction, would cause anxiety but for the assurance given by the Hon'ble Finance Minister that it 'implies no setting aside of the Committee's recommendation', as they have not been examined yet. I hope Government will soon come to a satisfactory decision upon the report and relieve the public anxiety.

"My Lord, from Military to Civil Expenditure is an easy step, and one of the gratifying features about this is that Government is anxious to enforce the strictest economy in the construction of New Delhi. The proposition does not admit of serious controversy that the Imperial capital should be worthy of this great Empire as also of the great Sovereign who laid the foundation stone. At the same time it is undoubtedly a sound policy that the cost should not cause a severe and sharp strain upon the general revenues, and should be spread over a number of years.

[Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy; Maharaja Ranajit Sinha of Nashipur.] [24TH MARCH 1914.]

"One item in the budget, the non-recurring grant to the United Provinces during the current year of one lakh of rupees 'for the Badrinath and Kedarnath pilgrim route,' initiates a commendable policy in the treatment of the important question of pilgrim traffic which with time should be steadily developed. Pilgrims—be they Hindus or Mussulmans—should have every facility of travel and comfort assured to them as much by private charity as by Government subventions. In pursuit of this enlightened policy the Imperial Government, I hope, will be pleased to allow reasonable sums for the relief of Hajis at Bombay, the port for the Haj traffic, on the lines that may be suggested by the Colonel Robertson Pilgrim Committee, which will inquire into the question. I hope further that the report on the Haj traffic which may shortly be expected from the Bombay Government will receive the earnest and immediate attention of this Government. The Haj question is the burning question among Mussulmans, and there is a considerable amount of feeling over it. From its Imperial importance it deserves the best and sympathetic consideration of the Government of India. I feel sure the Hon'ble Sir Harcourt Butler, whose treatment of this matter has been throughout marked by genuine sympathy, will be pleased to settle it promptly in a manner agreeable to Moslem sentiment in consultations with the leaders of the community.

"My Lord, any reference to Moslems in connection with budget allotments without a pointed reference to Mohammedan education must be incomplete. I thankfully acknowledge Government is alive to the importance of the subject, and has evinced legitimate interest in it. The latest official publication on Education shows that some of the initial difficulties have been overcome, and, further, that some progress has been made in Mohammedan education; but the admission is there that much leeway has yet to be made up. The need for special efforts and special encouragement is thus still present. I hope, therefore, that when the reports of the committees now investigating the subject are received, the recommendations will be liberally financed by Government.

"My Lord, one other submission on the budget. Government will be pleased to seriously consider the desirability of a further reduction in cable rates with a view to facilitate the foreign trade. The system of deferred messages at half rates has worked well, and is believed to be gaining in popularity. In 1912-13 the number of these telegrams was 28,666 as against 3,720 of the last quarter of 1911-12. The history of the Telegraph Department justifies the hope that if the general cable rates are further reduced, the increased volume of business in the end will amply compensate the State for any temporary loss of revenue.

"My Lord, two other points and I have done. First in importance is the question of the reconstitution of the India Council brought to the fore by the pronouncement of the Secretary of State. I respectfully submit that in any scheme of reform the claims of India to a due share of representation on the Council should be carefully and favourably considered.

"Then comes the question of the South African Indians. The news of the recommendation of the Inquiry Commission, regarding the abolition of the three-pound tax will be received with unfeigned joy throughout India; and on behalf of the people of Bombay, especially the Mussulman section, who have the greatest stake in South Africa, allow me, my Lord, to express to Your Excellency our deep gratitude for your sympathy and whole-hearted support of the Indian cause which has had so great an influence upon the Imperial and the Union Government."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Ranajit Sinha of Nashipur:—"My Lord, I notice that there has been a decrease in the collections of land revenue, partly owing to heavy remissions and suspensions of revenue in the United Provinces, and partly owing to droughts and floods in some other Provinces; but in spite of this the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has been able to make the two ends meet without curtailing any of the recurring grants regarding important matters, and so he deserves our best thanks and congratulations. My Lord, with your permission, I venture to submit one suggestion as regards the discussion of the Financial Statement. Under the present practice we are called upon to give notice of Resolutions we intend to move within three days after the Financial Statement is laid on the table, and within this short period it is very difficult for non-official Members to digest and master all the facts and figures contained in the Financial Statement and so they are to put forward their Resolutions only after a cursory study of the Budget, and the result is that they cannot convince the Finance Member of the need to alter any figure in the Budget at that stage. So, My Lord, if the Hon'ble the Finance Member holds an informal conference of the non-official Members before the Financial Statement is finally prepared and ascertains their views as to the distribution of the grants in the different provinces on several important matters, I think that it would not only facilitate the discussion of the Financial Statement, but also reduce the number of sittings in our Council Chamber.

"My Lord, I find that under the head 'Police' the expenditure has risen since 1910-11 from Rs. 6,52,42,316 to Rs. 7,80,29,000. My Lord, I am not one who would grudge this increase or who would advocate any course which might lead to reduce its efficiency, rather I would like to strengthen it. The question is whether their efficiency has really been increased in proportion to the amount of expenditure which we incur. We notice that the working of the Criminal Investigation Department, as also that of the Police in the Presidency towns, have much improved ; but, My Lord, the general impression as regards the mufassal Police is that there has been no appreciable improvement in that respect and that they cannot detect crimes, and harass the people unnecessarily on some occasions. My Lord, if each thana be provided with one selected and well-paid officer, whose sole duty will be to investigate crimes and if he be not saddled with any other routine duties, I hope the result will be satisfactory.

"My Lord, I am glad to notice that the expenditure under the head 'Education' has increased since 1910-11 from £1,846,243 to £3,999,000. The Hon'ble the Education Member is to be congratulated for this steady progress as regards education, and we are grateful to Your Excellency for the noble and generous policy which Your Excellency has adopted in the cause of the advancement of education in this country. I have also one suggestion to make in this respect and that is that, according to the practice prevalent in most provinces in India, girls after their marriage do not attend public schools, and unless education is extended to the Zenana, we will not be able to make satisfactory progress in female education in this country.

"Then, as regards Sanitation, My Lord, we are fully alive to the fact that this question is engaging the serious attention of Your Excellency's Government and that Your Excellency is going to issue a resolution as regards the sanitary policy of the Government of India very soon. The improvement of sanitation has become one of the most crying needs of the day. There is not a single province which is free from the visitation of some foul diseases, such as malaria and plague, which carry away hundreds and hundreds of people every year. The other day when I moved for an additional sanitary grant for Bengal, I showed by facts and figures that the population in some of the municipal towns is gradually decreasing, which is not at all satisfactory. Every municipal town should be provided with drainage and pure water supply, but the resources of the municipalities, except very few big municipalities, are so very limited, that they cannot undertake even the preparation of such schemes within their income. So, if Your Excellency's Government have a sanitary survey of all urban areas made, I think it will be a great help towards the improvement of sanitation.

"My Lord, we are grateful to Her Excellency Lady Hardinge for the interest she takes in the cause of female medical aid in this country, and it is through her generous effort that we had the foundation stone of the Female Medical College laid the other day. I trust that Her Excellency's noble example will be followed in all other provinces, which should also be equipped with institutions which would produce large numbers of lady doctors. There are many women in this country who do not like to place themselves under the treatment of male doctors, and I hope that during Your Excellency's regime this scheme will be further advanced in other provinces.

"My Lord, the development of our country depends to a large extent upon the improvement of agriculture; and the question of the improvement of cattle is so much associated with this, that we cannot leave one for the other. It is an admitted fact that the condition of cattle is gradually deteriorating; and we find that the bullocks are gradually becoming very weak, and they cannot do the same amount of work which they used to do before. There has also been a scarcity of milk not only in villages but also in towns, and the supply of pure milk is out of the question. My Lord, we find that the increase in infantile mortality is also due to this cause. Some doctors are of opinion that pure milk is essentially necessary for the development of young children, and so it has become very necessary to improve our cattle. We know that Your Excellency's Government is doing its best to improve the breed of cattle, and I think that in every village there should be a plot of land reserved for grazing purposes. If the Government is inclined to take up this question, I am sure there will be no difficulty in finding out the means to carry out the scheme.

"My Lord, I find that, after deducting working expenses and paying off interest, the major and minor works of irrigation yield an annual income of more than one crore of rupees, and for next year, Rs. 1 36,19,000 has been budgeted. It is a fact that many of the rivers in India are being gradually silted up. If a provision be made every year for dredging out the rivers, I think it would not only facilitate communication and trade, but it would also help the people to have pure drinking water and would contribute towards the improvement of the sanitary condition of the neighbouring villages.

"My Lord, in conclusion I associate myself with the speakers who have preceded me in expressing our deep gratitude to Your Excellency for the bold stand which Your Excellency made in solving the South African question. I am sure that if Your Excellency had not taken deep interest in the matter, the question would not have been settled so satisfactorily."

The Hon'ble Sardar Daljit Singh:—"My Lord, it is well known in the Hindu mythology that whenever one by noble deeds, Tapas and meditation, is on the threshold of the highest attainment, the gods, sometimes Indra himself, come in with a thousand and one devices to test his intrinsic worth and the earnestness of his purpose. In the same way the Hon'ble the Finance Member has been lately passing through a similar kind of trial set by Indra and Vayu, the gods of rain and wind, before he has ascended to the place from where plenty and prosperity are announced. The failure of the monsoon in the United Provinces or the irregular distribution of winter rainfall was not due to the sins committed in a previous existence, but the gods found 'that' in him and hence the trial. Our new Kuvera has ascended and plenty and prosperity are announced.

"Under the circumstances the surplus shown in the Budget is really satisfactory. I wish to congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Member for the lucid Budget statement and his administration of our finances; which, in spite of failure of crops, are as satisfactory as when the year began.

"After the unfortunate non-fulfilment of the meteorological predictions, came the series of disastrous bank failures. The crisis has been tremendous and widespread, my province being the worst sufferer. It is a pity that the Secretary of State could not see his way to agree with the Government of India in the latter's most benevolent recommendation that the Government interest-free balances with the Presidency Banks be increased with a view to give a relief to sound and solvent banks from the extraordinary rush upon them caused by mere scare and losing confidence in banking institutions.

[[redacted]] [Sar[redacted]aljit Singh.]

"My Lord, it is a truism to say that India is pre-eminently an agricultural country, and the cultivator is the backbone of society. While it must be acknowledged that the Government has done a good deal to equalise the assessments all over the land, to give fixity of tenure to the tenant, to control the increase of the rent by the landlord, and so on, the cultivator, all the same, deserves more benevolent attention of the Government in the way of affording substantial relief and bringing the land tax into line with other taxes. Without going into the details of the question on this occasion, I feel inclined to observe that the Government which so magnanimously sacrificed an enormous revenue from the opium to satisfy the British sentiment of helping a foreign nation towards moral and material improvement, will, there is every hope, reconsider the whole land revenue policy to better the position of its great agricultural population which for generations has lived in unenviable circumstances, all the same being most industrious, peace-loving and loyal. All other reforms may wait till the peasant is assured of his bread and is in a position to look hopefully forward when the rains fail.

"My Lord, it is a true complaint that, while the cultivator toils, it is others that enjoy the benefit. For instance, take the recurring grants for education and sanitation to be adjusted through land revenue. The Government proposes to grant 15 lakhs under this head. I should like to know how much of this sum will go direct to the benefit of the poor peasant. When Railway, Post Office and other revenue-paying services pay well, certain concessions are allowed to that portion of the public which has assisted in bringing about the surplus. But if a larger area has been brought under the plough and consequently more money put in the public treasury, no fresh concession or facility is offered to the cultivator. On the other hand, it is other classes of the population that take away the lion's share of the benefits derived from the farm.

"It is a matter of great gratification that the attention of the Government has been drawn towards the uplifting of what are generally styled the Depressed classes and the reclaiming of the criminal tribes. It is hoped that Government's intercession will incite public spirit, and it will soon be relieved of this duty.

"My Lord, unfortunately frontier raids and increase in criminal offences have been disquieting features of late. It is, however, satisfactory to note that negotiations with regard to trans-frontier raids already concluded with the Amir and other requisite measures will bring in peace and safety again.

"I may also mention of Your Excellency's sincere solicitude and earnest desire on behalf of Indians in South Africa. In summer last, when the atmosphere was so thick with agitation on this point, your attempt at bringing about a better understanding between the Home authorities and the Union Government worked like oil on troubled waters. Your Excellency's announcement in this Council has strengthened our faith in British justice and your helping the cause of the vast millions entrusted to your care.

"My Lord, this is the second session of the Council which has held its sittings in the Imperial city that has always been, and sooner or later was bound to be the capital of the Indian Empire. From time immemorial it has been the cradle of Emperors and the seat of Empires. The British came from across the seas and raised Calcutta to a great city, but Delhi refused to remain in the background and retained its hold on the minds of our rulers. In fact it has always been the ceremonial capital of India. Lord Lawrence was the first to think of moving the seat of the Government to Delhi, but it seems as if the fates waited simply to make amends for the injustice done to the eternal city and see her lost crown placed on her brow by the auspicious hands of our beloved Emperor. We can see the new influence at work everywhere about us, in social gatherings and at Government House, where Indians and Europeans gather together as friends and fellow-workers. Only the other day at the Higher Chief's College Conference no fewer than 32 ruling princes assembled here to talk together the question of the higher education of their sons. My Lord, it is hardly necessary for me to say that Delhi is famous for its architectural and decorative glories. Here stands the great solitary tower which has no rival in the world, here we see a single marble arch, Mizan-i-adal that cost the Emperor Shahjahan not less than half a crore. Here we are told by the historian was the Peacock throne of the great Moghal worth more than three crores. My Lord, I fully realise that neither these are the days nor the intention of the Government to lavish money to please the eye alone, but I would urge that it will bring no credit to the country if it could not provide the Empire with a capital worthy of its greatness. I would impress the Government that it is most desirable that the new capital should be built worthy of the place, so rich in history and monumental structure, and the greatness and importance of the Indian Empire. I believe that in view of the Imperial interests adverse criticism of an interested few will have no weight with the Government and that the new capital and its environments will rise in such magnificence and beauty as may be in consonance with the grandeur of the mighty Empire."

The Hon'ble Raja Saiyid Abu Jafar of Pirpur:—"My Lord, the Budget of the Hon'ble the Finance Member, though it may not be a 'prosperity' one, and though there are no liberal non-recurring grants to the Provinces (besides Burma), yet these omissions are only due to forces of nature. The lucidity and the ability of the Hon'ble the Finance Member leave nothing to be desired, and the Budget in this respect is a model one.

"United Provinces Claims.

"Unfortunately the defective rains in certain parts of the Punjab and the United Provinces have caused a partial famine. Considering the general balance, after deducting the expenses, it remains nearly the same as was expected. The Hon'ble the Finance Member may be congratulated on this success. I think the Government of India should have been more liberal to the United Provinces. But as the question has been lately discussed in full, I want only to refer to it here in brief.

"Exports and Imports.

"A very remarkable feature in the figures of last year is the decrease of exports of rice, wheat, and barely to the extent of ten and half crores of rupees. Had it not been due to bad crops and the higher price of grain, I have little doubt that my fellow-countrymen would have welcomed this result. It would have shown that more grain was being consumed in the country. Even now, from the financial point of view, we feel the gratification that the decrease in exports is counterbalanced by a greater increase in cotton and jute to the extent of seventeen crores. Thus the loss of seven crores incurred by India, due to the stoppage of the opium trade in China, has also been speedily made up. Nothing can better show the importance of agriculture for the development of this country. It is solely due to this vast industry that heavy losses caused by unforeseen events are replaced soon by turning to other cultivations, such as jute and cotton. As to the increase in imports, the chief item is piece-goods amounting to five crores of rupees during the last year. In a way it is due to improved resources of the people, but I am afraid that it is principally due to an increasing desire of most of the middle and lower middle classes for costly and showy dresses, chiefly on occasions of marriages, etc.

"Post, Telegraph and Railway.

"Coming to the chief departments under the direct supervision of the Government of India, i.e., the Railways, the administration of posts and telegraph, it is noteworthy that my community is not sufficiently represented in these important departments. Without desiring that the proper patronage given to other important communities be unduly curtailed, I think I am justified in asking the Government of India to give to the Mussulmans a due share in these departments; and the attention of the Railway Board be directed towards this. In this connection I may also say that the treatment of the third class passengers has not improved to any appreciable extent, and the rolling-stock is still insufficient, and thefts are widely committed. Also the railway servants, particularly young men, do not behave to the poorer and sometimes even to the well-to-do travellers in the manner in which they ought to do. The department should keep them in order and warn them not to behave to the public with rudeness.

" Famine Relief.

" The Hon'ble the Finance Member, while discussing the question of Famine Relief, has pointed out that nearly 75 lakhs of rupees every good year are spent on expenses that insure against famine. They are spent on protective irrigation work. In this connection I may again be permitted to point to one of the best and the cheapest, and a just protective measure against famine, i.e., the encouraging of the construction of masonry wells, which was lately suggested to the Government by the united voice of the Zamindar members and other non-official members, and which had had a strong official support before the debate took place in January last. Even now I trust it is not too late, and the Government may be pleased to treat such wells as part of the exclusive property of the constructors and the fruits of this improvement may not be taxed. This would in itself be a great incentive to the construction of such wells.

" The Economic Condition of Agriculturists and the Usury Laws.

" While dealing with protective measures against famine, the mind naturally turns towards the economic condition of the agriculturists. We are all grateful to the Government for the various measures of relief which it has passed from time to time for the agriculturists in some provinces. However, such temporary reliefs are not adequate to the needs of large rural populations of India, and do not at all touch the labourers and the small traders. The laws passed since 1855 allowing unrestricted usury must also be considered. People now are losing patience against the system which has proved very disadvantageous to the vast majority of the people.

" The Sardah Canal Project.

" The British Indian Association of the Oudh Ta'uqdars, since 1912, has become very keen on a question of irrigation. They forwarded a representation to the Government detailing their needs and views. On the 18th September, 1912, in reply to a question of my Hon'ble friend the Raja of Mahmudabad, the Hon'ble Sir Robert Carlyle said that the matter would be considered by the Government. In January last the British Indian Association specially referred to this project in the address which they submitted to Your Excellency. I trust that the question will soon receive the full and favourable consideration of the Government of India, as this canal would serve both as an insurance against famine and also as a means of improving the fertility of a large tract of soil in the provinces of Agra and Oudh.

" Education.

" The Hon'ble the Finance Member has pointed out that the direct expense on education in the current year exceed by over three crores of rupees, compared with 1910-11. This is a very satisfactory increase, but it would be interesting to know whether the general increase in the educational budget has helped the education of the land-owning classes in proportion to their contribution to the revenues of the country. It is also very doubtful whether the Mahommedans derive as much benefit as their numbers and requirements deserve. My community has a vast population of illiterates and so I trust that the Mussulmans with the help and encouragement of the Government will soon take up the question of primary and secondary education of their masses. The historical letter of the Hon'ble Mr. Sharp, issued on behalf of the Government of India, should be given effect to in every province by means of encouraging local and communal efforts and by liberal and judicious grants to the struggling schools of the Mussulmans.

[Raja Saiyid Abu Jafar of Pirpur; Raja Kushal Pal Singh.] [24TH MARCH, 1914.]

" Encouragement of Vernaculars.

" Dealing with education, I may suggest that out of such a large educational budget a sum of rupees one lakh per annum might be distributed amongst the various provinces to encourage important vernaculars. I think a few hundred rupees are paid as rewards to authors in the Punjab, and practically nothing is given in the United Provinces. The Madras Government, so far as I learn, has been pleased to create a lecturership for Urdu literature on the model of the Tagore Law Lecturership of Calcutta. A comparatively small expenditure could help struggling authors and men of letters and a body of useful and loyal writers might be brought into prominence. The present bonus of Rs 100 per year to Shamsul Ulamas and Mahamahopadhyas is by no means sufficient to encourage learning.

" The New Capital.

" Looking at the Budget, I find a noteworthy item concerning the expenses for the new Imperial Capital. My Lord, considering the importance and the ever-abiding benefits of this change of capital, the expenses are justifiable and quite necessary. I think, Delhi, with its glorious memories, is a more suitable place than the previous capital and is more centrally situated. I trust the new capital, when it is built, will be a fitting one and worthy of the British rule in India. It is sure to promote great facilities for the administration and to secure greater facilities and benefit to the people"

The Hon'ble Raja Kushal Pal Singh:—" I beg to tender my respectful congratulations to the Hon'ble the Finance Member on the remarkable lucidity which characterises the Financial Statement presented this year. The Hon'ble Member's task has by no means been an easy one, in view of the appearance of famine conditions in parts of the United Provinces, the Central Provinces, and Rajputana, due to the partial failure of the rains, and the disturbance of commercial conditions arising from the banking crisis. In spite of these unfavourable circumstances, he has contrived to show in the budget for 1914-15 a clear surplus of 1,280,000 pounds, without imposing any additional burden on the people. Our warmest thanks are due to him for his very able and judicious disposition of the finances He says that he felt it desirable at the outset of his term of office to take the Council into full confidence touching the capital expenditure and other matters of financial policy, outside the budget proper. I repeat that the Hon'ble the Finance Member deserves our hearty thanks for this friendly attitude. It is above all things desirable that the maximum of information should be placed at the disposal of the non-official members, who are the chosen representatives of the people.

" On behalf of the constituency which I have the honour to represent on this Council, I beg to tender my most grateful thanks to the Government of India for the special recurring grant of six lakhs for the remission of a number of miscellaneous contributions which local authorities at present pay to Local Governments as a return for services rendered by the regular provincial establishments.

" An increase of Rs. 36,30,000 is expected in the excise revenue next year. The policy of Government, it is true, is to increase the price of intoxicants for the consumer, so that a smaller quantity of them may be purchased. But in practice this policy has proved illusory, as an insufficient check on consumption. It is therefore necessary that the number of retail shops should also be reduced; and that they should not be located in crowded thoroughfares, and other places of public resort.

" There has been much hue and cry raised by the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce and by a section of the Calcutta papers about the probable expenditure on the building of New Delhi. A yearly outlay of Rs. 75¾ lakhs on the construction of the New Capital of British India is not a drain that would disorganize Indian finance, or impoverish the ordinary tax-payer. In the historic Durbar of 1911, His Imperial Majesty proclaimed Delhi to be for ever the Capital of the Indian Empire The speeches made by the non-official members of the Imperial Legislative Council, on the budget debate in 1912, clearly showed that the change of capital met with universal approval. The New Capital which has to be built should be worthy of the Indian Empire, and no money should be grudged for this purpose. But the Finance Member has said enough to reassure all critics that the progress of the work would not be unduly hastened, but that it will be steady, and all considerations about cost will be fully taken up in the light of the annual financial position of the country.

"We are also grateful to the Government of India for the recurring grant of £60,000 for education and for £40,000 for sanitation. It would have been a great satisfaction if the Government could have seen their way towards making a similar grant for Agriculture. Cultivation is the main support of the rural population, which constitutes 72 per cent of the total population of India. Agriculture supplies the major part of the income of the Government in the form of revenue. Agriculture, being the premier industry of India, anything that affects its wellbeing, vitally affects the welfare of the country. It therefore seems most desirable that money should be granted to local Governments, for enlarging the number of demonstration plots, so that new and improved kinds of crops may be brought to the notice of actual cultivators. The value of good seeds is fully appreciated by the cultivators. The Department of Agriculture can supply only a fractional portion of the seeds required by them. The available seed is for the most part sold in advance. The Department of Agriculture needs more demonstration farms to enable it to produce the seed required. Local seed farms are also necessary to discover the varieties best suited to each locality. Money should be found for encouraging the Co-operative Credit Societies to erect seed stores. Handsome contributions towards shows of agricultural stock and produce, the payment of premiums to the owners of stud bulls and to selected growers and distributors of improved seed, should be given. The needs of agriculture are as urgent as those of education and sanitation. Money devoted to agriculture will be money well invested.

"More money ought to have been granted for expenditure on famine relief. India is essentially an agricultural country,—and agriculture depends on plough cattle. It will not be an easy thing for cultivators to replace the cattle that die off. The grant for famine relief should be increased by several lakhs of rupees, in order that more extensive concessions for the carriage of fodder might be made.

"The question of the export of bones deserves serious consideration. The trade in the export of bones from this country is of comparatively recent growth, and has been possible only since railway communication has extended more generally over the whole country. It is a trade which in the interests of agriculture should be discouraged, as it is depriving the soil of India of a valuable kind of manure. The trade might be checked by a refusal to grant low rates of railway freight, or by the imposition of a heavy export duty. Either step would be a move in the right direction. I cannot say if it would be possible to expressly forbid the export of bones; but something analogous is already being done,—I refer to the existing prohibition of the export of the feathers and skins of birds. If it is desirable to prohibit the export of these, on the ground that, otherwise, India would in time lose all her beautiful birds of plumage, much more desirable is it to check the export of bones, and so save the soil of the country from being gradually deprived of what should, in the natural order of things, go back to it.

"In the year 1884-85 the quantity of bones exported from India amounted to 18 000 tons, and in the year 1911-12, it rose to 88,863 tons The latter figure will show what a huge drain the export of bones is upon the agricultural resources of the country. I would humbly request the Government to impose an export duty of eight annas per maund on consignments of bones. For certain irrigated crops it has been experimentally shown that the action of bones dissolved by sulphuric acid, has been quick and powerful; but the cost of imported acid makes the price of dissolv[illegible] most prohibitive. If the Government be pleased to subsidise the manufacture of sulphuric acid in this country, or encourage it in some other way, the gain to the agriculture of the country will be immense.

"The rapid development of the sugar industry in the island of Formosa although a matter of interest to sugar producers all the world over, has special significance for producers in this country. As Government is doubtless aware this sugar is now replacing in the Japanese market the Java and the Australian sugars refined in Hongkong. Its production is being promoted by various forms of State subsidies; and there is little doubt that after the Japanese Market has been satisfied, producers in Formosa will turn their attention to the capture of outside markets, among which India is not likely to be overlooked.

"I beg to move the Government to make inquiries whether Formosa sugars are really subsidised.

"The late lamented Mr. R. C Dutt rightly observed that there is no reason or justice in assessing the land for schools. But if the cess for education is retained, I would strongly urge upon the Government the justice of exempting the sons of agriculturists from payment of fees in primary schools. In my humble opinion the fairness of taxing agriculturists, both directly and indirectly, for the instruction which is given to their children, is open to serious doubt. Recent inquiries show that in the United Provinces 78 per cent. of the lands of the cultivators are under mortgage, and that three-quarters of the ryots owe more than a year's rent Considering the extent of indebtedness of the agriculturists, I strongly hope that the Government will be graciously pleased to extend to them as a class the benefits of free primary education.

"I should like to take this opportunity of expressing our deep sense of gratitude to the Government of India for the active sympathy which they have shown to our fellow-countrymen in South Africa.

"One University cannot possibly meet the needs of our Provinces. One teaching and residential University should be located at Agra. In the City of Agra we have already many of the materials for a University, besides the hospitals, which should make the nucleus of a magnificent Medical Faculty. We have, unlike any other city in the United Provinces, three Colleges, two of which have got a very large number of scholars on their rolls. As far back as the time of Sultan Sikandar Lodi, Agra was the chief seat of learning. It was the capital of the greatest Moghul Emperor, and attracted savants from all parts of the world. It is sincerely hoped that the long-lost position as the great seat of learning will be restored to Agra at no distant date.

"We have ceased to sell opium for export to China. This source of revenue has disappeared. I submit that the whole cost of the awakening of the national conscience in England, to the iniquity of the opium traffic with China, should not be thrown upon India. We claim financial help from the Imperial Exchequer

"Although the revenue assessed upon each mahal is ordinarily 50 per cent of the assets yet wherever the Settlement officer thinks that the recorded cash rental is inadequate or fraudulent, he discards the recorded cash rental and substitutes what in his opinion the proper rental should be. Whether the recorded cash rental is inadequate or fraudulent is a question of fact. So far as my experience goes such questions are not determined by the Settlement officers in a judicial spirit and the result is that the operation of the half assets rule is evaded in many cases. I am strongly of opinion that when a Settlement officer decides that the recorded cash rental is inadequate or fraudulent, the aggrieved party should have a right of appeal to the High Court. It is not proper that an impression should be created that the Government seeks to uphold arbitrary acts of Settlement officers by stopping all appeals to Courts of Justice. Should there be an objection on the ground of the length of time which the disposal of appeals to the High Court involves, the Government might be pleased to appoint special judicial officers to dispose of such appeals. The Government of India should recognise the principle that in the determination of such questions of fact, it is undesirable to bar the jurisdiction of Civil Courts altogether. I fully admit that Settlement and Revenue officers endeavour to perform their difficult and onerous duties as justly and conscientiously as judicial officers. But it will appear from a moment's reflection that in such matters the Settlement officer and the Revenue officer are virtually a party, and it cannot meet the ends of justice if they are made final judges in these matters.

"When our benign Government devotes an immense amount of care to the conservation and preservation of the ancient monuments of India and grudges no expense in preventing them from falling into ruin, spending large sums of money in throwing light upon ancient arts and sciences, which have remained buried in oblivion for so many centuries, it is not too much to expect that the Government may be pleased to make suitable provision for the regular and systematic study of the Ayurvedic and Yunani systems of medicines. I am sure that our just and benign Government will not let the healing art of the land die out for want of encouragement and that Hindu and Mohammedan medical science will receive that attention which it deserves. Indian Medical Science has reached its highest standard of excellence in Materia Medica, Therapeutics and Hygiene, and may well be proud of its symptomatology, diagnosis, and prognosis. No other system boasts of such an extensive and highly developed Materia Medica as the Ayurvedic system, from which the European system might, with advantage, borrow many useful drugs. Consequently, Indian Medical Science deserves preservation."

His Excellency the President :—"The Council will now adjourn till half past two. I should be grateful if Hon'ble Members will return punctually at that hour, as it is proposed to take a photograph and I hope that all the Members of my Council will be present."

The Council then adjourned for lunch.

On re-assembly a photograph was taken, and after that the debate was resumed.

The Hon'ble Mr. Rama Rayaningar :—"My Lord, the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer's illuminative exposition of the financial position of the Government has greatly narrowed the scope of effective criticism. He has assured us that there is no intention on the part of Government to set aside the recommendations of the Nicholson Committee, and that if their influence upon the budgeted Military Expenditure is absent, it is because certain adventitious circumstances have prevented the formulation of a scheme by Government so far. We earnestly hope to see a Resolution on the subject before long.

"My Lord, some pronouncement was expected from the Hon'ble Finance Minister regarding two other inquiries,—the inquiry into Indian Marine Expenditure by the Slade Committee and Mr. K. L. Datta's investigation of the whole subject of prices. Mr. Datta's report has now been before Government nearly a year, and nothing is known yet if it will lead to any practical results. The matter is urgent, and some decision is necessary.

"My Lord, a representative of Madras naturally scans the programme of Capital Expenditure in the Financial Statement for his interest in three schemes connected with the Presidency,—the Cauvery Project, the Vizagapatam Harbour and railway connection between Bellarpur and Warangal for shortening the railway distance between the New Imperial Capital and Madras. But barring general information about the Cauvery Reservoir, that it awaits settlement, there is no reference which might even hold out hopes of early commencement. Possibly this Government has not before it any complete scheme relating to the Harbour; but the urgency of the improvement should induce it to hasten the preparation of a scheme. The connecting railway should also be sanctioned at an early date. In connection with the Cauvery Reservoir, I submit that in negotiating with Mysore due care should be taken to safeguard the interests of the Tanjore ryot who is likely to be affected by the proposed Kanambadi project.

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Finance Minister has referred with satisfaction to the substantial increase during this year (about 40 lakhs) in the excise revenue of Madras. Excise is an expanding source of revenue in Madras, but our regret is that the whole of this revenue has not been provincialised as in Assam, Bengal and Bombay. Under existing arrangements the local Government gets only 50 per cent., but we badly want the balance for our local needs. The resources of the rural bodies are wholly insufficient for the work entrusted to them. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer, with his large personal experience, will be able to testify to the extremely unsatisfactory condition of communications in the rural areas of the Presidency. Improvement of communications is the great need there, but unless the income of local bodies is reinforced by liberal subventions from the provincial funds nothing appreciable can be effected in this direction. But the Provincial Government have not much to spare. In their difficulty they are forced to adopt the policy of inducing District Boards to increase the rate of the cess upon land. In reply to my question on the subject, this Government was pleased to state that without definite information from Madras they could not say if the proposed increase in land cess was in conformity with the policy of Government. But it is a matter of common knowledge in the Presidency that District Boards have been addressed by the Local Governments, with a view to secure an increased rate of cess for the improvement of communications in rural areas. Agitation has been going on over this. If more precise information were wanted, the following extract from the Hon'ble Sir Harold Stuart's statement in the Madras Legislative Council on 14th March current would supply it:

'There are three District Boards which levy the land cess at a rate in excess of one anna in the rupee, viz., the Nilgiris, Malabar and South Canara. The Nilgiris District Board already receives special subventions from Provincial Funds, and we do not propose to make any further increase in that case. To Malabar and South Canara, however, we intend to give an additional grant equal in each case to the amount which those Boards realise on that portion of the cess which is in excess of the one-anna rate. We do this on the ground that it is desirable to give special encouragement to Local Boards which show an earnest desire for the improvement of those branches of administration which are entrusted to them by imposing additional taxation upon themselves. This is the sound principle which underlies the system of grants-in-aid. It may be objected that other Local Boards are unable in the present state of the law to raise their rate of taxation. I am sure, however, that, if Local Boards desire it, the Government will be prepared to give every facility for the amendment of the Act, and they will then be able to obtain this increased rate of grant from Provincial revenues.'

"This authoritative statement does not leave any doubt about the policy of the Local Government. It is equally certain that that policy is not in conformity with the land revenue policy of this Government as laid down in their Resolution of 1902. The only satisfactory way out of the difficulty is to provincialise in Madras the whole of the excise revenue on the express understanding that the additional moiety would be earmarked for improvement of rural communication. It is unnecessary to refer to the Imperial subvention of £100,000 for improvement of communications in Burma in our support. Our case is sufficiently strong on the merits to commend our appeal to the sympathetic and favourable consideration of this Government.

"My Lord, rural improvement reminds one of the needs of agricultural improvement. As my friends the Hon'ble Sirdar Daljit Singh and Rajah Kushal Pal Singh have rightly remarked agriculturists form the majority of the people of India. They are the back-bone of the nation. They toil for the upkeep of the national finance, yet reforms to improve their lot are kept in the back ground, adequate amounts are not allotted for the improvement of agriculture. The urgent reforms for the improvement of agriculture may be divided, for our present purposes, into four groups,—rural education in agriculture, manufacture of cheap manure, cattle-breeding, and agricultural loans at a lower rate of interest than the present rate of 6¼ per cent. Now, in the matter of rural education, I note with pleasure in the quinquennial review just published some progress has been made, but we have to go a long way yet before that education will have any appreciable effect upon the agriculture of the country. Besides, Madras has a special grievance in this matter. Nothing appears to have been done there during the quinquennium ending with 1912. In my humble opinion a comprehensive scheme of agricultural education is necessary, and for the sake of economy, agriculture may be advantageously included in the general lower primary standard. But mere knowledge of improved cultivation will not be of much help to the agriculturist unless a decent supply of manure is ensured. But here is the greatest difficulty. The Indian ryot generally depends on cattle dung for his manure. Cheap artificial manure is not available in the country to any appreciable extent. I think Government might profitably do the necessary pioneer work in this line, mining for minerals of manurial value, the manufacture of bone meal and sulphuric acid, charcoal distillation, etc., may well be attempted. This sort of State initiative in industry has proved very successful and stimulating in Madras. We owe the prosperous aluminium industry and chrome tanning of Madras to State initiation. The Madras Government started and worked the factories before they were made over to private companies. Much can in the same way be done by Government to popularise the manufacture of manure. Then there is the important question of cattle breeding. In the latest Parliamentary Blue Book on India it is admitted that 'there has been a decline in the cattle-breeding industry'. This has been partially due to decrease in the available grazing. Indiscrimate cow slaughter again has reduced the number of cattle. The result is two-fold. There is deterioration in quality and number of cattle, and the prices of plough-cattle have gone up rapidly all over India. And this must injuriously affect agriculture. Greater attention must therefore be paid to cattle-breeding, and it would facilitate progress if rural efforts in this direction can be organised on a co-operative basis. With the example of Sir Horace Plunkett of Ireland before us, we could attempt something great in this line. Government undertook a cattle survey some time ago, but we do not know how it has ended. Unless the results are published we cannot offer any detailed practical suggestions on the subject. Greater energy and greater zeal in the improvement of cattle is desirable. Efforts in these directions must be supplemented by encouragement to agriculturists to execute improvements on their lands by reducing the interest on takkavi loans to the lowest possible rate. I make this suggestion notwithstanding the Government of India Resolution No. 6-204-16 of 30th November 1905 for the sound reason that a loan at 6¼ per cent would not be applied to improvements which yield only a return of 5 or even 6 per cent. And as the average profits are never large, the present higher rate does not offer sufficient incentive to the agriculturist to undertake improvements. In the result the progress of agriculture will be hampered. I hope, My Lord, these humble suggestions will engage the sympathetic attention of Government. And in this connection the whole subject of Indian pauperism should, for its bearing upon the question of labour supply, be thoroughly investigated Agricultural labour is everywhere becoming scarce, and yet we find from the last Census return that in India beggars, vagrants, etc., who form the bulk of the unproductive classes, number over 33 lakhs. Of these the actual workers number about 20 lakhs. The figures for beggars and vagrants are not separately given, but that they form a large proportion of the total may be assumed. That the majority of the actual workers are able-bodied may also be assumed. Their impressment into the service of society would be a great step forward, and would provide a partial solution of the present labour difficulty.

"My Lord, this question of administrative treatment of pauperism leads to the further subject of provision for the impotent poor, and on this point is it not desirable that some scheme of relief on the English model should be prepared as early as convenient? In my humble opinion, such relief is a proper charge upon the resources of the local bodies, and with a view to strengthen them for this special purpose, the imposition of a special tax upon all sections of the wealthier people may be usefully considered.

"My Lord, with the transfer of the Capital to a more central place like Delhi, which ensures closer touch between this Government and the great body of Feudatory Chiefs, begins a new chapter in British Indian History. With the memories of empires all round, the British Ruler must imbibe here a truly Imperial spirit, and shake off the commercialism which has grown up imperceptibly but surely round British Indian rule at a commercial town like Calcutta. We feel sure New Delhi, worthy of the Empire, will rear its head soon, the source of a fresh architectural impulse to the people. We only hope, My Lord, Indian materials and Indian labour will be freely used in the construction. Opportunity should also be taken to give a new direction to the co-operative movement by organising labour on a co-operative basis. In Madras in the Salt Department the formation of co-operative association of labourers has been attended with promising results. But the New Capital affords the grandest opportunity for giving the movement a definite and permanent shape. I beg also to suggest that the inauguration of New Delhi should be associated with a reform for which India has been crying long, and a Military College for Indian officers for training preliminary to admission into the commissioned rank of the Army should be one of its first important buildings. This institution may for the present form a part of the proposed Chiefs' College, which, thanks to the liberal policy of Government, will be open, not only to the Chiefs, but to all the members of Indian aristocracy. The step will popularise Delhi as nothing else will, and promote loyalty to the British Throne.

"My Lord, I cordially join my friends here in expressing on behalf of the Madras Zamindars and Landholders our heartfelt gratitude to Your Excellency for your kind and successful intercession with both the Imperial Government and the Union Government for justice to the Indian settler in South Africa.

"I hope, My Lord, I fervently hope that Your Lordship's noble example in acting to the impulse of generosity towards the oppressed, is followed by my countrymen. May they make an attempt, a grand attempt, to remove the social disabilities of their depressed brethren in the country."

The Hon'ble Mr. Madhu Sudan Das :—"My Lord, the Hon'ble the Finance Member has received congratulations from everybody who has spoken in this Chamber and by this time I fear a feeling of satiety has grown up, but so that my silence may not be construed as a want of appreciation, I endorse those remarks. Multifarious suggestions have been made and I should not add any more to these suggestions, but should wait till next year just to see how many of these suggestions have been adopted by the Hon'ble the Finance Member. We have had sufficient experience of his iron grip on the purse he holds in the discussions on the Resolutions which were before the Council during the last few sittings. I should like, My Lord, to refer to one or two matters which have been referred to by some of the speakers. Education and Sanitation occupy a prominent place in the policy of Your Excellency's Government; they have occupied a good deal of the attention of this Council during these last few sittings by reason of the Resolutions which were moved and they have been referred to by several Hon'ble speakers this morning. The importance of these two subjects cannot be over-estimated. Let it not be understood, that I am against advancing these two, Sanitation and Education, but I must say that I cannot endorse the remarks of the Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali when he said 'never put off till to-morrow, what you can do to-day.' That is a good old maxim when applied to actions, but it is not desirable that it should be applied to the spending of money. We must not lose sight of the fact that in asking for sanitation we are asking for the introduction of a method which is foreign to oriental civilisation. The contact of England with India really means the meeting of two opposite civilisations. What was known as the cause of disease in old days is not the cause of disease in public opinion now. We have amongst us the most powerful democratic microbe that makes no difference between the peasant and prince and which uses its own victim as its carrier. So this being the state of things, the real question that comes up for serious consideration is which is to have precedence, Education or Sanitation? My Lord, I am not referring to high education, but to that type of education which would be of value for furthering the cause of Sanitation amongst the masses. In old days some philosophers were troubled with the question whether the seed came first or the tree.

[24TH MARCH, 1914.] [Mr. Madhu Sudan Das; Rai Sri Ram Bahadur.]

This is the form of question that arises now as to whether Education should have precedence or whether Sanitation should come first and Education afterwards. Sanitation, for the sake of causing relief in times of epidemic, stands on a different footing from sanitation by which is meant a system that will secure longevity of life and protect life from destruction by disease. Of course, sanitary relief measures are always welcome and should not be postponed for a single day if that can be helped, but the introducing of sanitary reform in the country, I submit, should not be undertaken unless the people are as it were, inoculated under the principle which underlies the modern system of sanitation. Some of the speakers, My Lord, have referred to the opium question. This opium question seems to have been prominently before the public mind as will be seen from the references to the importance of the question by several Hon'ble Members here. The way in which the Indian public view the question is if England agrees to put down the system which was a source of income to India on the ground of moral sentiment, and if it is condemned as it is demoralising to the people, how is it that the consumption of opium is not interdicted in India? If it is defended on the ground that that use of opium here is a very different thing from introducing it into another place, then the question presents itself to the Indian mind, how is it that foreign liquors are allowed to be imported into this country? What is immoral in the one case, ought to be immoral in the other. The difference between preaching and practising is one which has never been appreciated, and the Indian is not to blame if he does not appreciate it now. Another matter to which reference has been made is the New Capital. My Lord, I was at least one of those who thought that the question had been settled, but it has been referred to by three or four Hon'ble Members in the Council and from the remarks that have been made, and especially remarks regarding the advantages of removing the Capital here, it seems that these references have been made with reference to certain criticisms which one hears outside this Council Chamber and which I am sorry to see have been lingering to this day.

"The function which was performed by His Majesty, when he was here, was not laying the foundation of a city which would contain a Viceregal residence and some other buildings necessary for carrying on the work of administration. Most people looked upon it as laying the foundation of an Empire; and where could the foundation of an Empire—a foundation which would help the people to realise fully in their lives the conception of an Empire—I say, where could the foundation of an Empire be laid but in Delhi, where noble Queen Victoria assumed the title of Empress of India, where Edward VII, in proclaiming his coronation, promised that he would carry out the policy of his mother, the first Empress of India? Since the days of that ceremony, the conception of an Empire has been felt Parts of this vast Empire, whose interests had been neglected in the past, have received attention; the needs and wants of certain other parts have been attended to. So really the broad foundation of an Empire, which rises above all parochial, commercial or communal interests, has been not only laid, but has been felt by the people. And if there was anything wanting to develop that conception in the Indian mind, it was done by this Government. We shall ever remain thankful, India shall ever remain thankful, to Your Excellency for your noble, kind, and statesmanlike services in connection with the South African question. We have before us now a broad conception of an Empire, an immense Empire, in which India occupies a conspicuous and prominent place, and I do sincerely hope that conception will be strengthened and widened and that its basis and foundation will extend over the whole British Empire over which the sun never sets.

"There are many other matters, but I do not think I should take up more of the Council's time, as the rules make one's articulate existence here short, and I have already taken up sufficient time."

The Hon'ble Rai Sri Ram Bahadur:—"My Lord, before taking up topics connected with the general discussion on the Budget, I beg to join the speakers who have preceded me in expressing to Your Excellency the deep sense of gratitude of the people of India for what Your Excellency has done to get the disabilities removed under which our countrymen in South Africa have been labouring so long. Your Excellency's firm protest against and strong representations on the unfair and unjust treatment of Indians by the Government and the people of that country, led to the appointment by the Union Government of a Commission to make enquiries into their grievances; and it is satisfactory to learn that the Commission have made recommendations favourable to our countrymen. Of these recommendations, I would mention two which seem to me of great importance, viz., repeal of £3 license tax and recognition of marriages celebrated in accordance with the rites of Hindu and Mohammedan religion. We hope that the Union Parliament will lose no time in giving legislative sanction to these and other recommendations of the Commission. Our countrymen are indebted to Your Excellency for these beneficial results which are the outcome of the deep and sympathetic interest taken by Your Excellency in handling this difficult question, and the firm attitude adopted by Your Excellency in the negotiations with the Government of South Africa.

"My Lord, with Your Excellency's permission, I shall now proceed to make a few remarks on the Budget for the year which is about to begin. The year that is drawing to a close has not proved to be one of prosperity and of plenty like its three immediate predecessors. Several adverse circumstances have given to it the characteristics of a lean year Famine has made its appearance in a great part of the United Provinces; it has already affected and will affect in future Land Revenue and necessitate an increase in direct and indirect expenditure for mitigation of its severity. Bank failures have affected trade of the country. Revenue arising from opium trade with China, which used to be a very important factor in swelling the surpluses of the by-gone years, has disappeared altogether. Receipts from Railways have not shown progressive increase like the past. And the money market, specially in London, has not been in as satisfactory condition as it used to be. The Hon'ble Finance Member is to be congratulated that in the face of these adverse conditions, he has framed his first Budget so carefully and cautiously that provisions have been made in it for all the items of expenditure The framing of a satisfactory Budget under the state of things above described was not an easy task; the Hon'ble Finance Member deserves great credit for having accomplished that object. We are obliged to him for the detailed and lucid statement of the finances of the Empire.

"My Lord, even at the risk of being considered a pessimist, I cannot refrain from saying that the prospects of Indian finance in the near future are anything but cheering, and that timely measures are necessary to improve its condition. A consideration of the large amounts required, in the immediate future, for additional expenditure on the several branches of administration, will show the necessity of such a course.

"I shall take Education first. In order to fully carry out the policy of the Government in respect to Education large sums, with yearly increases, are required. Actuated by a sense of duty which deserves all praise, the Government have adopted a course of action to promote Education in all its branches. A special department was created in 1910, and placed under the charge of an official whose measures for promoting education and sanitation have more than justified his selection to this high and responsible office. His Imperial Majesty's gracious pronouncement in the reply to the address of the Calcutta University that the cause of education in India will ever be close to his heart, has given a new and strong impetus to the action of the Government. The now famous Resolution of 21st February 1913, has chalked out the programme which the Government are going to adopt to advance education in this country. Considerable additions have lately been made in both recurring and non-recurring grants to be spent on it. With the year 1910-11 a new epoch has begun in the history of education and sanitation in India. The scale of total expenditure on education both Imperial and Provincial has almost doubled. The tabular statement given below, prepared from the figures given by the Hon'ble Finance Member in his speech delivered on the 2nd of this month, will show the gradual large increments under this head of expenditure since the year 1910-11 :—

	£
1911-12 (Actuals)	2,021,000
1912-13 (Actuals)	2,610,000
1913-14 (Revised)	3,242,000

"The people of India are extremely grateful to Your Excellency for the inauguration of this policy of progress and for the action taken to carry out that policy by making annually increasing grants. The educational summary, published in the Gazette of India issued on the 14th of this month, gives the total of pupils in institutions of all kinds to be 7,149,669 and the percentage of pupils in those institutions to children of school-going age, 17·0 per cent But when we look to the enormous population of India under the direct control of the British Government, numbering 244,267,542 souls, and compare our figures with those of other countries and specially of Japan, the irresistible conclusion is that much more is still required to be done in order to reach the level of those countries. Japan in 1910, with a population of little over 52 millions, had 6,479,204 children receiving elementary education. The Hon'ble Mr Sharp in his Quinquennial Report on the Progress of Education in India, issued last month, says:—'It is the desire and hope of the Government of India to see not in the distant future some 91,000 public schools added to the 100,000 which already exist for boys and to double the 4½ millions of pupils who now receive instruction in them'. According to his calculation the approximate annual cost of a primary school is Rs. 375 per annum. The establishment of 91,000 schools, at this rate of cost, would require an additional annual outlay of Rs. 3,41,25,000. This additional sum will be required not in the 'distant future,' for one branch only, viz., Elementary Education. Collegiate, Secondary, Technical and Industrial are other branches which will require additional expenditure of considerable sums in order to maintain their present progress and provide for future needs.

"Sanitation is another item which requires additional expenditure of a growing nature. We are thankful to the Government for the large recurring and non-recurring grants given to improve sanitation in the past three years, and also for the provision made in the Budget of the coming year. In this head also the amount has practically doubled since the year 1910-11. But in the large grants made in the past the amount spent on the improvement of sanitation in rural areas which is under the direct control of Government with a population of 221,449,827, has been very small. Practically no settled scheme has yet been adopted in many of the provinces. The improvement of rural sanitation requires greater attention, as it affects the lives and health of by far the greater portion of the population of India who reside chiefly in rural areas. In order to maintain the progress already made in sanitation and to promote it in rural tracts considerable annual outlay both recurring and non-recurring is required in the immediate future.

"I have mentioned in detail the two important heads which require additional expenditure in the near future. Besides these there are other administrative measures and reforms, which cannot be carried out, without a substantial addition to their present scale of expenditure.

"My Lord, Opium and Railways were the two sources of income which contributed mainly towards the big surpluses of the last few years, and placed large sums at the disposal of the Government to enable them to make substantial grants for education and sanitation. Sale of opium to China, and in smaller quantities to other countries, brought to the Indian Exchequer large revenues in past years. The maximum was reached in 1909-10, when it gave more than 11 crores. Then came the diplomatic engagements with China. In pursuance of those engagements the gradual reduction in the quantity of opium exported to China began. In 1912-13 the amount was reduced to about 7½ crores. The last sale to China was in December 1912. Though under the terms of the treaty engagements India was entitled to continue the opium trade—with gradual reduction—till the end of 1917, but on the representations of the Chinese Government it was stopped suddenly at the beginning of 1913. The small trade that is still left is with such countries as the Straits Settlements, Hong Kong and the Dutch East Indies. But this trade is much less remunerative and the income for the year which is drawing to a close is calculated only at 2 crores, 40 lakhs, and for the coming year it is estimated at 2 crores, 60 lakhs.

"As is well known, the abolition of the opium trade with China has been forced upon India by British Parliament in response to the representations of certain philanthropists at Home. In the words of the late Finance Member (Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson) 'the Government of India clearly have had to deal with a situation created for them and for which they were not responsible'. As regards the prospects of rooting out the evil of opium-eating from the Chinese, I beg to quote his words again :—'We cannot conceal from ourselves that China has set herself a task which experience proves to be one of the greatest difficulty—the enforcement of a morality possibly too advanced for popular acceptance.'

"In connection with this subject it is to be noticed that diplomatic engagements have been faithfully observed on the part of India, but as remarked by the Hon'ble Finance Member 'in China on the other hand cultivation still continues, in several of the provinces, and vigorous as the attempts to carry out a prohibitionist policy have no doubt been, there is still a large local demand for opium and a considerable amount of local production'.

"My Lord, I cannot restrain myself from saying that this philanthropy to China has been shown at the expense of India. Our country has been obliged to carry out the mandate of the Home Authorities and incur loss of an annual income of several million pounds without getting anything in recompense. As shown above, large additional expenditure is required to satisfy the urgent calls of education, and to promote sanitation in order to improve the health of the people and save their lives from such scourges as plague and cholera which carry off millions of people. The proceeds of sale of opium to China brought large sums to the Indian Exchequer. This source of income has vanished now in obedience to a mandate of the British Parliament. It is submitted that a heavy obligation is cast on the British Exchequer to contribute to the expenditure of India a sum pro tanto to the loss caused to her revenues by the abolition of the opium trade with China. My Lord, India is a poor country; she has reached the limits of local taxation; her wants are increasing day by day; she cannot without great detriment to her educational and material progress bear the loss in her sources of income and specially when such a loss is caused to her on sentimental grounds urged by a certain section of the British public. Justice and fair play call for a favourable response to India's appeal for financial help from the ruling country.

"My Lord, there is another ground why this appeal for financial help should be responded to by the Home Government. The expenditure on Military Services has been rising for some time past. Taking the year which is about to close and the one which will shortly begin, there are increases in this head of expenditure of £3,73,000 and £4,81,000, respectively. If for some political reasons it is considered advisable to keep the troops in India on the present high numerical scale, the experience gained in past years, by the continued absence of a large portion from here and their employment in foreign countries, leads to the conclusion that this large number is required more for Imperial than for Indian purposes. That such is really the case was the view expressed on behalf of the India Office by their Financial Secretary, in paragraph 2 of a memorandum submitted by him in 1895 before the Royal Commission appointed to enquire into the question of expenditure in India. That paragraph runs as follows :—

That India is utilized as a reserve for England in a much truer sense than England is for India; that England not merely claims the services of British regiments for the time stationed in India, but that she frequently uses the Native regiments towards the cost of which she has in no way contributed; that it may, therefore, be reasonably urged that England ought to assist in the maintenance in India of so large a force upon which England does not hesitate to draw.

"My Lord, it is therefore evident that a very strong,—nay I would say—an unanswerable case exists for England's giving pecuniary help to India from the British Exchequer; and it will be an act of justice if England will contribute a fair share towards the maintenance of these troops. India will, in this way, get a substantial relief and the amount so set free will be available for increasing expenditure required for the expansion of education of the masses and improvement of sanitation in urban and rural areas.

"The Indian public had entertained a hope that the deliberations of Field Marshal Lord Nicholson's Committee would result in making suggestions for reductions in Military expenditure. The Report of that Committee has not been made public, and as far as we can judge there are not even any signs holding out a hope that any reductions are going to be made in the near future. Instead of reduction there has been an increase during the year which is about to close, and the Budget figures show that there will be a still higher increase in the coming year. The net Military Budget for 1914-15 has been fixed at 20½ millions, which, in the words of the Hon'ble Finance Member, 'represents an advance of £481,000 upon the net expenditure now anticipated in the current year, and of £853,000 above the standard adopted in framing the Budget last March.' No doubt a portion of this increase is of non-recurring character, but the sum of £85,000 representing the additions to the pay of British Service Officers will be a recurring charge of permanent nature.

"My Lord, it might be said that in the description of the financial condition of India, I have not taken into account the future expansion of railway income which is an important item of assets in the Indian finances, and that Railways in the past few years have given substantial increases which have played an important part in swelling the surpluses. If we could count upon a sure and steady rise in the receipts from Railways, the future outlook of Indian finances would be more satisfactory. But our late and the present Finance Members have, very properly, expressed opinions not of an assuring character. Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson, in his speech of 1st March last year, said that he 'could not refrain from giving the word of warning.' He went on to say that the Government of India had to pay nearly 4 per cent. for the loans taken in London Market, that in the years 1909-10, 1910-11, 1911-12 the returns on capital spent on Railways were 4·48, 4·66 and 4·99 per cent. respectively, and in 1912-13 that return was 5·89 per cent. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has, for the coming year, estimated the net profits from Railways after meeting all charges including interest at £629,000 less than those of the year which is about to end, and has said that 'although the net profits we have derived from Railways in recent years are per se imposing, they represent very small margin of profits on the total capital involved, and that margin may be materially affected by trade or climatic circumstances beyond our control.' Proceeding further, he said, 'now that we are free from the vagaries of opium, the net railway receipts form the portion of our Budget which it is most difficult to forecast with exactitude or rely on with certainty.'

"My Lord, these are the views of great authorities on Indian finance and they support my remarks that much reliance cannot be placed on a steady and progressive rise in the receipts from railways so as to furnish funds for increasing expenditure under the several heads of administration. My Lord, I venture to suggest that Your Excellency may be pleased to refer the subject of Indian finance to a Committee composed of experts, official and non-official, who may be instructed to go thoroughly into the question and submit a report containing their views as to what steps should be taken to place the financial condition of the country on a sure and stable basis.

"My Lord, I shall now proceed to make a few remarks on some other matters which I consider of importance; and the first of these is the removal of capital from Calcutta to Delhi. It appears that in some quarters, specially in Calcutta, adverse criticisms are still made on this change. Whatever may be the view of those critics, to the great majority of the Indian people the change was a very welcome measure. The city of Delhi has historical associations in the minds of Hindus and Mohammedans both. It formed the capital of a large kingdom in the ages surrounded with hoary antiquity. Indraprasta was the seat of Government of the Pandavas in the time of the great war of the Mahabharata It was the capital of the great Chauhan Emperor Pirthiraj with whom the Hindu rule in this part of the country ended. When Mohammedans came, dynasty after dynasty retained Delhi as their capital. It was a very wise and far-sighted policy of His Majesty the King-Emperor to restore to this city the honour of being the seat of Government of an empire much more extensive than either in the Hindu or the Mohammedan times. In the address presented to Your Excellency on the occasion of your visit to Lucknow soon after the great Coronation Durbar, the Oudh Taluqdar's Association—of which I have the honour to be a humble member—welcomed the change in the following words:—

The very important announcement of the change of the Capital of the Indian Empire from Calcutta to Delhi made by His Imperial Majesty has given us great satisfaction. The change will be beneficial and advantageous to the public interest of India and we believe good will result from it. The removal of the seat of the Central Government to Delhi will bring that Government in greater and closer touch with the majority of the Ruling Chiefs as also with us the people of Oudh and will facilitate to a very high degree intercommunication between the Imperial and the Provincial Governments and their peoples.

"More than two years have passed since then, and the experience gained during this period has shown the soundness of our view expressed at that time.

"This brings me to the question of expenditure on New Delhi. The opinion of the public is that that expenditure should be met from loans, and not from the current revenue. The speech delivered by the Hon'ble Finance Member had left some doubt in my mind regarding the source from which the sum of Re. 1 crore proposed to be spent in the coming year was to come. I approached the Hon'ble Finance Member with the view of getting information on the subject. He was good enough to point out to me that the New Delhi expenditure was lumped with Railways and Irrigation in the General Capital Account and formed a very small portion of it, and that the figures in paragraph 63 of the Financial Statement showed that for the coming year it was about $\frac{1}{11}$th of the whole. As regards the extent to which the Capital Expenditure is to be met from current surplus or previous accumulated balances, I was referred to the figures in the tabular statement given in that paragraph. It was further pointed out to me that making the adjustment required against balances due to the fact that a portion of these represented a loan raised in advance for 1914-15 during the current year, the figures roughly stood thus:—

Total Capital outlay provided from balances and current surplus.	£4½ million.
Total amount from borrowing (making the adjustment above referred to).	About 11 million.

"As regards the contribution from surplus and balances, the Hon'ble the Finance Member pointed out to me that this was considerably less than the per contra surplus contributions of Railways and productive irrigation works to the coming year's revenue budget. Railways were giving an income of £3·9 million and irrigation £1·8 million as detailed in paragraphs 67 and 69 of the Financial Statement. In these circumstances, I think it might most fairly be argued that the amount obtained from surplus and balances against the capital outlay for 1914-15, was entirely for these heads, and that the sum of £700,000 allotted for Delhi expenditure was entirely financed from loan funds. The explanation so kindly furnished to me by the Hon'ble Finance Member convinced me of the soundness of the Government policy, and also of the inadvisability of raising a loan to be called specially as loan for the New Capital.

[24TH MARCH, 1914.] [Rai Sri Ram Bahadur; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

"My Lord, there is another matter towards which I wish to draw the attention of Your Excellency's Government, it is the establishment of a State Bank for India. As to the advantages of such an institution I cannot do better than quote a passage from the speech of the Hon'ble Finance Minister delivered on 2nd instant, at the time of presenting the Financial Statement. He said 'the advocates of a "State", or, as I should prefer to call it, a "Central", Bank will no doubt find much in recent events to justify their views. Primâ facie, it may well be urged that, in such a crisis as that through which we have been passing, there ought to be a centralised and comprehensive handling of the whole situation, and a unification of resources with a view to their being applied, whenever they are most needed at any moment, as opposed to the existing system under which each Presidency Bank's sphere of operations is confined to the particular territory with which it deals, while its power of giving assistance is materially circumscribed by the restrictions of the present law.' In his speech the Hon'ble Finance Minister left the question open till the views of the Royal Commission on Indian Finances became known on the subject. The report of that Commission has just been received in India. That report shows the Commissioners were unable to give any opinion for or against the establishment of such Bank. But they say that the question is of great importance and deserves careful and early consideration by the authorities, and suggest the appointment of a small expert committee to examine the whole question in India either to pronounce against the proposal or to elaborate a detailed and concrete scheme capable of immediate adoption. My Lord, we have now been apprised of the Royal Commission's views on this subject. It is therefore for Your Excellency's Government to take the initiative in the matter and we hope that it will soon be done.

"My Lord, I beg to bring to your notice the fact that some of the rules at present in force for the transaction of business in Your Excellency's Legislative Council are not satisfactory. I do not propose to describe in detail on this occasion the defects in those rules. All that I wish to say at present is that Your Excellency will be pleased to take the question of their revision into consideration.

"Before I conclude I would like to say a few words on famine and scarcity prevailing in a considerable area of the United Provinces. This is a subject which is for the moment engaging the serious attention of the Government and the people. The tract worst affected comprises an area of more than 46,000 square miles and a population of 19 millions. It includes the whole of the Agra, Rohilkhand and Bundelkhand Divisions and parts of Allahabad and Lucknow Divisions. The number of people on relief and test works together with their dependants, in the week ending the 14th of this month, was 81,526, and on gratuitous relief 63,977.

"The people of the United Provinces are thankful to the Government for the timely distribution of agricultural advances and for the other measures of relief which are being taken to remove the severity and intensity of famine and scarcity."

The Hon'ble Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—"My Lord, I wish to associate myself with the previous speakers in the words of appreciation to which they gave expression for the masterly exposition of Indian finance which the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer gave in his financial statement. I do so particularly because he has, if I may use the expression, put all his cards on the table and has taken the Indian public into his full confidence.

"I feel confident that the explanations which he has so lucidly offered will lead to helpful examination and criticism and will ultimately lead to improvements in the financial arrangements of this country.

"My Lord, the first point that I wish to deal with is the principles underlying the provincial settlements. I do not propose to detain the Council in going over the history of the question. The principles underlying the provincial settlements, as I understand them, are that each province collects revenue under several heads. These heads are given three different names—the Imperial heads, the divided heads and the provincial heads. Under Imperial heads of Salt, Customs, Opium, Railways, Posts and Telegraphs, the whole of the revenue is handed over to the Imperial Government. Then out of a certain number of provincial heads, the Government of India call for and receive certain portions of the revenues collected, while some items of revenue are left as entirely provincial. After adjusting these items, the Government of India examine the normal expenditure of each province, and if it is found that the amount of revenue that would be left with the province under this arrangement is insufficient, then fixed assignments are given for the purpose of enabling each province to carry on its administration. That completes the system of provincial settlements. The Government of India, if they find that the amount of revenue that they have drawn from the different provinces under this system is more than their actual requirements, then they keep aside a certain sum which they call surplus and distribute the balance amongst the provinces in the form of bounties and doles. Now, My Lord, it appears to me that, though such a system is admirably suited to maintain the high dignity of the Government of India as it enables them to take money from the provinces out of their revenues in many cases in excess of their requirements and then having taken the money in this way it is distributed in the form of doles and bounties, for sanitation, education, and other purposes, and in that way they earn the thanks of Provincial Governments and provincial representatives for their great generosity, it can hardly be regarded as a correct or just system. The system which appears to me to meet all the requirements of the case is this. Let the entire revenues under Imperial heads be paid into the Imperial Government and let a fixed portion of provincial revenue be taken from each province, to meet the total Imperial requirements. In determining each provincial contribution, regard should be had to the extent of provincial population and their needs and the ratio per head. Each province, besides paying under Imperial heads, should be asked to contribute towards Imperial requirements such portions of their revenues, fixed under normal conditions and increased under special circumstances, so that the requirements of the Government of India may be amply met and the provinces may be free to develop their own resources and their own expenditure under sanitation, education, etc. The principle which governs the present system is open to another objection Under the system which I am advocating, each Province would secure the fullest benefit of the amount of revenue which it collects under provincial and divided heads and utilize the same for the benefit of its own people, subject to Imperial contribution. Under existing arrangements it may frequently happen that contributions levied from some provinces may be appropriated for expenditure in other provinces. Of course the Provinces which receive such presents would be most highly grateful to the Government of India for the bounties and grants paid to them, but what about those Provinces which are forced to contribute towards the support of other Provinces who do not sufficiently tax the people for their own needs and requirements? Sir, I venture to offer this suggestion in the hope that it will receive the careful consideration of the Government of India, and especially of the Hon'ble the Finance Member. It is always a very pleasing task to be able to have sufficient funds at one's disposal, and to be able to distribute them amongst insistent provinces and earn their thanks.

"I think it will be recognised that the principle I have enunciated is sound; and I trust that the Hon'ble the Finance Minister will indulge in a little self-denial by dispensing with such gratitude and will allow each Province to develop not only its revenue but its expenditure on the lines of its own financial considerations.

"My Lord, the next point which I will deal with is one which I have on several occasions, both during the previous and the current Sessions, urged upon the attention of this Council, I mean the great necessity there is for the industrial development of this country. Sir, it was very gratifying to me that the Hon'ble Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis has adopted my idea in giving expression to what has been my strongest conviction, viz., that this Government should secure fiscal independence. I do not wish to dilate on that point at present, but I do feel that fiscal independence for this Government is essentially needed for the promotion of our industrial development. Sir, how important industrial development in India is, is generally conceded. But one point to which I should like particularly to invite the attention of this Council to-day is the effect which industrial development has upon famine conditions. Sir, I will read a portion of the report which the Government of Bombay has made on the famine of 1911-12 in the Bombay Presidency. The Bombay Government in their report say—

The area affected included two distinct tracts of country, the northern part of Guzrat which only in recent years has come to be regarded as liable to famine, and the plains of the Deccan and Karnatic where the rainfall is scanty and capricious. Both have suffered from the wide spread famine of 1899-1900, and the two succeeding years of scarcity; and the Deccan and Karnatic had been again visited by famine in 1905-1906, but a rapid recovery was in progress. The cultivators were profiting by a rise in the price of agricultural products and fortunately had two distinctly good seasons immediately before the year under report. Increased industrial activity and a number of large works in progress had created a demand for labour in excess of the supply and rendered the labouring classes largely independent of agricultural employment. Thus, when the strain came, the people displayed an unexpected power of resistance, and though the failure of the harvest was nearly as complete and the prices of food grains rose nearly to the same level as in 1899 and 1900, the assistance that people required from Government was infinitely less. Employment on relief works had to be provided only for the Bhils and Kolis of the Panch Mahal District. Elsewhere the district officers were able to devote all their energies to the task of mitigating the effects of a severe fodder famine and of preventing a disastrous loss of agricultural stock.'

"Sir, I think it will be admitted that this quotation clearly indicates that one of the measures for famine relief, in addition to irrigation and the construction of railways, is the development of industries for the employment of the Indian people. If these people are largely employed in industrial concerns, the effects of famine will become infinitesimal. It appears to me, that just as the Government of India are devoting so much attention to the construction of railways and to the construction of irrigation works, they should also bestow equal attention to the development of industries in India. Sir, to show the effect of present conditions, I will merely invite the attention of the Council to a few words which the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has given expression to in his Financial Statement. He says:—

'I now turn to our trade figures. In the first 9 months of the year there has been an increase of over 9 crores in the exports of raw cotton and 8 crores in the value of jute exports raw and manufactured.'

"It will be observed that although we have developed the cotton industry on a large scale in the Bombay Presidency, so much as 9 crores worth of additional raw cotton was exported during the current 9 months. It is a question for very serious consideration by the Government as to whether they should permit the exploitation of the raw materials of this country for manufacture in other countries which prohibit the importation, under heavy duties, of our manufactured goods. I know it is a very big problem and I do not therefore propose to deal with it at present. I am only drawing the pointed attention of the Government of India to the effect of the present fiscal policy, which is forced upon this country.

"I observe, Sir, that the provision for Railway construction is repeated this year at 12 million, and I find that the provision for irrigation is only £1,200,000. I understand that such a small provision for irrigation is due to the fact of the inability of the department to spend more money. If that is so, we have no criticism to offer; but it must be stated that the country regards the promotion of irrigation as of far more importance than the construction of railways, and I trust that the several other projects to which the Hon'ble Member in charge has referred in a later paragraph will be expedited and that in future years we will find a very large increase in the budget provision for irrigation works.

[Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [24TH MARCH, 1914.]

"Sir, it must be gratifying to Your Lordship and to the Government of India that Member after Member has got up in the Imperial Council to urge that their policy in regard to the construction of the New Capital should be carried out in a manner befitting the great Indian Empire. I think it is most appropriate for the non-official Members of this Council, who can well claim to represent the taxpayers of this country, to give unanimous expression to their view that they want their Government to be well-housed and that a Capital should be built befitting not only the great Indian Empire, but the dignity of the vast British Empire.

"The only other point I will make—it will only occupy a couple of minutes—is about the opium revenue. Your Excellency will have seen the general feeling that prevails amongst the Indian people in regard to the surrender of this revenue. Sir, if it was surrendered out of humanitarian motives, the Government of India are entitled to ask the Chinese Government also to prohibit the cultivation of that drug within their country. But apart from this aspect, I cannot help pointing out that the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has increased the sale of opium during the next year from 9,000 to 132,000 chests. May I ask, why, if the use of opium is deleterious to Chinamen and the export of the drug to China is therefore prohibited, it should be exported to the Straits Settlements, Hongkong and other parts of the world? Are not the residents of these places also human beings, and do they not require the same humanitarian consideration from the Indian Treasury as the Chinamen have secured? If you want to work the problem logically, you ought to extinguish the opium revenue altogether. There is no meaning, to my mind, in saying 'We will save the Chinaman from the use of a deleterious drug, but we will let others, including Indians, have free access to it.' Sir, I think the whole thing has been a sorry business, and I cannot help repeating that the manner in which India has been forced to surrender this revenue is open to serious objection."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, the Budget has been discussed so far as the details of it are concerned, by many speakers from many points of view. I would confine myself to a few questions of principle that seem to me to be deserving of consideration. In the first instance, My Lord, I would invite attention to the desirability of the Finance Member taking the non-official Members of this Council into his confidence at an earlier stage in the preparation of the Budget than he does at present. My Lord, Your Lordship has seen, and every member of the Council has seen, that when the Budget has been prepared, when all the disposition of revenue, which the Hon'ble the Finance Member thinks fit to make, has been made, it is practically a hopeless task for any non-official Member to bring about any material change by Resolution or otherwise, in the disposition so made. I do not claim that the suggestions of Hon'ble Members are always unexceptionable. I do not claim that for non-official Members, any more than I think my hon'ble friend the Finance Member will claim it for his Department. But I think that if the Legislature has thought fit to provide that an opportunity should be given to non-official Members to make suggestions as to the disposal of the revenue of the year, as to the regulation of expenditure, by reduction or increase in any direction, then a real and suitable opportunity should be given to offer criticisms or suggestions when they can be offered in an effective manner. I leave this matter here, My Lord, in the hope that it will receive the consideration which, in my humble opinion, it deserves.

"The next question to which I will refer is the control which His Lordship the Secretary of State for India exercises over our Budget, and the disposal of the revenues of India. I do so, My Lord, in view of the proposals for a re-organization of the India Council which Lord Crewe outlined last July in a speech made by him in the House of Lords. Time will not permit me to go into a detailed discussion of the proposals so put forward; but I wish to give expression to the views which I believe are largely held by educated Indians that the proposal to abolish or modify the Committee System which exists at present and to substitute for it a system under which particular departments, with which the India Office has to deal, will be placed in the charge of particular Members of Council is in principle objectionable and ought not to be carried out. On this point the views of educated Indians have received strong support from the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Indian Finance and Currency. Speaking of the Finance Committee of the India Council, they point out that it will be highly undesirable to do away with that Committee and to put the Financial work of the India Office in charge of one Member of Council as Finance Member at the head of the Finance Department. Dealing with this matter the Royal Commission say in paragraph 208 of their Report:

'In this proposal, so far as it affects financial matters, we cannot concur. We are of opinion that the financial work of the India Office, which involves many technical and difficult problems requiring for their consideration a combination of Indian experience with expert acquaintance with the London Money Market, is of a kind for which the Committee system is specially suitable, and we think that the continuance of the Finance Committee in some form is most desirable.'

"My Lord, we object strongly to one member of the Secretary of State's Council sitting in judgment over the collective judgment of the Government of India when they have threshed out a proposal, considered it in its various aspects, and in so doing have taken the views of the non-official members and the general public and press of this country into consideration. I object most strongly to one member of the India Council taking up such proposals and disposing of them. The change proposed by Lord Crewe would alter the character of the India Council from an advisory or consultative body into an administrative one. This is virtually the same proposal which was formulated many years ago by General Chesney in his book on Indian Polity. He expressed himself strongly in favour of a system of entrusting particular departments of the work of the India Office to particular members of the Council. But, My Lord, General Chesney also pointed out at page 378 of his book (I believe it is in the third edition) that 'an objection might perhaps be raised to the change that it would be too strong; that able and experienced men coming to it after holding high positions in India and placed in charge of the different departments of the India Office might be tempted to try to direct the administration of the country from their new position, and to press their own views against those of their successors in India. This is certainly a possible danger.' General Chesney went on to say that the restraint which the India Office have recognised in dealing with the Government of India would provide an effective safeguard against such a danger. But I submit, My Lord, that in this he was mistaken. And we do not like the idea that a position should be created where one member of the India Council would be able to overrule the Government of India and to direct their policy in matters of importance. My Lord, we welcome the proposal to re-organise the India Council. The Indian National Congress has, from the year 1885, when it first came into existence, up to the last year when it met at Karachi, repeatedly urged a reform and reconstruction of the India Office. It has urged that the Council of the India Office as it exists should be ended, if it cannot be properly mended; and that the proper way to mend it would be that the Council should consist of nine members, one-third of whom should be Indians elected by the elected non-official members of the Imperial and Provincial Legislative Councils, one-third, officials who have served in India for not less than ten years, and the remaining one-third, public men of merit and ability unconnected with the Indian administration. I hope that before coming to a final conclusion, the Government will give full consideration to the views of educated Indians in this matter.

"I submit, My Lord, that the most satisfactory solution would be to have nine members in the India Council, appointed as suggested by the Congress, and to divide them into Committees of three members each, one of whom should invariably be an Indian to represent the views of educated Indians to the Secretary of State. The important reform which Lord Morley introduced by appointing two Indians as members of his Council has been deeply and widely appreciated. It will be a natural and beneficial development of that policy that in every Committee of the Secretary of State's Council which is entrusted with the work of revising or reviewing the work of the Government of India, there should be at least one Indian member to ensure a full presentation and consideration of the Indian point of view of the questions dealt with by the Committee.

"There is another matter to which the Finance Commission have drawn attention about which I would with, Your Lordship's permission, say a few words. Dealing with the system of preparing our budget and our large balances, the Commission have pointed out that the Government of India have for several years been putting up large aggregate balances by under-estimating revenue. At pages 31 and 32 the Commission say 'In the circumstances of the case it would therefore seem that primarily the question is one of estimating and we cannot but feel that in preparing their estimates of revenue the Government of India have erred on the side of caution.' Further on they say 'In the circumstances of the case, we recognise that cautious estimating was in the main justifiable,' but they add that 'it was carried rather further than was necessary.' They recognise, My Lord, the difficulties of preparing a budget in India, which is to be presented before the end of March, because our revenues fluctuate to a large extent with the success or failure of the agricultural operations of each year, and these depend predominantly on the monsoon; and they have suggested that the date of the beginning of the financial year should be changed so as to correspond with the calendar year. The Commission say:

'The late Finance Member of the Viceroy's Council, indeed, has described the framing of a budget as a gamble in rain. We would observe, however, that this description applies only because the budget is taken before the monsoon. It is clear in fact that from the financial point of view the present date is almost the most inconvenient possible for the budget and, the suggestion has therefore been made that the date of the beginning of the financial year should be altered from the 1st April to the 1st November or 1st January. There may be administrative difficulties in carrying the suggestion into effect, but financially it would be a great improvement. Criticism directed against the inaccuracy of Indian budgeting is not effectively answered by a reference to the difficulties which arise from the present conditions. It has to be shown further that these difficulties cannot be removed by a change of date, without incurring graver disadvantages, and we commend the question to the consideration of the Government.'

"I hope, My Lord, that the Government of India will be pleased to take this matter into their consideration at a very early date, and rectify an evil which has been protested against both in this country and in England.

"Coming to the disposition of the Indian revenues in the budget before us, I may say, My Lord, that I did not intend to speak on this occasion of Provincial Settlements; but the remarks of my Hon'ble friend Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola lead me to repeat what I have said several times before that I consider such a radical change in the system essential as will make the Provincial Governments financially semi-independent of the Government of India. And in this connection I would invite the attention of the Council to one passage in Sir John Strachey's book on India. I will quote Sir John Strachey to-day, because I am sure he will receive more consideration from the Hon'ble the Finance Member than did Sir Charles Trevelyan whom I quoted on a former occasion. Speaking of the prevailing unitary system, Sir John Strachey says:

'Concentration and centralization were often inevitable, while the empire was being gradually built up. But now that it has been constituted on a firm and peaceful basis, decentralization is an essential condition of progress. The time will come when, in regard to many ordinary matters of internal administration, each great province of India will be virtually a separate State'

"I hope the Hon'ble the Finance Member will take this important question into his consideration and earn the gratitude of the country by expediting the advent of the day when our provinces will be more independent than they are; that is to say, when there will be a real system of provincial finance established to enable the Government of the different large provinces to properly promote the well-being of the people entrusted to their care.

"My Lord, there are many other questions which call for attention, but time does not permit of my dealing with them at any length. I will only briefly draw the attention of the Council to the provision for railway expenditure in the next year. At page 24 of the speech introducing the Financial Statement, the Hon'ble the Finance Member points out that the total capital outlay to the end of the year 1914-15 on railways will be £343,086,000, and that the percentage of net profit to capital outlay will be 1·14. In the very next page he points out with regard to Irrigation that the total outlay to the end of the same year will be £35,907,000, and the percentage of net profit to capital outlay will be 5·03. My Lord, I endorse what has been said by several other members that irrigation should receive a little more attention than it has done, and that railways should receive a little less attention than they have done. As a justification for a high railway programme, it has been urged that railways yield us profit. I will quote the Hon'ble the Finance Member himself as to the extent of that profit. He says: 'The net profit has thus varied from about ¾ per cent. to 1½ per cent. in the years mentioned. In 1909-10 it amounted to ¼ per cent. only, and in 1908-09 it disappeared and was replaced by deficit.' And then he goes on to repeat a warning which Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson had pronounced. 'Briefly, although the net profits we have derived from railways in recent years are per se imposing, they represent but a small margin of profit on the total capital involved, and that margin may be materially affected by trade or climatic circumstances beyond our control.' I take it that these figures correctly state the position; if they do not, the Hon'ble the Finance Member will, I hope, take the earliest opportunity of explaining them. But taking them as correct, I submit, that to borrow at 3 per cent. and to earn 1 per cent. or a little more makes but a poor business. It certainly does not justify any enthusiasm for a high railway programme.

"There is another aspect of the question. Railways have no doubt greatly improved the country, nobody would think of underrating the benefits resulting from them; but I fear that sometimes the advocates of railways exaggerate the benefit they bring to the people, and overlook the disadvantages which result from them. Railways, no doubt, prove great blessings in carrying food to the people in areas stricken by famine, but their inevitable tendency has been to raise the general level of prices. In many places what used to be famine prices prevail now throughout the year, mainly as the result of new lines of railway having been opened. Besides, railways cannot be a direct preventive of famine, while irrigation is; and therefore the insistent claim of Indian public opinion that irrigation should receive more attention than it has received is, I submit, deserving of the fullest consideration from Government. We recognise that the irrigation projects which have already been carried out have been among the most glorious achievements of British rule in this country. For these achievements we are very grateful, as we feel that they have been instrumental in producing plentiful harvests and in saving life and mitigating suffering. But we submit that more should be done in the same beneficial direction. We submit that more attention should be paid not only to river canals but also to what are called inundation canals, that will receive and distribute water in the dry days of the rainy season, and more particularly to tanks and wells. The recent Irrigation Commission recommended that there should be a great multiplication of masonry wells wherever that is needed and is possible. I would draw the attention of the Hon'ble the Finance and Revenue Members to this question. The multiplication of wells would create conditions in which even on a failure of the monsoon, people would be able to irrigate their lands. True, My Lord, the Government cannot regulate sunshine and shower, but it certainly can and ought to provide ample facilities to the people to draw the water that is stored under ground, to irrigate the soil and to make it yield a rich harvest.

"Passing, My Lord, to another point, may I humbly point out that there seems to be no definite determined policy with regard to financing Education and Sanitation. We have railways being provided for year after year. Irrigation also is being similarly promoted, and I submit, My Lord, that it is high time that there should be a definite financial policy which would ensure or, at any rate, give a reasonable assurance, that primary education shall be regularly and steadily promoted to the extent to which Government has committed itself to promote it. This demands that there should be a sound and well-defined policy to finance it. We cannot make much progress towards universal primary education with the help of merely occasional grants made out of uncertain surpluses of revenue. With regard to secondary education I would invite the attention of the Government of India to the vital need for providing students at school with a better preparation for the University and for life than they get at present. It is necessary to so raise the standard of education in high schools that on leaving them students will be better prepared to benefit by University courses, and be better trained also to enter into life. With this end I would provide teaching up to the standard of the F. A. in all High Schools, and I would then let a student take his degree in 3 years after he passes out of the school. This would no doubt require an increase of expenditure. But it will mean money usefully spent. My Lord, there are only two other points to which I would like, with your permission, very briefly to refer—"

His Excellency the President:—"I can only give the Hon'ble Member two minutes."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Thank you, My Lord. I join with other Hon'ble Members in expressing our gratitude to Your Excellency for having contributed so powerfully to the solution of the South African question. I believe that the question of the disabilities of Indians in Canada is also receiving Your Excellency's attention. And I hope that the time is not distant when Your Excellency will earn the further gratitude of Indians by having that question also solved in a satisfactory manner. The other matter, My Lord, is the want of a good library at Delhi for the purposes of Council business. I may say in passing that when dealing with a resolution the other day that the surplus should be reduced by half, I was unwittingly drawn into a discussion with Sir William Meyer regarding the provision for expenditure on Delhi. I did not attack that expenditure. As Delhi has been made the capital, expenditure in building it is inevitable. My whole contention was that having provided one crore for such expenditure in the budget, it was wrong also to provide for a high railway programme of £12 million, and to keep a large surplus in hand with a view partly to finance it. Well, Delhi will necessarily take time to be built up. But there are some matters which cannot wait till it is so built up, and a library is one of them. I hope, My Lord, that the Government will provide us early with a suitable library, which will cause a saving of our time and enable us to render better service both to the Government and the public."

The Hon'ble Raja Jai Chand:—"My Lord, the Budget discussion, as usual, is full of broad views and rich sprinkle of assorted demands, is well spread over all sides, while several demands have already met with liberal consideration of Your Excellency's Government. It is true that, family affairs pretty fairly attract the attention of a dutiful mother. The children require things, and they may be satisfied or refused. But when they grow up into noisy adults gifted with a free use of the power of speech, their cries are sure to bring the mother round to listen to the legitimacy and reasonableness of their requisitions and answer to their wants accordingly. But, if there be any dumb member of the family, who cannot expressly urge his demands, it remains for the mother to attend to and not ignore his wants.

"My Lord, if my this imaginary focussing Kodak is accurate, then there is the perfect photo of His Majesty the King-Emperor's loyal subjects residing within the Land of the Five Rivers, mostly consisting of Hindu and Mohammedan martial tribes. The more these look soldier-like, the more they are far outstripped in the race of literary advancement by communities inhabiting other Indian Provinces, and need special considerations of the Government of India, who should be so kind as to extend to them facilities in order to bring education within their easy reach.

[24TH MARCH, 1914.] [Raja Jai Chand; Srijut Ghanasyam Barua.]

"Since last year, when I lately spoke on the occasion of the Budget speeches, I have not come across any cries of protest or grievances from my fellow-land-holders; but the less I tried the more I gained in that direction. When I go back to and see the visible marks of their internal position I find that sanitation, medical aid (especially for female sex), consideration of moderation in assessing plots of land irrigated by means of wells or small rainy canals constructed by poor zamindars from their own purses call for an active support and a liberal consideration by both the Provincial and Imperial Governments. The fact to which I particularly beg to draw the attention of Your Excellency's Government is that high class Rajput and Brahman agriculturists who are by religion and custom debarred from ploughing, generally own very small tracts of land, whose total produce is absolutely insufficient to defray their expenses even for six months. In my humble opinion facility should be extended to them by grant of more land, in any district of the Province, for the agricultural purposes.

"I, therefore, on behalf of the dumb land-holders of the Punjab, whom I have the honour to represent in this Council, beg to express our sincere and staunch loyalty and devotion to the Throne and deep sense of gratitude for the interest which Your Excellency is taking in our welfare; and I earnestly hope, that time will not be far off when our humble demands above alluded to will be favourably considered."

The Hon'ble Srijut Ghanasyam Barua:—"My Lord, as the temporary Provincial Settlement with Assam is coming to an end next year and the terms of the permanent settlement will be considered in the course of the year, I beg Your Excellency's leave to utilize the privilege of this day in putting forward some facts about the Province deserving of the notice of Your Excellency and this Council.

"My Lord, education, sanitation and communications are some of the most pressing needs of my Province. I will first speak about its educational position. From the very able and interesting report of our worthy and capable Director of Public Instruction for 1912-13 (this is the latest report) it appears that the total number of towns and villages in the Province is 29,373, the number of towns being 21. The population is roughly 7,060,000. The total number of primary schools for boys is 3,534, giving instruction to 138,236 boys. This shews that out of every 17 villages, 15 are without a school, and only about 20 boys per mille of population receive primary education. The number of primary schools for girls gives a ratio of 1 school to 211 villages, giving instruction to 5 girls in a population of 2,000. The total number of secondary schools is 177, of which 154 are of the middle standard, the number of high schools for boys being 27 and that for girls being 2, of which one was opened only in the year under report. Of the middle schools 10 are devoted to girls. The total number of boys receiving secondary education is 25,249 and the total number of girls getting such education is 1,209, giving ratios of 3·57 and ·17 respectively to a population of 1,000. There are only two Arts Colleges with a roll of 360 scholars. Both these colleges want expansion and improvement, which are being attended to and to which I shall refer presently. At present the inadequacy of provision in those colleges is keeping something like 200 boys in the Bengal colleges.

"In these circumstances I hope to be excused if I venture to ask Your Excellency and this Council to vouchsafe liberal and special treatment for some time yet to my poor and backward Province, which may rightly be said to be just emerging from what may be called a series of past vicissitudes.

"I now beg to lay before the Council the present financial needs for education as set forth by the Director of Public Instruction. Schemes have been sanctioned for development and improvement of the Cotton and the Murari Chand Colleges, involving in the case of the former a recurring annual expenditure of Rs. 50,000 and a non-recurring expenditure of Rs. 3,00,000 and in the case of the latter of Rs. 82,532 recurring and Rs. 6,00,000 non-recurring respectively. Referring to the provincialisation of some aided, and the improvement of some unaided, high schools, the Director says:

'Meantime it may be stated that the action proposed will involve the Government in very heavy additional charges both for recurring and non-recurring expenditure. The special grants from the Government of India amounting to Rs. 64,000 will go far towards meeting the recurring charges'. I may add that the non-recurring charges under this portion of the project of improving high schools will be not less than Rs. 4,00,000. With regard to the existing Government high schools, the Director says 'it is useless to expect really good work in our high schools until they are provided with a sufficiency of suitable class rooms. At present, in the majority of cases, the class rooms are insufficient in number, ill-lit, badly designed and so placed in relation to each other as to render supervision difficult'. In some of the schools, the school-buildings have proved insufficient of accommodation and are therefore in need of extension. Projects are, therefore, being considered for the erection of entirely new buildings in some cases and for the extension and improvement of the present buildings in others, as well as for the erection of new hostels. About these projects the Director expresses himself thus: 'A large grant of Rs. 3,50,000 from the Government of India will probably suffice for the immediate present in the matter of hostel accommodation, but it will require funds far in excess of those communicated to make any definite impression upon the programme of school construction'. With regard to the teaching staff the Director says 'if the schools are to be staffed by competent and contented teachers, it will be necessary to offer very much higher rates of pay. This has been realized and a scheme is in preparation. It will involve expenditure much in excess of anything which the Provincial revenues can afford'. At present the English teachers are put down, as a class, as being inexpert. Out of 678 masters only 77 are graduates and only 34 trained men. The Director, therefore, says that a new training college for Assam is an 'immediate necessity'. For the Law College which has been recently sanctioned, large amounts both recurring and non-recurring will be required. A medical school for the Surma Valley has been demanded and will probably be found to be a reasonable demand calling for similar expenditure. The needs of female education are summarised by the Director as being (1) teachers, (2) more and higher schools, (3), trained teachers, and (4) 'over all' he says 'is the need for larger subsidies from the public revenues'. Referring to primary education, the report says that during the year under report Boards spent Rs. 1,42,134 in excess of their obligations. The following are the Director's remarks: 'The growth of income can hardly suffice to meet the normal increase in expenditure on existing institutions and development must be retarded unless the Boards are helped by continuous and continuously increasing subsidies from the State'. He also considers that large sums are needed for the improvement of existing training schools and for the establishment of new ones for training primary-school teachers and also for the improvement of their terms of service.

"He says: 'The first need, however, is not for the improvement of the training school, although this is most important, but for the improvement of the terms of service so as to attract to the profession a less lowly educated class of men. And we are now fortunately, in view of the Government of India grants received and hoped for, in a position of expectancy that funds will soon be vouchsafed in measure sufficient to permit of village teachers being rewarded at rates which will equal the wages of unskilled labour'. This, in my estimate, will require at least Rs. 50 per school per annum and result in an immediate recurring expenditure of Rs. 1,89,500 and if new schools are opened with a view to double the present number in the course of 30 years as anticipated in the Government of India Resolution of last year, we shall require an addition of about Rs. 15,000 recurring and Rs. 15,000 non-recurring expenditure every year at the rate of Rs. 120 per school under each head. Besides all these, there are questions of technical and industrial education, oriental education and education of special classes. It will thus be seen that the special grants already made by the Government of India are hardly sufficient even for the immediate needs of the province both under recurring and non-recurring heads.

[24TH MARCH, 1914.] [Srijut Ghanasyam Barua.]

"The next bewildering items are sanitation, water-supply and medical relief. It is needless to expatiate largely on these as it is hopeless to meet the wants on these heads, especially the first two, by asking for any suitable grants. Still I cannot but say that all help that can possibly be given should be given. To give some idea of the magnitude of the task, I may quote some figures that were collected in connection with a conference held by our popular Chief Commissioner to consider about the allotment of the special grants of last year.

"The number of villages in the Province was by those figures put at 16,671, a figure which does not seem to be correct as it is only a little more than half of the number (which is of course the correct one) shown in the Report on Public Instruction. Roughly speaking, two villages appear to have been taken as one in most cases. Taking even this figure, we find that only 7,573 villages have satisfactory water-supply, natural or artificial.

"If we have to supply the remaining 9,098 villages with single tanks of Rs. 1,000 each, the figure comes to Rs. 90,98,000. I am sure, as I have indicated above, many of the villages will require more than one tank. If we take the very small figure of Rs. 50 per tank for protecting it by a fencing throughout the year, the recurring expenditure could be over 8 lakhs if all tanks were provided.

"As to other matters of village sanitation it may be said that even a beginning has hardly been made as yet. If we take an average of Rs. 500 per village as initial expenditure for keeping it free from logged water and unhealthy jungle and Rs. 100 for annual up-keep of these improvements, the non-recurring and recurring demands come to roughly Rs. 45,00,000 and Rs. 9,00,000, respectively.

"Comprehensive drainage and water-supply schemes are also necessary in a number of towns; but it is impossible to make rough and ready calculations for them; but every one in the Council is aware what such schemes would mean. A perusal of the annual sanitary report for the year 1912 will show how the special grants of the last two years have been swallowed up by a few towns. The cry for additional medical aid is also loud everywhere.

"Under the head of Communications and Development there is equally immense field for expansion. The liberal grants made in the last two years have not gone further than improving some of the existing roads by being raised, bridged or metalled in some of the most important portions. Even there the programme is anything but complete. Demands are supposed to be the most cautious and unambitious and only the first instalment of the very important items came up to an estimate of close upon Rs. 60,00,000. Nothing like any comprehensive scheme of development or of appreciable new communications has been possible to undertake. And the further development of numerous unexplored resources of the country greatly depend on the opening of new roads.

"I therefore appeal to Your Excellency and to this Council that in consideration of the backwardness of the Province and the impossibility of the normal growth of revenue to cope with its urgent needs, the Government of India will be pleased to continue liberal special grants until the Province comes to a satisfactory footing in all important departments and also to allow a greater share in the divided heads of revenue (especially land revenue) to enable it to meet the rapidly growing increase in the expenditure in all directions.

"In conclusion, I beg to associate myself with my other friends in the Council in expressing my sincere gratitude and thankfulness to Your Excellency for Your Excellency's noble and statesmanlike action in relation to the South African question It is to Your Excellency's action alone that the solution so far arrived at is due; and that action is not only valuable for the immediate results, but it will be more valuable as an example for the future. This action of Your Excellency is only another addition to the long list of benefactions which you have conceived for and conferred upon India, for which Your Lordship will be always gratefully remembered."

The Hon'ble Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar:—"My Lord, at this late hour I will not detain the Council more than a few minutes. I had intended to make some observations on provincial autonomy and on the projected India Office reform. These two points have been a great deal traversed by what has been already said by the Hon'ble Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola and the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.

"First and foremost I desire to state that I share the very warm feelings of appreciation and gratitude expressed by the Hon'ble previous speakers on the action of Your Excellency's Government in view to secure a solution of the acute South African problem. I had an advantage over most of these speakers, because I was present and listened along with thousands of my countrymen, with rapt attention to the memorable pronouncement which Your Lordship made in Madras, when the whole situation was most acute and most depressing. The solution which is now looming in the horizon, I doubt not, is due to a very great extent to that pronouncement, which looking far into the future sent a thrill of joy throughout the country and wherever Indians are. And let me add it caused some considerable surprise and alarm somewhere, but I hope and believe that that surprise and that alarm were healthy and were great factors in the solution which we are about to reach. While therefore the warmest thanks of the country are due to Your Excellency's Government, I should think it is not very desirable to mix up this special situation with the larger question of emigration in general from this country to other countries This is not the time to endeavour to express my convictions and views, which I share along with my countrymen in general as regards that vital national problem. The present South African question can be disposed of on its own merits. It is hardly right to call South Africa a colony of England and a self-governing dominion of England. I mean no disrespect to anybody; all that I wish to say is that England spent enormous blood and money and succeeded in establishing the Boers there more strongly, firmly than they were ever before. And unlike other dominions the coloured population in South Africa is far greater in numbers than the European population there. Therefore the problem of immigration to South Africa stands on a totally different footing, in my humble opinion at all events, from the problem of emigration of pure Indians to Canada, Australia and other countries, where the settled populations are entirely Europeans. Whenever this larger question may arise, and it will arise for a statesmanlike and permanent solution at no distant date, speaking for myself, it would not be altogether right to ignore the difficulties which this and the Imperial Governments will experience in solving that problem; it would not be right to ignore the feelings of those people who are permanently settled in those countries, and who are anxious to exclude an alien population that cannot be absorbed amongst them and by them. For my part I will put it the other way, and I hope I shall not be deemed guilty of offence to anybody, if I venture to say that in case a large colony of Russians or Germans or Englishmen were to settle down in India, I should hesitate to view the question without alarm. Similarly, the Canadians and the inhabitants of the United States and of some others are, I believe, entitled, somewhat at all events (in the present conditions of the world, until we know something more about the destiny of mankind as a whole in the distant future), not to be obliged to add to the problems, economical and political, by allowing an absolutely alien population to settle amidst them, who will not bring wealth with them and who will carry off what they earn to distant countries and who are conditioned ever to remain alien amidst these white populations. But on the other hand, I deprecate the idea of Indians being allowed to emigrate or, on contract, sent to any country where they are not treated on a complete footing of equality with all the other people. Any colony of England which passes discriminative laws and which accords differential treatment to the Indians must be asked and made to discontinue such, or allowed, and must be even encouraged, to prohibit immigration from India altogether; and so far as this Government is concerned, I desire that such emigration should be absolutely discontinued. I am not at all competent enough to say whether this Government has power and means to prohibit emigration altogether from this country to other countries, but in regard to such countries as I have mentioned above, and to which the people emigrate, this country can practically prohibit it, and by the exercise of the right of diplomatic influence an absolute prohibition can be secured. The reason, My Lord, is that I do not wish that the Indian, wherever he might be, should be ever told by treatment and by law that he is an inferior being, which it would be a truism to say he is certainly not, that his rights as a member of the greatest Empire in the world ancient or modern, are, as a matter of fact, inferior to the rights of the favoured members of it. Rather than allow these Indian colonies to go and settle in such a place, do not let them go there at all; let them remain in this country. My view, very humbly, My Lord, is that, so far as emigration to those countries is concerned, it should be discouraged and prohibited by every means India wants absolutely the labour of all her hardy children; we are not developing our resources, as we ought to, and a great deal in that way can be done by retaining them all here. I do not subscribe to the argument often advanced that these people are economically better off in those countries. In the great art, and sacred duty, of making a nation for India and in India, I never can forget the fable of the country mouse and the city mouse. I am like the country mouse. I do not like the mere comfort and luxury of the city mouse and do not like to sacrifice any portion of my liberty, by feelings and sentiments and my dignity as man, as social and rational man, for physical comforts and luxury. I had rather the Indians were here ill-fed, ill-sheltered, ill-clad and ill-educated into his rights than that they should go and earn a great deal of money and be treated like half-slaves and half-rational human beings. Therefore, My Lord, I would accept no compromise between full rights of citizenship and prohibition in any solution of this great problem of emigration from India. A middle course, I am honestly convinced, is highly objectionable as a national misfortune.

"Coming now to the question of finance, it is always difficult for me to tender to the Finance Minister a beautifully blended mixture of provincial patriotism and imperial patriotism I believe that under present arrangements, provincial patriotism is generally synonymous with discontent, and imperial patriotism is subordinate to this provincial patriotism, paradoxical as it may appear. On the whole I have no reason to be discontented with the presentment of the Financial statement this year. Much of what I had intended to say on this subject has been, as I said before, said by Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola. While congratulating the Hon'ble Finance Minister on his success in making such a presentment in spite of famine and of the fall of opium revenue, I believe that there is a statement of his for which I heartily render thanks to the Hon'ble Finance Minister, and that statement is that the present financial relations between the Imperial Government and the Provincial Governments is artificial. And it is so, and I want him, and I implore the Government as early as possible, to get rid of this artificiality between the Imperial and the Provincial Governments. But this cannot be done in the Finance Department alone and by a re-adjustment of financial settlements alone.

"The whole relationship between the Indian Government and the Provincial Governments should be re-examined and re-adjusted. For my part, if I may be allowed to make allusion to the memorable passage in the great despatch of August, 1911, relating to provincial autonomy, that passage has once for all and completely disposed of this question; only the necessary ways and means should be adopted and developed from time to time until we should reach the goal. Your Lordship will pardon me, I trust, if I venture to compare that divine passage to the philosophical system of the great Indian sage, Kapila. His system was attacked as inconsistent with the Vedas when he asked which is inconsistent with which? 'Is it the Vedas that are inconsistent with my philosophy, or is it my philosophy which is inconsistent with the Vedas?' It is true that at last he seemed to allow people, just to avoid annoyance and persecution to construe his philosophy in the light of faith in religion, but he did not re-adjust his philosophy and he continued to teach his chelas his own doctrines. And his philosophy exists to-day, and nobody thinks of its interpretation by religious faith. So I think that it behoves every Indian to save this passage from treatment accorded to it by interpretations in the faith of bureaucracy, in this country and in England. Then it will be all right and begin to bear fruit in a few years; otherwise there is the risk of its being often authoritatively construed until it becomes a foundling some two years hence.

"I also wish to call Your Lordship's attention to another point, and that is the proposed reform of the India Office. It is claimed as a domestic reform. The scheme is outlined by His Lordship the Secretary of State for India, in his speech last year in the House of Lords, and also by the then Under Secretary, the Hon'ble Mr. Montagu, in the House of Commons, a week later. As far as I understand it, its object seems to be three-fold. The Council is now a consultative body; it is proposed to make it an administrative body. The business is now carried on by committees; it is proposed to transact the business by single members, each being put in charge of a separate department. Thirdly, it is important to observe that service in the India Office as member of the India Council should be part and parcel of the service in India, so that it counts for pension. It is also said that it is capable of interchange, i.e., a member of the Indian Civil Service who goes there can come back to India on promotion. This last scheme it is somewhat difficult to understand. For my part, I think the time has come for abolishing the Council altogether. All are agreed that it does not work well. We all know the history of this Council, My Lord. It is a statutory creature, it is the creature of the Government of India Act of 1858. We know that it is a continuation of the Board of Directors. especially the Secret Committee, a mere complimentary continuation. As John Bright put it at the time the Bill was discussed in the House of Commons, this continuation of the Council was due to timidity on the part of the Government, and even of Parliament. Now that is the origin of this Council. It was admitted by Lord Stanley, who introduced the Bill which became the Act of 1858, transferring Company's Government to the Crown, and by all then that the function of this Council was to be one of moral influence and moral control, not administrative influence and administrative control. So from 1858 onwards, we have had only moral influence and moral control exerted by the members over the Secretary of State. I cannot understand why this moral influence and moral control should be at this late hour of the day in its life converted into active administrative control. The noble Lord, the Secretary of State for India, has discovered a new and somewhat startling reason for continuing this Council. He says there may be now and then a Viceroy of independent views and even of an arbitrary turn of mind, backed up by expert advice in India, and unless the Secretary of State then is a Bismarck, he also wants expert advice to enable him to hold his own. In other words, this Council is to be composed of Civil Servants in England in order to fight Civil Servants in India. I cannot quite see, My Lord, how this is to be done, assuming it is desirable. A Member of the Secretary of State's Council will, under the new scheme, receive £1,200 a year, that is, £100 a month. How a Civil Servant from India can go to England and serve on this pay, it is difficult for me to understand. I read both the speeches of the Secretary of State and the Under Secretary of State with some care, and there is no solution indicated there of this difficulty. Take, for instance, an Indian Civil Servant who has served here for 20 years. If he becomes a Member of the Secretary of State's Council, he will only get £100 a month. If he serves in India for 25 years, he can get a retiring pension of £1,000 a year or even £1,200. Therefore, I wish to know who are the people who are likely to go and serve there before and without retiring from the Indian Civil Service on pension? There may be a few people of weak health and of inferior prospects who may wish to go there for the sake of climate and for the sake of health, or who cannot swiftly climb up the ladder of promotion here. Now I cannot at all understand how it is desirable to make the Council administrative by reinforcing it by people of this sort and to exercise a control over great Viceroys, backed up by virile expert advice. The whole reform is asked for on the ground of strengthening the hold of the Secretary of State over the Government of India. The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya said the people view it with alarm; they do, and suspect that the whole object is, as I have said, further to strengthen the control of the Secretary of State over the Government of India. I am very sorry to say that I do not like the proposed reform from any point of view. Under the portfolio system, if some of these members are likely to be promoted to posts in India under the rule of interchange, it may be possible for a member in charge of a department of this Government to tell a Member of the reformed Council, 'If you behave like a good boy on this occasion, you will get a Lieutenant-Governorship as your prize'. Now this sort of interchange has certainly nothing to recommend it to this country. It seems to me that the Council may, with great advantage, be altogether abolished, or, in the alternative, it may be kept consultative and harmless as it is at present.

"Another disquieting element in the scheme of reform is the fact that there are to be two Indian Members as at present, but God knows why. Look at the scheme. It says that 8 members are sufficient. But as there are to be two Indian Members, the number is to be ten. So these two Indian Members are to be supernumerary. Although their salaries are to be met at the expense of the Indian taxpayer, they are to be supernumerary and merely ornamental. They may occasionally be put in charge of departments, but when they do not have this rare privilege, they are, I presume, to be diwans to everybody, consultative diwans. But I do not know what they are to do even as such. My Lord, all this clearly shows that the time has come when the whole Council should be abolished. Reform may be made in a different direction with advantage. It is admitted that the permanent staff of secretaries and assistant secretaries and the clerks of the India Office are very able men and do excellent work. Anything which the Secretary of State wants further in the way of Indian experience can be well achieved by throwing open some of these appointments to distinguished Indians, including domiciled Europeans—to statutory Indians of every race and creed, and even to Civil Servants. We all know that the Secretary of State is not legally bound and as a matter of fact never consults his Members of Council in matters of high and deep policy. Your Lordship knows that in the days of the East India Company this was done entirely by the Secret Committee, not at all by the whole Court of Directors. It was only occasionally that they were controlled by the Board of Control. But this was done exclusively by the Secret Committee, and the practice has been continued by the Secretary of State in his own person exclusively. All that I say, My Lord, is this, that since in important matters of policy the Secretary of State by statute and by usage is not bound to consult the Members of his Council and does not in fact consult them, no case has been made out for the reform such as has been outlined. I do not see why the Secretary of State for India should want a Council, consultative or administrative. Let us take the case of the Foreign Secretary. The present Foreign Secretary has won the admiration of the world, whether we regard his policy in Europe and America, or in Persia, in China or in Japan.

"Has he had a Council with Persian experience, with Chinese experience, with Japanese experience? If not, why should the Secretary of State for India have members with Indian experience? So far as the routine work is concerned, as distinguished from high policy, the staff of permanent secretaries and assistant secretaries is more than sufficient, especially if about one-half of them would be recruited from the Indian Services—Imperial and Provincial. For all these reasons, My Lord, I join in the note of warning that has been sounded that the Secretary of State's reform scheme has caused considerable alarm in this country, and I also believe that, unless it receives further elucidation, it is incapable of being worked so as to carry out his intentions or to be in anywise useful."

The Hon'ble Mr. Abbott :—"My Lord, I beg to take this opportunity of congratulating the Government in general, and the Hon'ble the Finance Minister in particular, on the Budget presented, which shows the flourishing financial position of India to-day, notwithstanding the exceptional season of drought we are at present going through in parts of India and which, whilst seriously affecting the United Provinces, Central India, and Bundelkhand, can only be compared to the appalling famine of 1877. But unlike those dark times what must strike one to-day is the great difference between then and now—a benign and liberal Government, fully equipped and ready to meet the most pressing needs. Speaking as a living witness of the harrowing times of 1877, many a vivid but ghastly picture comes back to my mind of the hundreds of famine-stricken dead and dying on the Grand Trunk Road between Agra and Sipri and many villages deserted to a man. It was a common sight for officers of the Morar cantonment to drive out of an evening and count a score or more of corpses and carcasses, and see strings and strings of famine-stricken people and animals wending their way to the great labour mart of India—Malwa. What do we find on the same road to-day. In the greatest affected area, a few, if any, wanderers instead. Energetic Government and State Engineers, Contractors with their Agents, all strenuously vying with one another for any labour that may be procurable. At the present moment, over the greatest part of the affected area, it will be difficult to find a single labourer on the unemployed list. Speaking from my own experience, I can at the present moment employ 10,000 labourers, in the Gwalior State, instead of which I have been able to procure about 3,500 only; and out of this more than one half have had to be imported—hundreds from Afghanistan and the Frontier. What is even more marked is that these imported men are accepting the same identical rates for their work as the local or village men, despite the fact that they have travelled about a thousand miles from their homes and through country in which their safety and lives were entirely in their hands. This surely is an object lesson to the world and the highest tribute that could be paid to Your Excellency's Administration as also to His Highness the Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, who have been the two potent factors in bringing about these marvellous results.

"My Lord, our province and the people are happy in the knowledge in having at the helm Sir James Meston, who has their fullest confidence in these serious times.

"Your Excellency, I understand that we are allowed the privilege to-day of bringing before this Council any matters relative to the people and communities we have the honour to represent. Taking advantage of this prerogative, I beg to bring to notice some of the disabilities under which the Anglo-Indian Community at present labour; the principal among them are—

"The right to carry arms for King and Country.—I would remind Your Excellency that during your recent tour in Madras you were pleased to affirm that our boys, whose fathers and grandfathers had served in the British Army, were eligible for enrolment. I regret to have to state that at present, notwithstanding this public pronouncement, the privilege is still in practice withheld, and I venture to assert that as long as enlistment is vested in Commanding Officers so long will this right be denied our lads. To mend this unsatisfactory state of affairs, I would beg to suggest that some such recruiting system in particular centres as now prevails in Great Britain may be introduced in India, and that the boys selected direct from these recruiting centres be drafted to units of Cavalry, Artillery and Infantry Regiments. Though the Army is at present open without reserve to any English, Irish or Scotch or Welsh boy—all castes in India being also eligible—the most respectable Anglo-Indian is blocked.

"Representation.—Whilst thanking Your Excellency for the representation already given, the Anglo-Indian Community are anxiously looking forward to the day when Your Excellency will be pleased to accord us representation on all Presidency or Provincial Councils, as also on the Municipal and District Boards, the same as given to our Indian friends.

"Education.—Whilst gratefully thanking Your Excellency for the rapid strides made in this direction in the interests of our Community, I may be pardoned the liberty of reminding Your Excellency that several of the most important Resolutions submitted by the Committee of the Educational Conference of July, 1912, have not yet received the consideration of Your Excellency's

[24TH MARCH, 1914.] [Mr. Abbott; Mr. Pandit.]

Government; more so, [redacted] avenues of employment dependent on higher education.

"Railways.—I would urge that 50 per cent. of appointments in the official grades on Railways be given to experienced and deserving men in the subordinate grades, it being well known that a very much bigger percentage of these appointments are so recruited by the leading Railways of Europe and America. This is further borne out from the fact that on the traffic side of one of the biggest and best managed Railway systems in India the Traffic Manager and all his Deputies are officials who have risen from the subordinate grades. This removes the prejudicial fallacy that sufficiently competent and reliable men cannot be found in the lower ranks.

"Titles.—I would also strongly advocate the granting of titles to the working classes of Anglo-Indians employed on Railways and subordinate Government departments, such as the Police, Post, Telegraph, etc., holding similar distinctions to those of Rai and Khan Bahadur, as is given to Indians.

"Your Excellency, I further beg to take this opportunity of thanking you, your Ministers, and the non-official Members of this Council for the assistance, attention and courtesy I have invariably received, as also for the clear and painstaking lucidity with which the many questions I have from time to time troubled you with, have been patiently listened to and answered."

The Hon'ble Mr. Pandit:—"My Lord, I do not wish at this hour to detain the Council for more than a very few minutes. The Hon'ble the Finance Member has this year presented his first Financial Statement. It is a document which required careful study from us, and it is only our duty to express our obligation to the Hon'ble Member for the extremely lucid statement which was presented to the Council, both in the Memorandum of the Financial Secretary and in the speech explaining his policy which was delivered by Sir William Meyer in the Council on the 1st day of this month. I may instance, for example, the exposition of provincial balances and of the system of the various provinces banking with the Government of India, especially in its bearings on grants for Education and Sanitation, which, so far as last year's statement was concerned, was somewhat obscure to Hon'ble Members who were uninitiated. Last year I had to get the point explained by the then Finance Secretary. There is thus a great advantage in such a statement as this year's and the Hon'ble the Finance Member has also our hearty congratulations upon the satisfactory Budget which he has produced, despite adverse circumstances.

"My Lord, there was a time not many years ago, when questions relating to the Central Provinces and Berar used to come up more frequently before Your Excellency's Council, and several Hon'ble Members seemed to look upon the questions somewhat in the light of an intrusion upon the work of this Council. One Hon'ble Member of this Council had gone so far as to say:—'Give the Central Provinces the Provincial Council they want and have done with it!' Though he himself followed the course he deprecated and dealt at length with matters concerning his province alone. And now that the Central Provinces Legislative Council is within sight, I do not feel that I should be justified in discussing here any provincial questions. I shall be content with associating myself with the views expressed by my Hon'ble friend, Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis, with regard to the raising of the status of the province, which has now attained to a stage when that status can reasonably be asked for, and with urging that the time has also arrived when the Central Provinces should have a Chief Court of their own. Already there are four Judges sitting in the Judicial Commissioner's Court, including one temporary Judge, whose term of office has from time to time been extended, and the volume of work that comes up for disposal before that Court and the number of cases which have to be heard by a Bench of Judges as well as the serious inconvenience experienced in appeals having in certain cases to go to other High Courts, all point to the conclusion that the highest court in the province should be raised to the status of a Chief Court.

"My Lord, several Hon'ble Members have already expressed their alarm at the changes which the Secretary of State for India proposes to introduce in the constitution and working of His Lordship's Council. At this stage I do not wish to say more than this, that it is necessary that responsible and enlightened public opinion in this country should be ascertained with regard to these momentous changes, or at any rate that there should be sufficient opportunity allowed for that opinion being made known to the authorities at home and to Parliament.

"My Lord, at this stage of the discussion on the Budget all that is required of us is that points of a general character arising out of the Budget might be discussed, not for the benefit of one province or another, but that of the whole Country. Several Hon'ble Members have referred to the Provincial Settlements. In view of the general complaint about them I would only urge that when Bengal and Bihar and Orissa will have the question reconsidered next year, when the new settlement with regard to the new provinces is to be effected, the question of the soundness and justice of those made with other provinces might also be gone into.

"My Lord, I have only one word more to say. My Hon'ble friend, Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis, has referred to the question of fiscal autonomy, which is of vital importance to this country. Last year, when speaking on the sugar duties question, I expressed my views on this subject, and I can only say that the instances of Formosa and other countries lend great weight to the proposition which my Hon'ble friend has urged in the interests of the industrial development in India.

"Lastly, My Lord, I wish to point out that although there may be some difference of opinion with regard to railway policy, as to how the expenditure on railways should be met, and whether the profits accruing from them are properly shown and other similar matters, yet I would urge that once the construction of a line is undertaken, it should not be worked in bits here, and bits there; nor portions of the line left in abeyance for a long period, but funds should be found year after year, so that the progress may be steady and the whole line completed within a reasonable period. I would refer especially to the Itarsi-Nagpur railway, the work on which has been carried on by fits and starts ever since it was taken in hand.

"In conclusion, I fully associate myself with all the expressions of heartfelt gratitude which have fallen from Hon'ble Members and in particular from the Hon'ble Sir Gangadhur Chitnavis with regard to Your Lordship's share in the settlement of the important, though delicate, South African-Indian question; with regard to the pride we feel in the effective representation of the views of Your Excellency's Government by the Hon'ble Sir Benjamin Robertson and, last but by no means least, also in connection with the hopes that we all entertain regarding the new and truly Indian Capital of Delhi, the foundation of which was laid by His Majesty the King-Emperor."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"My Lord, I beg to tender my hearty thanks to my non-official friends and colleagues who have spoken to-day for their most kindly references to myself and to this my first Budget. As I said in introducing it, I did my best to make things full and clear, and I am very glad to learn from the remarks of Hon'ble Members that I have succeeded in my object. Well, My Lord, it could never happen to any Finance Member of any Government under the sun to produce a Budget which would satisfy everybody in all its details; but from the general tone of the debate here, and from intelligent criticism received from outside, I think I may well claim, on behalf of Your Lordship's Government, that speaking generally, our proposals and dispositions have met with, I might almost say, universal approval. Of course one man may say we are spending too little here, another that we are spending a bit too much there, and so on; there will necessarily be those differences of opinion. But, speaking generally, I claim the stamp of widespread approval for our financial dispositions.

"Well, My Lord, the debate has been very interesting and has travelled over a great variety of matters past, present and future, and if not from China to Peru, at any rate from the hamlets of Assam to the Secretary of State's Council at Westminster; but, my time being limited, I only propose to deal with those matters which are of most importance as regards the existing Budget. Sufficient unto the day is the evil or good thereof—especially if the day happen to be hot, as this day is But I can assure Hon'ble Members that if I omit any relevant matter owing to the limitations of time, it does not mean that I have overlooked it ; it will be taken into consideration in due course.

"Well, various references have been made to the Finance Commission. The Commission's Report, which has just come to our hands, is of course a document of the highest importance, not merely from the point of view of the Department over which I have the honour to preside, but with reference to the financial and commercial interests of the country generally. The personnel of the Commission was strong and representative, and its inquiries covered the most abstruse problems of currency. as well as a large part of the field of Indian financial policy during recent years. As Your Lordship said in Bombay, however, we shall have to study the report and the evidence carefully before deciding on any action to be taken. I must therefore, decline, in the most friendly way, to be drawn into a reply to any of the references which have been made to a gold mint for India, a State Bank, etc. We fully appreciate the impartiality and fairness of the Commission's attitude, and we anticipate that their labours will be productive of good and lasting results.

"I am afraid that an expression I used in my speech introducing the Financial Statement has caused some misapprehension in the mind of my friend the Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy and some other Hon'ble Members. I spoke in paragraph 20 of the surplus of £1,280,000 as an unallotted balance, and said it was kept to assist us in our heavy capital commitments. When I used the expression 'unallotted balance' I meant 'unallotted' for purposes of the Revenue Budget; but if Hon'ble Members will turn to paragraph 63 of the speech, they will find that it is very much allotted in the Capital budget. It figures there in the second item of Assets as 'Imperial Surplus of 1914-1915', so that it is not an additional reserve amount, as has been supposed by these speakers : it is a vital part of the assets from which our capital programme is to be financed. I also referred to this surplus in paragraph 20 of my original speech as a possible reserve against famine or other unforeseen contingencies; but it can only serve this purpose if withdrawn from the capital account.

"I explained this point more fully in a recent debate.

"What I then said was that if the abnormal happened, if we had, for example, a famine to face, it would be better to curtail capital expenditure by withdrawing this amount than by imposing fresh taxation. But apart from such a contingency the surplus is taken into account against our Budget capital programme.

"I am very glad that our borrowing proposals have been received with so much approval ; and I am quite with my friend Sir Fazulbhoy when he says that we should borrow in India as far as possible. But we must go steadily, and I hope that by his own large tender for the coming loan, my Hon'ble friend will show us how enthusiastically the Indian commercial community is going to take up our policy.

"As regards famine expenditure, which one Member mentioned, I should like to explain that we have not cut down any single proposal of any Local Government in regard to that matter. In regard to direct famine expenditure, as also in regard to such matters as takkavi loans, we have fully accepted all that the Local Governments thought necessary.

"Reference has been made to lapses. As I said in my speech introducing the Financial Statement, we have made arrangements which will materially diminish the chances of lapses in the net capital expenditure on Railways. Again, as regards the Public Works revenue expenditure, I may tell the Council that instructions are under issue which, I hope, will have a great effect in reducing the volume of lapses.

"As regards Irrigation and Railways, I may say that from the financial point of view, since Irrigation yields much the larger relative profit, I should certainly go for irrigation expenditure first; and in fact that is what I did, I first went to the Irrigation people and said 'How much do you anticipate that you can spend?' That amount made the first item in my ways and means programme, and thus it will always be. But of course the demand is limited by shortage of labour and various things that I need not go into. All I wish to impress on the Council is that we did not stint irrigation.

"My Hon'ble friend, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, referring to my remarks about the small relative percentage of net profit on railways—which I made not as depreciating railways, which give us a very large absolute amount of revenue, but merely by way of caution and as showing the difficulties with which we have to contend, seeing that a small alteration in the situation may mean a million pounds one way or the other in the budget—my Hon'ble friend says—'What is the use of borrowing at 3½ per cent. if you make only 1 per cent. profit out of it? That is very poor business.' I admit that that would be very poor business; I should be ashamed to get up in this Council and to say that I was associated with anything of that sort. But we are not doing this. What we make is 1 per cent. and more net profit after paying back the 3½ per cent. interest, or whatever the exact figure may be, on the sums we have borrowed, and we put that extra 1 per cent. or so into our pockets. I quite wish that the extra profit was larger, but it is substantial."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"How much do you put in every year for renewals?"

His Excellency the President:—"Order, order!"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"We provide for renewals under the Revenue head under working expenses. All we do is this, that when a locomotive is worn out for instance, and is replaced by a locomotive of superior power, we put the cost which would be incurred by providing a fresh locomotive of the old pattern down to revenue, and put the balance to capital because that is practically new plant. As regards 'renewals,' they occur regularly in our budget under the expenditure head, and the net profits, which are given in paragraph 67 of my previous speech are after deducting that expenditure. In fact a decrease of net profits in the revised estimate and in the coming year's budget is mainly due to my having, at the instance of my Hon'ble Colleague Mr. Clark, agreed to a larger outlay for these renewals.

"Then my friend, Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, quoted my predecessor's dictum against railways becoming a burden on the taxpayer. I quite agree with that in the sense in which my predecessor used it. He meant by railways being a burden on the taxpayer the contingency that instead of railways yielding this profit, they would produce a deficit as they used to in years gone by. That is a burden on the taxpayer; but when railways yield £3,921,000 and you pay £1,130,000 toward the capital account, the remaining £2,600,000 is an alleviation to the taxpayer; it corresponds to the profits of a shareholder in a prosperous company.

"My friend also made some reference to waterways in Bengal. That is a very important question, the gravity of which I quite appreciate. Eight lakhs have been already provided in the current year by the Bengal Government. As for large schemes, so far we have not yet had them before us. They have been under examination by a distinguished engineer, Mr. Lees; they will have to be very carefully examined here; and of course, as Hon'ble Members will appreciate, they will have to be considered with reference to their productive character; because if they are not productive, although circumstances might still call for expenditure on them, you could not rank them along with railways, as, has been suggested, in the productive account.

"Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola made a reference to opium. He says 'As you have stopped sending opium to China, why do you go on sending non-certificated opium to the Straits Settlements? The one is as wicked as the other'.

Well, I do not admit that sending opium to China was wicked; but at any rate the circumstances are materially different. When we sent opium to China, we sent it to the territories of an amorphous Government that cannot control its affairs very efficiently, and there was no guarantee against abuse of the opium. When we send it to the Straits Settlements, or to the Dutch Indies, or to other places to which we now send, we send to countries that have a system very much akin to our own, realising the maximum of revenue from the minimum of consumption: and I say that makes all the difference. If you send opium to a country like that, you are really helping the country to promote the cause of temperance, because you enable it to give the people an article under high taxation when otherwise it would be obtained probably by smuggling, and in greater quantities.

"I do not think, My Lord, that I have anything more to say, especially having regard to the short time at my disposal. I have estimated, as I have said before two or three times, for a normal year, and we can only hope that Providence will give us plentiful rains and prosperity, so that when I meet the Council next year, I shall not have to tell them that my calculations have been disturbed by agricultural distress or by any other calamity."

His Excellency the Viceroy:—"My first and very pleasant duty in addressing you to-day, at the close of a Session during the course of which questions of finance have been much under discussion, is to re-echo the views of my Council and to congratulate Sir William Meyer on the presentation of his first Budget to the Imperial Legislative Council. It was a great satisfaction to me last year, as Head of the Government, to welcome a colleague of Sir William Meyer's known ability and wide experience both in the special field of finance and in Indian administration generally.

"We are indebted to him for an unusually informing account of present financial policy. The line he has adopted, in thus taking both yourselves and the public generally into his confidence, is one which no doubt invites criticism, because it makes criticism easy, but that is a result which neither he nor my Government can deprecate. The more intelligently our policy is scrutinised, the more confident we are of general support.

"It is true that he has had to budget under conditions which are not entirely favourable. Unlike his predecessor, he has had but a small surplus to dispose of, and practically no doles to distribute. It is always pleasant to give doles to needy claimants, and perhaps it is even more pleasant to receive them, but large unanticipated surpluses are not an entirely healthy element in our finance, while the distribution of doles is apt to be demoralising and to provoke disappointment when in lean years further doles are not forthcoming.

"On the other hand, the sums available due to the natural growth of the Imperial share of the revenues are an entirely healthy development in our financial system, and I regard the needs of education and sanitation as amongst the first claims upon them "That is all that I intend to say on the subject of the Budget, but I am also glad to be able to announce that we have just secured a reduction in the telegraph rates between India and Europe of 4 annas a word on the ordinary rates and 2 annas a word on the deferred rates. I may say that it was not an altogether easy matter to obtain this concession, which has been the subject of negotiation for some time past. Its importance, I am sure, will be greatly appreciated by the commercial community, to whom the cheapening of telegraphic communication with Europe is a matter of ever-increasing moment. These reductions will probably take effect from the 1st May.

"It is a matter of deep concern to me that India should again be visited by famine. The scarcity which now prevails in parts of the United Provinces, Rajputana and Central India is, I am sorry to say, fairly widespread, and in places it is of a severe type. We had hoped and long continued to hope that the winter rains might come in time to ensure a fair spring crop in the affected areas, but we have been disappointed, and the scarcity has only been slightly mitigated by the little rain which has fallen. At the same time it is not on a scale commensurate with that of the serious visitation which afflicted the United Provinces in 1907-08, and there are certain features of the present distress which are significantly hopeful, both as regards our immediate troubles and in their bearing on the tendencies of future famines in India. The people started with a series of good seasons behind them, and not inconsiderable stocks. There is fortunately a promise of an excellent harvest in a great part of the Punjab; prices in the United Provinces have not risen so rapidly as might otherwise have been the case; and the whole situation has developed somewhat more slowly than was originally expected. Those who have followed the course of the recent scarcities in the Bombay Presidency will have been struck with the change which appears to be gradually coming over the character of our Indian famines, and which is reflected in the administrative measures now taken to meet them. A prescience born of previous experience works almost as a matter of routine to meet the gradual approach of scarcity. Revenue is suspended with a liberality unknown ten years ago. Agricultural advances are distributed on an enormous scale. Ordinary public works, instead of being closed for want of funds, are extended as far as possible. For the maintenance of working cattle, whose services are of such economic importance, every effort is made to provide fodder at cheap rates, the cost of transit being reduced at great expense to the State. Everything, in short, is done to stave off, as far as this can be safely done, the day on which relief works must be opened. Nothing is perhaps more striking than the almost secondary place into which the system of relief works, formerly a cardinal feature of our relief programme, has tended to fall in our recent famines. Whether this will be characteristic of future famines, it is yet impossible to say, but our recent experience has certainly emphasised this tendency. The progressive improvement in recent years in the means of communication in India, and a marked increase in the alertness and confidence of the labouring classes, have enabled a large proportion of the able-bodied poor to go further afield in search of work. The large works and the big industrial enterprises of modern days have provided a considerable degree of automatic relief, and while we have, as before, to provide gratuitous relief for a large number of persons who are precluded from the possibility of obtaining work, we are finding it less and less necessary to centre all our energies on the artificial provision of labour for the able-bodied. Indeed, at the present moment, we are assisting a larger number of persons in the famine areas in the United Provinces by gratuitous relief than by the system of relief works. It is impossible to foresee what the future may have in store for us, especially if we were to be unfortunately visited by a severe and extensive failure of the rains, but in the tendencies which I have described there are some who are able to see—and I think not without justification—the beginning of an economic movement which; if unimpeded by other influences, will bring about a momentous change in the scope and effects of monsoon failures in this country.

"It is my earnest hope that present expectations as to the limited scope and duration of the scarcity will be confirmed by a good autumn monsoon, and that the distressed areas will enjoy a speedy return to agricultural prosperity.

"Since I last addressed you on the subject of foreign affairs in Simla, on the 17th September last, it has been pleasant to know that affairs in Eastern Europe are gradually settling down, and that the shadow of war which has lately for so long enveloped, the Balkan Peninsula, is now gradually being dispelled by the sunlight of peace. We can only hope that time will heal the wounds that have been inflicted, and soften the animosities that have been created, and that the Empire of Turkey, our neighbour in the Red Sea and Persian Gulf, will emerge from her recent trials with renewed vitality and determination to consolidate her position by an enlightened policy of peaceful progress and material development. In the pursuit of such a policy we in India have everything to gain, and we can warmly wish her God-speed.

"I told you in September last of the disinterested attitude of His Majesty's Government towards Persia, and that we had recently lent the Persian Government a considerable sum of money for the creation of a force of gendarmerie under Swedish officers, with a view to the suppression of anarchy in Southern Persia and the restoration of order and security on the trade routes, where British and Indian trade had suffered serious loss during the past few years. I am glad to say that our hopes have so far not been disappointed. The regiment of gendarmerie, which was raised at Shiraz, has been employed during the winter in patrolling the roads and has dealt successfully with the robber bands who infested it. It is true that quite recently these gendarmerie have been confronted once more with a troublesome situation at Kazerun, but I am glad to learn that on the arrival of reinforcements the tribal rising dispersed, and that order has once more been restored. Evidence of the successful activity of the gendarmerie is shown in the improved returns of British and Indian trade in Southern Persia. Another force of gendarmerie has been dealing with the situation on the trade route between Bunder Abbas and Kerman, and, although they have had some serious engagements with the Perso-Baluchi tribes in that neighbourhood, there is every reason for confidence in their ability to restore order in the immediate future. The action in South Persia of the Swedish officers and the Persian gendarmerie appears to have been eminently successful, and to be worthy of unstinted praise. I may point out that the only alternative would have been the despatch of a British expedition to Southern Persia for the restoration of order in those provinces—a policy to which, with the entanglements and expenditure it would entail, the Government of India have always been firmly opposed; and I would only ask those, who have been somewhat lavish in their criticisms of the attitude of the British Government in Persia, now to recognise what we in India owe to Sir Edward Grey for his policy of disinterested support, and abstention from interference in the internal affairs of Persia.

"A further development that has taken place in connection with the affairs of the Persian Gulf is the conclusion of an agreement with the French Government, by which they now recognise the new Arms Traffic Regulations, drawn up by the late Sultan of Muscat at our instance, and by which they abandon the privileges and immunities secured to them by ancient treaties. We believe that gun-running from Muscat has now been stopped, and that our agreement with France will effectually prevent its revival. Should this prove to be the case, we may hope not only to avoid in future the necessity for those occasional small military expeditions, which for many years have been a drain on Indian revenues, but also in the very near future to be able to discontinue the expensive naval blockade operations on the Mekran coast.

"Turning to Afghanistan, the relations of the Government of India with His Majesty the Amir have continued to be most friendly and cordial. Indeed we have had only one complaint to present to the Afghan Government—and that of a serious order—viz., in regard to the depredations on British territory by gangs resident in Afghan limits. The recent outrages on the Jehangira and Khairabad Railway stations in the Peshawar District were, we have reason to believe, the work of a gang, whose base is in the Afghan Shinwari country. I have addressed His Majesty the Amir on the subject, demanding the punishment of the offenders, and I have every reason to hope that the Afghan Government can, and will, co-operate in this matter. An even more flagrant instance of the evil in question is to be found on the Kohat-Bannu border, which for some years past has been constantly harried by gangs from the neighbouring Afghan district of Khost. These gangs, consisting of outlaws from British territory, assisted by bad characters from Khost, have with impunity murdered and robbed in British territory, and carried off British subjects to their asylum in Afghanistan and there held them to ransom. The strongest representations have from time to time been made to the Amir on the subject, and he assured me last December that he had issued orders to his local officers to deal vigorously with the matter. In spite of this, however, since then two serious outrages have been committed by Khost gangs. In one of them a Hindu and his wife were carried off from the Tochi, and though the Afghan local officials could, so it is reported, have saved them—indeed had pledged themselves to do so—the unfortunate Hindu was brutally murdered and decapitated by the outlaws and his head sent to our post at Miranshah, with a demand for an enormous ransom for the woman. To deal with this intolerable situation, we decided that mere representations, unbacked by action, were valueless. I therefore authorised as a reprisal the arrest and detention of all Khostwals found in British territory, pending settlement of this matter, and I sent a letter to the Amir, informing him of our action, and calling upon him to depute an officer with the necessary force to deal promptly and effectively with the situation in co-operation, if need be, with a British officer supported by the necessary force.

"I am happy to be able to announce that I received news yesterday that this action has already borne fruit, and that His Majesty the Amir immediately on the receipt of my letter issued stringent orders for the surrender of the captive Hindus in Khost and the arrest of the perpetrators of the outrages in question. Already three captive Hindus have been brought in to the Political Agent in the Tochi under escort, and it is reported that the greater number of the outlaws have been arrested and despatched to Kabul for trial.

"The North-West Frontier has otherwise been quiet, with the exception of an outrage by the Utman Khel in the north of Peshawar District; and two serious raids by the Bunerwals into British territory, in which eight British subjects were killed and considerable property taken. As regards the Utman Khel, a blockade against them has been established, which it is hoped will lead to a speedy settlement of this case. As regards the Bunerwals, I ordered the movement of a column into their country on the 23rd February last to punish some of the villages mainly at fault. This operation, in spite of the most trying conditions of weather and roads, was carried out most successfully. The troops met with half-hearted opposition, and returned without loss, after inflicting exemplary punishment on the offending villages. There are reasons to believe that the effect of this action has been most salutary on the frontier, and I trust it will be clear from what I have said that the Government of India are dealing vigorously with the question of insecurity on the North-West Frontier, and intend, whatever it may cost, to restore reasonable peace and order on that border.

"The future status of Tibet is still the subject of negotiations between accredited representatives of Great Britain and accredited representatives of China and Tibet.

"During the past year we have added greatly to our knowledge of the little known countries lying on the North-East Frontier along the Assam border. Surveys have been carried out; some roads have been made; and a large portion of the unexplored highlands in that direction have been visited, so that we are now in a position to determine our natural boundaries on this side.

"On the north-east border of Burma it has been decided to extend our administrative control over a part of our tribal area, and the new district of Putao has been peacefully established. On this side, too, the outlying portions of the Indian Empire have been explored, and the knowledge so gained will enable us, when the time comes, to settle a satisfactory international frontier.

"I am grateful for the flattering words that have been used by a great many Members to-day relating to the action of myself and my Government in connection with the position of Indians in South Africa, and I think it will be a source of satisfaction to us all if I mention the fact that a Reuter's telegram from Cape Town has come in to-day stating that General Smutts has announced in the Union House of Assembly that Government would introduce legislation next Session based on the report of the recent Commission.

"I would now like to turn to a subject nearer home and to give you all the information in my power respecting the project estimate for the construction of the Imperial City of Delhi. This project estimate, which is really a monumental work, reflecting the greatest credit upon the Delhi Committee, of which Mr. Hailey is the Chairman, and upon the Chief Engineer, Mr. Keeling, and the staff of Engineers and others working under him, was received by the Government of India about the New Year. I should like to take this opportunity of expressing my warm appreciation of the untiring industry and devotion to duty of the officers on the staff of the Committee, who for weeks together during last hot weather worked, as I know, every day till 11 o'clock at night in order to press forward the completion of this heavy task. This estimate has been most carefully and thoroughly scrutinised by Mr. Russell and the staff of the Public Works Department, and they have brought to bear on it their vast and expert knowledge and have made some very useful and practical modifications. Their report reached me on the 4th March and has now undergone a close examination before acceptance by the Government of India and transmission to the Secretary of State. The above facts will explain to you why Sir Robert Carlyle in reply to a question put to him in February was unable to give any figures of the estimate. It is even irregular that I should do so now before the estimate reaches the Secretary of State, but as I am anxious to take the Members of my Council as much as possible into my confidence, I have obtained special permission from Lord Crewe to do so on this occasion. I wish, however, to make quite clear that the publication of the figures of the estimate does not in any way commit the Secretary of State to their acceptance.

"Hon'ble Members may possibly remember the tenour of the despatch addressed by the Government of India to the Secretary of State on the 25th August, 1911, in which the administrative changes announced by the King-Emperor at the Durbar were proposed. This despatch may truly be said to have achieved a certain measure of notoriety, if that can be gauged by the lively discussions that have taken place over its contents. In the 22nd paragraph, in which the cost of the proposed new Capital is discussed, the following words are used:—

'We will now give a rough indication of the cost of the scheme. No attempt at accuracy is possible, because we have purposely avoided making inquiries as they would be likely to result in the premature disclosure of our proposals. The cost of the transfer to Delhi would be considerable. We cannot conceive, however, that a larger sum than four million sterling would be necessary, and within that figure probably could be found the three years' interest on capital, which would have to be paid till the necessary works and buildings were completed.

"The rest of the paragraph deals with various assets which could be utilised to counterbalance this expenditure.

"Whether the Government of India were wise in mentioning a figure in however guarded a manner is, I frankly admit, open to serious doubt, and it was only after consultation amongst ourselves and with the concurrence of our former Colleague of the Finance Department, whose caution is well known to you all, that the figure of four million sterling was inserted in the despatch. In any case the figure has since been the subject of much controversy in the Press and elsewhere, and various predictions of the cost of the new city have been made.

"Now that the Government of India have been in a position to obtain expert information and to prepare thorough and comprehensive estimates for the creation of a capital which shall be built without extravagance and which shall yet be worthy of this great Empire, it is clear to us that the original estimate of four million sterling must be exceeded, but not to the extent of many of those forecasts which have been made by our critics, as Hon'ble Members will see when I give them presently the figures of the project estimate in its latest form. I might argue that this excess is due to the abandonment, owing to sanitary reasons, of the Durbar site and the cost of the consequent, preparation of the new site, and I might put forward other reasons, but I have no desire to do anything of the kind, but simply to say frankly on behalf of myself and those who are still Members of my Council that, owing to the special circumstances in which we were placed, we made an under-estimate in mentioning the figure of four million sterling, and how great or small a mistake we made, you, Hon'ble Members of Council, will shortly be able to judge.

"I will now endeavour to give as succinctly as possible the figures of the estimate as amended by the Public Works Department. I may mention that as a result of their careful scrutiny the charges under certain headings have been reduced, while others have been increased, but the net result has been a material reduction of the total estimate as sent up by the Delhi Committee.

"The figures are as follows under their various headings :—

	Rs.
A.—Salaries and allowances	70,18,700
B.—Travelling allowances of officers and establishment	6,30,000
C.—Supplies, services and contingencies	3,78,600
D.—Works expenditure—
(1) Buildings	3,59,87,200
(2) Communications	29,91,800
(3) Parks and Public improvements	27,34,500
(4) Electric light and power	43,40,700
(5) Irrigation	27,49,000
(6) Water-supply, sewerage, drainage, etc.	73,77,900
(7) Purchase of tools and plant	35,50,600
(8) Survey camps and general preliminary expenditure	42,82,100
(9) Maintenance during construction	20,09,000
E.—Acquisition of land taken up	36,48,200
F.—Other miscellaneous expenditure	6,000
Deduct—Anticipated recovery from tools and plant	10,00,000

"These figures, when added up, make an aggregate total of Rs. 7,67,04,300 or £5 113,620. But as we are anxious to face our liabilities for starting the new city to the fullest extent possible, we consider it necessary to make a special provision for contingencies and unforeseen expenditure in excess of the usual provision that has been made of 5 per cent. on the works outlay by adding a sum of one and a half crores or £1,000,000. We have accordingly a very large reserve to meet future possibilities which we are not able to foresee at present. I should add that the expenditure of this additional crore and a half on unforeseen contingencies will be strictly controlled by the Government of India, and no part of it spent unless absolutely necessary.

"Hon'ble Members may remember that recently a statement was made in Parliament by the Under Secretary of State for India that the estimated cost of new buildings in Delhi, then under the consideration of the Government of India, amounted to £2,800,000, or 420 lakhs, while the figure for buildings that I have just given you is 360 lakhs. The discrepancy that arises between these two figures is due chiefly to the excision of the cost of the Survey of India Office, and the residential accommodation for the staff, reduction in the provision for offices for the local administration, etc. It has been decided by the Government of India that the presence in the Capital of the Surveyor-General's Office is not administratively expedient.

"It may be of interest to Hon'ble Members to know that under the heading of buildings, of which the total is Rs 3,59,87,200, a sum of half a million sterling, or 75 lakhs, has been allotted for the construction of Government House and the Council Chamber and necessary appurtenances with gardens, stables, offices of the Private and Military Secretaries to the Viceroy, bungalows for the staff and accommodation for military guards, while a further sum of three quarters of a million sterling, or Rs 1,12,50,000, has been set aside for the Secretariat buildings of the Government of India. The remaining Rs. 1,72,37,200 is the estimated cost of Local Administration Offices, Chief Commissioner's Office, Imperial Record Office, residences for officers of Government and for clerks, menials' quarters, electric installation in officers' and clerks' quarters, medical buildings, police accommodation, fire-brigade station, markets, and slaughter-house, and accommodation for the Viceroy's Bodyguard and for troops in the Capital.

"There are other headings of expenditure such as irrigation which require more detailed elaboration, and on which it is possible that certain savings may be effected, but in all such cases an outside figure has been taken which we may reasonably hope will not be exceeded.

"On the other hand, the project estimate contains certain items such as land, residences, water-supply, electric power, irrigation on which recoveries in the form of rent or taxes will, in addition to meeting current expenditure, partially at any rate, cover the interest on capital outlay, while there are other items on which some return on account of the sale of leases, general taxes, and indirect receipts may be expected, for I need not explain that Government officials, for whom accommodation is provided, will pay rent, and that all residents in the new city will have to pay charges for water-supply and other amenities. The project estimate of the Delhi Committee reckoned expenditure of this character at two crores or one and a third million pounds, but we are of opinion that a forecast put forward at this stage might merely prove misleading and furnish materials for criticism. Therefore, although a certain portion of the expenditure will undoubtedly be recouped, we prefer not to specify the items at this stage.

"I have now put before you as briefly as it has been possible on an occasion like the present, the principal details of the project estimate for the construction of the capital city of Delhi, and I think that you may safely rely on my vigilance and on that of the Hon'ble Finance Member and of the Chief Commissioner of Delhi, whose experience in the Finance Department stands him in such good stead, to see that no extravagance or waste of public funds is permitted. I may add that for a long time past I have received a monthly account of expenditure upon the works now in progress in order to secure the fullest financial supervision and control.

"There is just one other point that I would wish to explain so as to avoid all misunderstanding, viz., the absence of any estimate for cantonment or railway expenditure in the project estimate. Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson in his financial statement last year stated that the cost of cantonments could only be shown in the military estimates, and any diversion of a railway line that might be found nécessary must be charged to railways. As a matter of fact, it had been already decided by the Government before the question of making Delhi the capital had arisen to materially increase the garrison of Delhi owing to its strategical importance as the greatest railway centre of India, and to move the Indian infantry regiment from its insanitary lines at Daryaganj, while the long condemned lines of the Indian cavalry regiment should have been rebuilt at least three years ago. Very considerable expenditure would, therefore, in any case have been incurred on increasing and bringing up to date the military accommodation at Delhi. Consequently, a new cantonment would have had to be built in any case. As regards railway expenditure, there is little doubt that if the city of Delhi expands in a southerly direction, as seems probable from the demands made for land in that direction, a diversion of the Agra Chord may become inevitable, and improved railway facilities for the inhabitants of the new city will become increasingly necessary. All that is being done at present is to acquire the necessary land so as to meet the requirements of the future when they arise, and the only recommendation that has been made to the Secretary of State for railway facilities for the new city is the construction of a railway station with sidings on the Agra Chord at the estimated cost of 2½ lakhs.

"From the statement that I have made, which, I may point out, could not possibly have been made at an earlier date, you will recognise that we are anxious to give the Members of my Council the very fullest information.

"In giving you these figures it should be clearly understood that the scheme put forward is for the adequate establishment of the Government of India at Delhi. The estimate has been framed to provide for all that can be foreseen as likely to be required to enable the Government of India to effectively occupy their new Headquarters. In regard to such public services as water-supply, sanitation, and the general laying out and equipment of the new city with roads, public parks, etc., we have based our requirements upon a careful forecast of probable population and made all reasonable provision for future expansion. Although we have considered it desirable to make provision in the estimate for all the residential accommodation that we consider necessary, it is anticipated that private capital will do its share in the development of the new city and erect a proportion of the residences which will be required for the accommodation of officers and clerks in some form or other, in which case we may expect to effect some reduction of expenditure under this head. It does not include public buildings such as museums, institutes, hospitals, other than the civil hospital, etc., which will undoubtedly spring up in the future, and cluster round the seat of Government. All growing cities, even the oldest, develop every year with new buildings and new institutions and the task of the Government of India is, and has been, to see that there is no waste, and, while not expending more than we can spare, to be careful that we do not unduly restrict our plans or schemes merely in order to balance current expenditure in a manner to compromise their future or to prevent our successors from enlarging or beautifying them in the future if they possess the means or the taste to do so. Much no doubt will be done by private initiative and it is very encouraging to find new educational establishments ready to spring up in the Capital of India, amongst them being a new St. Stephen's College, a medical college for women, the Begum of Bhopal's girl school, a post-gradute college for the sons and families of Ruling Chiefs and a college for Indian medicine. Sites for all of these have been requested and assigned and it is not too much to hope that Delhi may, in addition to its other features, become an important educational centre. The Educational Conference held in Delhi last year and repeated only three weeks ago when no less than 24 Ruling Chiefs were present as well as representatives of other Native States is of happy augury and an indication of the great advantage of the accessibility of the new Capital.

"Although the guarded estimate of four million sterling mentioned in the Government of India, despatch of August 25th, 1911, will be exceeded, I am confident that my Council and India as a whole will not regard the total figure now estimated as excessive, and the speeches that I have heard in Council to-day add further confirmation to that confidence. India is worthy of a capital, and the capital must be worthy of her. The provision of funds will be very carefully considered so as to cause no embarrassment to the development of the country and will be spread over at least eight years from its inception in 1912.

"You will also understand that the estimate now communicated to you does not purport to provide for the present and future needs of old Delhi in respect of sanitary reform and urban improvement generally. The Government of India have settled at Delhi and made themselves responsible for its administration by taking over the area in which it lies, an area which would otherwise have received special attention from the Punjab Government in connection with our general grants for education and sanitation, as also in respect of urgent Public Works. Sanitary advance is one of the main features of our general policy, and we cannot allow the requirements of the old city to be prejudiced by the special demands for the new; on the contrary, we shall expect a considerable advance to be made in the near future, partly from local resources, and largely, it may be, from special Government grants, if funds for this purpose are available. This question arises at once in framing our schemes for the water-supply and sanitary equipment of the new Capital, and it is one which we cannot rightly set aside. Such outlay, however, is distinguishable, and must be considered apart, from the cost of building and equipping the new city, and was so excluded in the original rough estimate of the latter made by the Government of India in 1911.

"I may remind Hon'ble Members that in a speech delivered by the King-Emperor in Delhi on the 15th December, 1911, on which occasion all the

Members of my Council as then constituted were present, His Majesty used the following words :—

'I trust that the planning and designing of the public buildings to be erected will be considered with the greatest deliberation and care, so that the new creation may prove in every way worthy of this ancient and beautiful city.

'May God's blessing rest upon the work which is so happily inaugurated to-day.'

"The commands of the King-Emperor have been faithfully obeyed by the Government of India, who will continue to do all in their power to carry out fully the wishes of His Majesty, a task in which we know that we have the support and confidence of the King-Emperor's loyal subjects in India. It will not, I think, be regarded as an indiscretion if I say that I know from the highest source the immense interest that the King-Emperor takes in the progress of the creation of the new Capital, and His Majesty's earnest desire that it shall be a worthy monument with which his name will always be identified.

"I will now say a few words about ourselves. During the past year and a half since the present Members have entered upon their office, the Legislative Council has dealt with a number of important measures, 20 of which have become law. The most noteworthy perhaps of these is the Indian Companies Act, which has replaced the previous Act of 1882. In this lengthy measure, which is based to a large extent on modern English Law, we have a Code which, as recently amended in this Council, will place this important branch of commercial law upon a satisfactory footing in this country. We have also passed two Acts, one relating to the office of the Administrator-General, and one to that of the Official Trustee, which, though of less general interest, are likely to be of considerable practical utility. During the current Session we have passed an Act making the necessary modifications in the English Copyright Act in its application to India, and in the Decentralization Act, recently under the consideration of this Council, a law has been enacted which will be of great benefit in expediting and facilitating the work of Government.

"We have also still under consideration an important Bill for the protection of minor girls living in undesirable surroundings. Although we are all actuated by one desire in respect of these minors, I observe that there have been divergent views as to the best method of securing protection for them. I hope and believe, however, that in the result we shall obtain a law which will be the means of rescuing numbers of children from lives of shame; and if, for various reasons, we are not at first as successful as the Government of the United Kingdom has been in dealing with this difficult question, we should not be discouraged but should continue our efforts, moving firmly but cautiously, to achieve the desired object. If indeed we are able by any legislation to save from contamination but a fraction of the number of children who have been rescued in England under the provisions of the Children's Act of 1908, we shall not have laboured in vain.

"The activities of this Council have not, however, been confined to legislation. A number of resolutions on matters of public interest have been discussed and carefully considered, and the Government of India have received much assistance from the temperate and thorough manner in which the subjects under discussion have been debated, and even in those cases in which Government have not been able to accept the resolutions proposed, the debates have often been of great use in that they have placed Government in possession of the views of non-official Members, and have promoted a careful consideration and examination of the questions under discussion from new points of view. I may refer to Mr. Gokhale's resolution on primary education, and that of Sir G. M. Chitnavis on the merits of a system of preferential tariffs, as particularly interesting and instructive. This year the discussion on jail administration, arising out of a resolution proposed by Mr. Rayaningar in which the whole question had been most carefully prepared by the Hon'ble Member, has resulted in a decision to appoint a Committee to inquire into the whole system of our prisons. It is my belief that an inquiry of this nature cannot fail to have beneficial results of a far-reaching character.

"I have now finished, and I must thank Hon'ble Members for their patience and forbearance during a somewhat lengthy statement on my part. I wish you all a happy return to your homes, and I now declare this Session closed."

The Council adjourned sine die.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911 (price 10 annas), and in the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912 (price 2 annas). These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs nor their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. Applications for patents in countries other than India should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

Assam.—Slight to moderate rain fell in almost all districts. More rain is still wanted in places for ploughing. Pruning of tea is in progress and plucking has commenced in places. Prospects are fair. Pressing of sugarcane is nearly finished and the outturn is fair. Ploughing of land for, and sowing of, rice and jute are in progress. The average price of common rice has risen slightly. Cattle disease is reported from seven districts. Fodder is insufficient in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills.

Bengal.—During the week light showers fell nearly all over the Province, facilitating ploughing for autumn crops and doing good to some of the standing crops. Sowings of autumn paddy and jute are in progress. Harvesting of spring paddy has commenced and that of other spring crops is nearing completion. Cattle disease is reported from twelve districts. The price of common rice as compared with that of the previous week remains almost stationary with a tendency to fall.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light rain was fairly general in Orissa and Chota Nagpur; it was scattered in Bihar. Harvesting of spring crops is nearing completion. Pressing of sugarcane and preparation of lands for autumn crops are going on. Next year's sugarcane crop is being planted. Standing crops are doing well. The average price of common rice has remained almost stationary as compared with that of the previous week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Stray cases of cattle disease are reported from 12 districts. Agricultural prospects in the Feudatory States of Orissa are on the whole good.

United Provinces.—With the exception of showers in parts of Allahabad and Ghazipur the week was rainless. Harvesting of spring crops and of poppy has been completed. Extraction of opium and preparation of land for autumn crops have commenced. Sowing of sugarcane is almost complete. Cattle disease is still reported from some districts. Scarcity of fodder continues but Government hay is being taken freely for agricultural cattle which are in fairly good condition. Prices show a slight downward tendency.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows:—The week was rainless. Relief works are in progress in Jalaun, Hamirpur and Banda, civil works in Etawah and in the Haburah settlement in Moradabad, test works in Moradabad, Budaun, Shahjahanpur and Jhansi, aided works in Moradabad, Budaun, Shahjahanpur, Fatehpur, Allahabad, Jalaun, Jhansi, Hamirpur and Banda and unaided private works in Agra, Budaun, Fatehpur, Jalaun, Jhansi, Hamirpur and Banda. Bombay.—Slight rain fell during the week in Sind, Surat and Khandesh. Standing spring crops are good but have been damaged by frost, insects, unfavourable winds and rain in the Upper Sind Frontier, by hailstorms in one-fourth of Nawabshah and by rats in one-third of Kaira and three States of Rewa Kantha. Harvesting of spring crops continues. Cotton picking is progressing in Gujarat, the Karnatak, Baroda, Cutch, Rewa Kantha and Kolhapur. Preparations for autumn crops continue generally. The fodder supply is inadequate in Sholapur and in one-third of Poona, Satara and Bijapur. Grass and kadbi are being imported. Agricultural stock is sufficient except in Ahmednagar, Poona and Sholapur and is in good condition except in Sholapur. Drinking water is deficient in Sholapur, Satara, Bijapur and Dharwar. Irrigation water is deficient in the Deccan and the Karnatak. Prices are generally steady. Grain stocks are sufficient. The numbers on gratuitous relief for the week ending 11th April were :—Sholapur, Satara and Bijapur 3,569.

Hyderabad.—Good and widespread rain fell in the Warangal district. No rain was received in the Aurangabad, B[illegible], Parbhani, Usmanabad and Bidar districts and very slight rain elsewhere. The average rainfall for the Dominions was 14 cents. Crops are being harvested and were injured by rain. The late rice crop is generally fair and is being irrigated. It is also being harvested in parts. Fodder scarcity prevails in fourteen, water scarcity in thirty-five and cattle disease in six talukas. Prices of grains are stationary. The highest price in districts is nine seers in Mahbubnagar and the lowest eighteen seers per rupee in Bir, Nander, Usmanabad and Bidar.

Mysore.—Slight rain fell in all districts except Shimoga and Chitaldrug. Prices of food grains are generally steady and markets are well supplied. Ploughing and sowing operations are in progress. Prospects of the season are fair to good. Cattle are healthy in the greater part of the State. Water and fodder are generally available.

Coorg.—No rain fell during the week. Prices of food grains are high. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was fair to good in the Carnatic, the Circars (except Godavari), the Central districts (except Chittor and Coimbatore) and the south (except Tanjore) and light or nil elsewhere. Standing crops are generally fair to good but require rain in parts of Madura. Harvesting of paddy, dry crops and sugarcane is proceeding in parts with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy have been completed in many districts. Sowing of dry crops and planting of sugarcane are proceeding normally in parts. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water supply is insufficient for irrigation in parts of most districts Pasture is scanty in many districts but fodder is generally sufficient. Prices are stationary.

1. In these rules, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "the Act" means the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act, 1886, as amended by the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration (Amendment) Act, 1911:

2. Notices of births and deaths shall be in the forms set forth in Schedule A and Schedule B, respectively.

3. Every such notice shall be signed by the person giving it, shall specify the capacity in which the person claims to be authorized to give it, and if such person does not attend personally before the Registrar, shall be attested by one of the following persons:—

(1) A Magistrate of any class under the British Government or under the Travancore, Cochin, Pudukkōttai, Banganapalle or Sandūr Darbar.

4. Every such notice shall ordinarily be presented to the Registrar for the local area in which the birth or death occurred within three months of the date of the birth or death to which it refers, as the case may be:

Provided that the Registrar may, of his own authority, for any reason which he considers sufficient, accept notice of a birth or death at any time within six months from the date of its occurrence, and with the special sanction in writing of the Registrar-General after that time.

5. Registers of births and deaths shall be kept in the forms set forth in Schedule C and Schedule D, respectively.

6. When a Registrar refuses to register a birth or death he shall record the reasons for his decision in a register maintained in the form given in Schedule E. An appeal against an order of a Registrar refusing to register a birth or death on any other ground than that referred to in proviso (a) to section 19 of the Act shall lie to the Registrar-General, who may, in his discretion, either confirm the order of the Registrar, or direct him to register the birth or death.

7. If, at the time of registration of a birth, the child has not been named, the informant or the parents of the child may forward subsequently to the Registrar in duplicate a statement giving the name, signed by the minister or other person responsible for the naming of the child. The Registrar shall attach one copy of the statement to the entry of the birth in the register maintained by him and forward the second copy to the Registrar-General to be filed with the copy of the entry maintained in his office.

8. When a birth or death has occurred during a journey, or when the person giving notice of a birth or death was compelled by duty, or urgent necessity, or unavoidable accident, to leave the local area in which such birth or death occurred so soon after its occurrence that he was unable to give the prescribed notice to the Registrar for that local area, any Registrar may receive notice of such birth or death, and register the same as if it were a birth or death which had occurred within the local area for which he has been appointed.

9. The provisions of rule 4, as to the time within which notice of a birth or death must be given, shall apply to every notice of a birth or death given under the circumstances described in the last foregoing rule.

10. In every case of a birth or death admitted to registration under rule 8, the Registrar to whom the notice of the birth or death is given shall record in his register the reason why the notice was not given to the Registrar of the local area within which the birth or death occurred, and shall within one week from the date of the registration of the birth or death forward to the Registrar-General, and to the Registrar of the local area within which the birth or death occurred, a copy of the entry in the register relating to the birth or death.

Every Registrar shall paste into a book kept by him for the purpose all copies of entries received by him under this rule, and the book containing the copies shall be, at all reasonable times, open to inspection by any person desiring to inspect it.

11. The Registrar for any local area including a port may register any birth or death which has occurred on the high seas on board any ship arriving at such port:

Provided that notice of the birth or death is given to such Registrar within sixty days after the arrival of the ship.

In the notice of such birth or death, and in the entry thereof in the register, there shall be specified, in lieu of the name of the place at which, the name of the ship on which the event occurred, and the name of the commander of the ship, and the approximate latitude and longitude of the ship's position at the time of the birth or death.

12. Every certificate of registration of a birth or death given by a Registrar under section 23 of the Act shall be in the form set forth in Schedule F.

13. At the foot of every copy of an entry given under section 9 or section 25 of the Act there shall be written a certificate, dated and subscribed by the Registrar-General or officer authorized under section 9 or by the Registrar, as the case may be, that the copy is a true copy of the entry.

14. Every Registrar shall keep, in the form set forth in Schedule G, a register of all certificates of registration and copies of entries given by him.

The Registrar-General shall keep a register in a similar form of all copies given by him of entries in the certified copies of the registers sent to his office.

15. The copies of entries of births and deaths which Registrars are required by section 24 of the Act to send to the Registrar-General shall be certified in the form set forth in Schedule H, and shall be sent at intervals of three months, on or as nearly as possible after the 1st January, April, July and October in each year.

Should no entries be made in a register during the preceding three months, a certificate to this effect shall be sent to the Registrar-General.

16. The indexes which are required by section 7 of the Act to be made of the certified copies of registers of births, deaths and marriages sent to the office of the Registrar-General shall be in the forms set forth in Schedule I, Schedule J and Schedule K, respectively.

Every entry in an index shall be made alphabetically with reference to the initial letter of the name of the person indicated by the entry.

In the index of certified copies of entries of marriages, the names of both the husband and the wife must be indexed.

In the case of a person of European descent, the initial letter will be the first letter of the surname; and in the case of any other person, the first letter of his name, and not that of his rank, title or class.

17. A Registrar may, of his own motion, correct, in manner prescribed in section 28 of the Act, any error in form made in an entry of a birth or death in a register of births or register of deaths kept by him under the Act.

In every case in which an entry is corrected under this rule, intimation thereof shall (if practicable) be communicated, within one week from the date of the correction being made, to the person who gave the notice of the birth or death.

18. When an error in substance in any entry of a birth or death in a register of births or register of deaths is asserted to have been made, the Registrar may correct the error, in manner prescribed in section 28 of the Act, on application made in writing, and signed in the presence of two witnesses attesting the signature, by any person authorized under section 20 or 21, as the case may be, to give notice of the birth or death to which the entry relates:

Provided that the Registrar is satisfied that the application is well founded and that he places on record a memorandum of the evidence on which his opinion is based.

An appeal against an order of a Registrar under this rule refusing to correct an asserted error in an entry in a register shall lie to the Registrar-General, who may, in his discretion, either confirm the order of the Registrar, or direct him to correct the error.

19. Without the special sanction in writing of the Registrar-General, an application for the correction of an entry in a Register of births or register of deaths shall not be entertained after the expiration of one year from the date on which the notice of the birth or death was given.

20 The sums specified in Schedule L shall be the fees payable under the sections of the Act there referred to:

Provided that soldiers and non-commissioned officers of His Majesty's regular forces, all seamen and such persons in indigent circumstances as satisfy the Registrar-General of their inability to meet the fees, shall be exempted from the payment of any fees, when the same are payable to a Registrar-General or a Government servant who is not a Minister of Religion.

21. The Registrar-General and every Registrar who is a Government servant and not a Minister of Religion shall keep a register in the form set forth in Schedule M of all fees realized under these rules, and shall forward such fees at the end of each month to the nearest treasury to be credited to Government. The Treasury Officer shall give each Registrar a certificate of the amount so credited and the Registrar shall send a copy of the certificate to the Registrar-General. RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Department of Commerce and Industry.

In the Resolution of the Government of India in the Department of Commerce and Industry, No. 830-833, dated the 24th January 1912, it was announced that, as a preliminary step in the direction of the ultimate amalgamation of the postal and telegraph services in India, the administration of the two existing Departments of Posts and Telegraphs, would, as an experimental measure, be brought together under one head. It was further decided that a single officer of tried administrative capacity should be entrusted with the duty of formulating and carrying out an experimental scheme for the fusion of the two services. Sir Charles Stewart-Wilson, who was then Director-General of the Post Office of India, was selected to hold charge of the combined office of Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs with effect from the 1st April 1912.

2. The scope of the experimental scheme devised, with the assistance of the Honourable Mr. Maxwell, C.I E,, M.V.O., by Sir Charles Stewart-Wilson, and sanctioned by the Government of India, was restricted to the Bombay and Central Postal and Telegraph Circles. It was introduced with effect from the 1st July 1912, and has continued in force since that date.

3. The main principles of the scheme referred to above, and the question of its extension to the whole of India as a permanent measure, were fully discussed with numerous officers of all ranks of the two departments and with members of the commercial community. Expressions of opinion on the experiment were also invited from the general public. Opinion, both official and non-official, has been uniformly and thoroughly favourable. The Government of India have therefore had no hesitation in concluding that the experiment has yielded a full measure of success. Accordingly, with the assent of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India, they have decided that the system which has been in force in the Bombay and Central Postal and Telegraph Circles since the 1st July 1912, shall, subject, particularly in Burma, to certain modifications in minor matters of detail, be finally adopted throughout British India with effect from the 1st April 1914.

4. It was explained in the Resolution of January 1912, referred to above, that the amalgamation of the two services in question involved a complete separation of the Engineering from the Traffic work of the Telegraph Department. The following details indicate the manner in which this is to be effected.

I. The appointment of Director-General of Telegraphs will be finally abolished, and that of Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs, which was tentatively created with effect from the 1st April 1912, will become a permanency. The pay of the Director-General will be Rs. 3,500 rising by annual increments of Rs. 100 to Rs. 4,000 a month, and he will not be entitled to exchange compensation allowance.

II. At Headquarters the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs will be assisted in the administration of the telegraph service by the following staff of officers :—

1 Chief Engineer of Telegraphs.

1 Superintendent of Telegraph Engineering as Personal Assistant to the Director-General.

1 Superintendent of Telegraph Engineering as Assistant to the Chief Engineer.

1 Deputy Director-General of Telegraph Traffic.

1 Officer of the first division of the superior Traffic branch which will now be formed, as Assistant Director General of Telegraph Traffic.

1 Officer of the second division of the superior Traffic branch as Assistant to the Deputy Director-General of Telegraph Traffic.

The tenure of the appointments of Personal Assistant to the Director-General and Assistant to the Chief Engineer will ordinarily be limited to 3 years.

III. The appointment of Electrical Engineer-in-Chief will be abolished, but three engineering officers will be provided to assist and advise the Director-General and the Chief Engineer in special technical matters, to carry on research work and test instruments in the Store Yards at Alipur, to conduct classes for instructions in technical matters, and to hold technical examinations. Two of these officers will be of the same rank as Superintendents of Telegraph Engineering, and will be designated "Chief Electrician" and "Assistant Electrician" respectively, while the third officer will be of the rank of Assistant Superintendent of Telegraph Engineering, and will be designated "Assistant Electrician". The services of an officer of the Royal Engineers will continue to be placed at the disposal of the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs so long as required.

IV. The administrative control of the telegraph engineering work will comprise four charges namely :—

(a) the Bombay Postal Circle (less the late Karachi Telegraph Division), and the Central and Madras Postal Circles;

(b) the Punjab Postal Circle (with the addition of the late Karachi Telegraph Division), and the United Provinces Postal Circle;

(c) the Bengal and Assam and the Bihar and Orissa Postal Circles (which take the place of the Bengal and the Eastern Bengal and Assam Postal Circles);

(d) the Burma Postal Circle.

The three first named charges will be placed under officers of the standing of the present Directors of Telegraph Circles. These three officers will be styled "Directors, Telegraph Engineering". They will control the entire engineering staff within the limits of their charges, and will be responsible not only for the design, construction and maintenance of telegraph and telephone lines, but also for the first fitting of telegraph offices, the fitting up and working of telephone exchanges, the erection and maintenance of power plant, and all other circle work which at present devolves on the Electrical Engineer-in-Chief. The administrative control of telegraph engineering in the Burma postal circle will be placed in the hands of the Postmaster-General who will, for the present, be one of the surplus telegraph officers referred to in paragraph 8 of this Resolution. This circle cannot conveniently be linked for engineering purposes with any of the other provinces; its postal and telegraph work is at present comparatively light, and can all be undertaken by one officer with engineering knowledge, while the engineering duties alone would not justify the employment of an administrative engineering officer.

V. Directly subordinate to the Engineering administrative officers, there will be twenty charges, in each of which the Engineering work will be under the control of an officer of the same standing as a Divisional Superintendent of Telegraphs under the present system of administration, assisted by a sufficient staff of junior officers (Assistant and Deputy Superintendents). The officers holding these charges will be designated Superintendent, Telegraph Engineering. They will occupy, in regard to Engineering and Technical work, exactly the same position as that now held by Divisional Superintendents of Telegraphs in respect of Engineering and Traffic work. In Burma, they will, in addition to their Engineering duties, continue to be responsible, as explained in VII below, for some of the Traffic work which in other Circles is to be separated entirely from Engineering duties. The designations of officers appointed to assist the Superintendents, Telegraph Engineering, will be, for officers of the superior service, Assistant Superintendent, Telegraph Engineering, and for upper subordinates, Deputy Superintendent, Telegraph Engineering. The sanctioned staff of such officers will consist of seventeen Assistant Superintendents and thirty-seven Deputy Superintendents. Four more Deputy Superintendents, Telegraph Engineering, will be employed as Personal Assistants to Directors of Telegraph Engineering and the Postmaster-General, Burma, six in the Store Depôts at Alipore, Rangoon, Bombay and Madras, and eleven as a special staff, from which three will be alloted to each of the Directors of Telegraph Engineering and two to the Postmaster-General, Burma, for employment on special works. The time scales of pay now in force for the superior establishment of the Telegraph Department will be retained for Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Telegraph Engineering; but in the case of efficient officers already in the service, the condition will be waived that no officer shall draw more than the pay of the eleventh year of service unless he holds a divisional charge, or a charge which is recognised as of equal importance.

VI. The greater part of the duties hitherto assigned to the superior staff of the Technical branch will be transferred to the Engineering branch, and the Technical branch will in future consist only of the Deputy Superintendents and subordinates employed in the branch. The number of Deputy Superintendents will be increased from 6 to 7. Their designation will be changed to Deputy Superintendents—Telegraphs (Technical), and they will be employed, 2 at Headquarters under the orders of the Chief Electrician, and 1 each in the Bombay, Madras, Calcutta, Lahore and Rangoon Telegraph offices under the orders of the Directors—Telegraph Engineering (in Burma, the Postmaster-General). The present sanctioned staff of 24 subordinates, styled Technical Telegraph Master or Telegraphist, will remain unaltered.

VII. Traffic work will be controlled at Headquarters, under the Director-General, by the Deputy Director-General of Telegraph Traffic referred to under sub-paragraph (II) above ; and the Traffic work which has hitherto been performed by Directors and Divisional Superintendents of Telegraphs will pass to the control of the Postmasters-General in charge of the eight existing Postal Circles. Each Postmaster-General will be given the services, for Telegraph Traffic work, of an officer of about the standing of a Deputy Postmaster-General, with the following staff of Assistants :—

Bombay Circle	Three.
Central Circle	Two.
Madras Circle	Three.
Punjab Circle	Three.
United Provinces Circle	Two.
Bengal and Assam Circle	Four.
Bihar and Orissa Circle	One.
Burma Circle	One.

By Traffic work is meant the disposal of all questions connected with the establishment of Government Telegraph Offices, whether departmental or combined, the supervision and control of all telegraph work performed inside such offices excepting the maintenance of wireless and other telegraph apparatus (such as Baudot, Wheatstone, Repeaters, etc), and the testing of lines in offices in which Technical Branch men are not permanently employed. In the Burma Circle, some Traffic duties will devolve on officers of the Engineering Branch. These officers will be required to inspect all departmental telegraph offices in that Province except Rangoon, (with its local departmental offices), Mandalay, Moulmein and Bassein ; and to submit to the Traffic Branch of the Postmaster-General's office the inspection reports on these offices.

VIII. To provide a suitable staff of officers to control the larger telegraph offices, and to assist the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs and Postmasters-General, a separate superior Traffic Branch will be created consisting of the following forty appointments :—

(a) Deputy Director-General of Telegraph Traffic, pay Rs. 1,750—50—2,000.

(b) Superior Traffic Branch, First Division :—

8 Deputy Postmasters-General, Traffic ... ... 3 Superintendents in charge of the Calcutta, Bombay and Madras Telegraph Offices. ... 1 Assistant Director-General of Telegraph Traffic. ...	First grade, 2, on Rs 1,200—40—1,400. Second grade, 4, on Rs. 1,000. Third grade, 6, on Rs. 800.

(c) Superior Traffic Branch, Second Division :—

2 Assistant Superintendents in the Calcutta and Bombay Offices. 19 Superintendents of Post Offices, Traffic, as Assistants to Deputy Postmaster-General, Traffic. 5 Superintendents in charge of the Agra, Rangoon, Karachi, Lahore and Delhi Telegraph Offices. 1 Assistant to the Deputy Director-General of Telegraph Traffic.	On a time-scale of pay rising from Rs. 250 by annual increments of Rs. 15 to Rs. 400 and thereafter by annual increments of Rs. 20 to Rs. 600 a month.

Eventually, this Branch will consist of specially selected and trained traffic officers, and will be recruited as far as possible from subordinates selected at any stage of their service. All officers appointed to the Second Division of the Branch, excluding the superior officers referred to below, who will draw travelling allowances at the rates at present admissible for Superintendents or Assistant Superintendents of Telegraphs, will be treated as officers of the first class for purposes of the travelling allowance regulations, the daily allowance admissible being that prescribed in Appendix 25 of the Civil Service Regulations for Superintendents of Post Offices, viz., Rs. 4 a day.

To commence with, 21 appointments in the superior Traffic Branch will be filled by superior officers now serving in the Telegraph Department, who would otherwise form a surplus owing to the reduction of the establishment of Directors, Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Telegraphs. Such officers will serve on the pay to which they would have been entitled if they had been employed in the Engineering Branch and will remain, except in very special circumstances, in the superior Traffic Branch; but as far as possible, the selections for this Branch will be made with the consent of the officers. Officers so selected will be granted all increments under the existing time-scale of pay for Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Telegraphs as they become due, provided their work is satisfactory; and the rule under which an officer is not permitted to go beyond the pay of the eleventh year of service, unless he is in charge of a division or its equivalent, will be waived in their case. Officers belonging to the superior establishment of the Telegraph Department, who are employed as Assistants to Deputy Postmasters-General, Traffic, will be designated Assistant Postmasters-General, Traffic.

5. The distribution and ultimate strength, pay, allowances, etc., of the staff of superior officers and upper subordinates sanctioned for telegraph work, will be as shewn in the Appendix to this Resolution. The ultimate effect of the decisions set forth in the preceding paragraph will be the substitution of a staff of 45 Telegraph Engineers for the existing establishment of 96 superior telegraph officers (excluding the Superintendent of Workshops and the Chief Storekeeper); the reduction of the establishment of Deputy Superintendents, Telegraph Engineering, (hitherto termed Deputy Superintendents, General), from 72 to 58; the increase of the establishment of Deputy Superintendents, Technical, by one appointment, the reduction by five of the establishment of Deputy Superintendents, Traffic, employed in Telegraph offices, caused by the removal from this cadre of the appointments of Assistant Director of Traffic (temporary) and of Deputy Superintendents in charge of the Rangoon, Karachi, Lahore and Delhi offices; and the creation of a new superior Traffic Branch consisting of 40 appointments; in all, a net reduction of 28 appointments.

6. The establishments now sanctioned do not include leave reserves. In the case of the Engineering Branch, the total number of officers present on duty will always be maintained at sanctioned strength by the appointment, when necessary, of additional Deputy Superintendents in the lowest grade to take the place of superior officers absent on leave, etc. Deputy Superintendents will not, however, be appointed to officiate as Assistant Superintendents. Temporary vacancies in the superior Traffic Branch caused by the absence of officers on leave, etc., will be filled by officiating appointments to that Branch, and any vacancies caused by such appointments will be filled in the usual manner.

7. On the Post Office side, the only officers directly affected by the scheme of amalgamation herein described are the Postmasters-General. A revision of their pay has already been under contemplation. In view of their increased work and responsibility under the amalgamation scheme, it has been decided to adopt the following scale of pay of these officers, to whom no exchange compensation allowance will be admissible in future :—

	Rs.
2 appointments on	2,500 a month
2 " "	2,250 "
3 " "	1,750 "

The pay of these grades will be attainable by any officer holding the appointment of Postmaster-General, whether he be a member of the Indian Civil Service or promoted from the ranks of departmental postal officers. Officers of the Telegraph Department appointed to be Postmaster-General will continue to draw the pay to which they would ordinarily be entitled on the scales laid down for Telegraph officers.

8. The reductions in establishment referred to in paragraph 5 above, cannot be effected at once, owing to the pledge which has been given by the Government of India that, in such steps as may be taken towards the amalgamation of the two Services, all possible protection should be afforded to the personal interests and prospects of the existing staff of both Departments in all grades. The reductions in the establishments of Upper Subordinates will be made in the lowest grades, and will be effected at once, without detriment to the prospects of subordinates, by the transfer of eighteen Deputy Superintendents from the present General and Traffic Branches to the superior Traffic Branch, and the temporary employment of three Deputy Superintendents, General, in vacancies in the revised cadres of Deputy Superintendents, Technical and Traffic. The surplus staff will be confined entirely to the superior establishment. Of this surplus, twenty-one officers will be employed in the superior Traffic Branch in the manner described in paragraph 4 (VII) above; one will be employed as Chief Storekeeper; and one as Assistant to the Chief Storekeeper; one will be employed as Postmaster-General, Burma, and another will be employed as Postmaster-General in some other Circle, as soon as a leave vacancy occurs which would not in the ordinary course be filled by a departmental officer of the Post Office. Other excess officers, who will mainly be officers on leave, will be treated as supernumary to the sanctioned superior establishment of the Engineering Branch. To reduce this excess as rapidly as possible, the following rates of pension and leave concessions are offered as a special concession to senior officers in the Department :—

(I) All efficient officers of the Telegraph Department who have on the 1st April 1914 served for 18 years, of which not less than 16 years have been spent on active service, are eligible for retirement from the Department. Pension on the following scale will be granted to those officers whose resignation may be accepted :—

(a) The pension which would be due under existing rules if the officers concerned were retiring on medical certificate.

(b) An additional pension calculated at the following rate —

To officers under 50 years of age	...	... Rs.	1,000 per annum.
To officers in their 51st year	...	... "	900 "
Ditto 52nd "	...	... "	800 "
Ditto 53rd "	...	... "	500 "

Provided that the resignation of the officers concerned is submitted to the Government of India within six months from the date of this Resolution.

(II) When an officer has tendered his resignation through his superior officer, it is obligatory that the application should be submitted for the orders of the Government of India ; and it cannot be cancelled except with the approval and sanction of Government.

(III) The Governor General in Council reserves the right to accept or to refuse any application for retirement under these terms, or to postpone the date on which such retirement is to take effect, according to the interests of the public service.

(IV) Officers taking advantage of these concessions will be admitted to any leave that may be due to them preparatory to retirement ; but the compensation pension granted will be that due in respect of the actual age on retirement.

9. There are at present 11 superior appointments of which the pay exceeds Rs. 1,250 and to which officers now in the service could reasonably have expected promotion under the present system. It will be seen that, in place of these, only 5 superior administrative appointments have been provided. In order to safeguard the interests of officers now in the service, and at the same time to guard against unduly rapid promotion consequent on the reduction in the cadre which the concessions mentioned in the last paragraph are expected to effect, it has been decided to adopt the following scale for all officers serving in the Telegraph Department on 31st March 1914.

Number of appointments.	Rate of pay.	Condition of appointment.
		Permanent.	Officiating.
1	Rs. 2,750	No condition	No condition.
1	Rs. 2,250 Imperial ... ... Rs. 1,800 Provincial ...	Not less than 30 years' service ...	Not less than 27 years' service.
2	Rs. 2,000 Imperial ... ... Rs. 1,600 Provincial ...	Not less than 27 years' service...	Not less than 24 years' service.
4	Rs. 1,750 Imperial ... Rs. 1,400 Provincial ...	Not less than 24 years' service...	Not less than 22 years' service.
3	Rs. 1,500 Imperial ... Rs. 1,200 Provincial ...	Not less than 22 years' service...	Not less than 20 years' service.

The first appointment is that of Chief Engineer and is unconditional. The remaining appointments will be held, irrespective of the duties performed, by officers who have the necessary qualifying service. If a vacancy (whether permanent or officiating) in this scale cannot be filled owing to the next senior qualified officer being ineligible by length of service, the remaining vacancies in the chain will still be filled as though he had been promoted. For the purposes of this scale temporary officers who have been taken on to the permanent cadre, will date their service from the time of joining the permanent establishment. This scale will continue in force as long as there remain in the Department any officers now in service who would, but for the amalgamation, have risen to enjoy the rates of pay hitherto admissible to the officers now holding the 11 administrative appointments in question. Promotions to a higher rate of pay according to the scale prescribed above will be subject to the continued efficiency of the officer in question.

10. All officers in receipt of pay at the rate of Rs. 1,500 and upwards, or the Provincial Service equivalent, will be eligible, irrespective of the duties on which they are employed, for daily allowance at the rate of Rs. 7-8-0 a day prescribed for Directors of Telegraphs in item 46 of appendix 25 to the Civil Service Regulations.

11. Subject to any changes which may be necessary as the result of the enquiries instituted by the Royal Commission on the Public Services in India, the following principles will be observed in the recruitment of officers for the superior telegraph appointments. For the Engineering Branch, approximately one-half of the superior staff will be recruited from England, one-fourth in India, and the remaining one-fourth by promotion from the subordinate ranks; that is to say, ordinarily one officer will be recruited from England annually, the second vacancy in each year being filled alternately by the appointment direct to the Provincial Service of a candidate selected in India and by promotion to that service of a selected subordinate. In the case of the superior Traffic Branch the majority of the appointments will be filled, as the surplus staff of officers belonging to the present superior and upper subordinate establishments is exhausted, by the selection of specially qualified officers from the upper subordinate and subordinate staff of the Department. In order, however, to guard against the possibility of a dearth of suitable officers for the highest Traffic appointments, and with a view to obtaining when necessary from other sources, including other telegraph administrations, the services of officers possessing special qualifications, the Director-General will be at liberty to make direct appointments to the superior Traffic Branch from outside the ranks of the signalling establishment at any position in the scale which may be considered suitable. Deputy Superintendents, Telegraph Engineering, will be recruited in exactly the same manner as the present Deputy Superintendents, General, except that subordinates of the Technical Branch as well as Inspecting Telegraph Masters and Inspecting Telegraphists will be eligible, if qualified, for selection as Deputy Superintendents, Telegraph Engineering.

12. The introduction of the scheme described above will necessitate a redistribution of the clerical and menial establishments of the present Telegraph Department. Any clerk whom it may be necessary to transfer to another station will be granted an advance of one month's pay recoverable in six equal instalments; and any clerk transferred over a distance exceeding 500 miles will be granted a bonus of two month's pay, subject to a maximum of Rs. 100, provided that it is shown that the clerk has actually incurred extra expenditure owing to his transfer. Ultimately certain reductions will be effected in the strengths of the clerical and menial establishments; but their extent cannot at present be determined. In any case due regard will be paid to the interests of men now in the service. The appointments of the clerks allotted permanently to Postmasters-General for Telegraph Traffic work will be added to the sanctioned establishment of their offices, and the clerks themselves will be graded for promotion in these establishments. The appointments of the clerks allotted permanently to the offices of Directors, Telegraph Engineering (the Engineering Branch of the Postmaster-General's office in the case of the Burma Circle) and to Divisional Offices will be graded in four separate cadres under the heads of the four Engineering Circles, by whose promotions, postings, grant of leave, payment, etc., will be controlled in exactly the same manner as the cadres of Circle and Divisional Office clerks are controlled by the present Circle Directors. The clerical establishment sanctioned for the office of the Electrical Engineer-in-Chief will be transferred to the Director-General's Office, where the greater part of the clerical work of the Electrical Engineer-in-Chief will in future be performed; and arrangements will be made to supply from the Director-General's Office a suitable clerical staff for the Chief Electrician at Alipore.

13. The headquarters of officers in the Traffic Branch, except in the cases of officers employed in telegraph offices, will be the headquarters of the Director-General or the Postmaster-General, as the case may be. In the case of the Engineering Branch, the headquarters of the Chief Engineer and his Assistant and of the Personal Assistant to the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs will be those of the Director-General. All the officers employed at the headquarters of the Director-General will, as at present arranged, accompany the Government of India to Simla every year, with the exception of the Assistant to the Chief Engineer and either the Assistant Director-General of Telegraph Traffic or the Assistant to the Deputy Director-General of Telegraph Traffic. The headquarters of the three Directors of Telegraph Engineering will be fixed at Bombay, Lahore (ultimately Delhi) and Calcutta, and those of the Divisional Superintendents of Telegraph Engineering at the following places:—

1. Bombay, Central and Madras Circle—

(a) Bombay.

(b) Ajmere.

(c) Nagpur.

(d) Trichinopoly for the present, but Coimbatore when office accommodation is available.

(e) Bangalore.

(f) Madras.

2. Punjab and United Provinces Circle—

(a) Karachi.

(c) Lahore.

(d) Lucknow.

(e) Allahabad.

3. Bengal and Eastern Bengal and Assam Circle—

(a) and (b) Calcutta.

(c) Darjeeling.

(d) Dacca.

(e) Shillong.

4. Burma—

(a) Rangoon.

(b) Akyab.

(c) Maymyo.

(d) Mandalay.

The area of the divisions generally will be greatly increased under this scheme. It will therefore probably be necessary, in the majority of divisions, to station at least one attached officer of the Engineering Branch at some place other than the Headquarters of the Division. These postings will be left to the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs, to be made according to actual requirements in each case.

14. Under articles 642 and 643 of the Civil Service Regulations, certain officers of the Telegraph Department, in accordance with present orders, are eligible for certain special additional pensions. The reorganization of the Department and the abolition of certain posts renders a revision of these orders necessary. It has accordingly been decided that additional special pensions shall continue to be admissible as follows to officers who were eligible for special additional pensions under articles 642 and 643:—

(a) In the case of officers appointed not later than 1897—

(i) Additional pensions of Rs. 2,000 a year for three years' approved service as Chief Engineer or in any capacity on the Rs. 2,250 grade.

(ii) Additional pensions of Rs. 1,000 a year for three years' approved service in the grades of Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 1,750 or as either of the two senior officers in the grade of Rs. 1,500, the Electrical Engineer-in-Chief's appointment being considered as on Rs. 1,750.

(b) In the case of officers appointed later than 1897—

Additional pensions of Rs. 1,000 a year to those who have rendered not less than three years of effective and approved service as Chief Engineer, in the grades of Rs. 2,250 and Rs. 2,000 or as either of the two senior officers in the grade of Rs. 1,750.

(c) No officer who has been passed over for promotion from the Rs. 1,750 grade, and no officer in that grade at the end of his service who is not declared by the Director-General to be fitted for promotion, will be considered entitled to the additional special pensions referred to above.

15. The terms stated in the preceding paragraph are applicable to those officers who were employed in the Telegraph Department on the 31st March 1914, and who are eligible to attain to the special rates of pay mentioned in paragraph 9 above. The grant of additional special pensions to officers appointed subsequently to that date in the posts of Chief Engineer, Telegraphs, Director, Telegraph Engineering, and Deputy Director-General, Telegraph Traffic, will be governed by the provisions of article 475 of the Civil Service Regulations.

16. The scheme of amalgamation above described closely resembles the systems in force in the United Kingdom, Holland, Belgium and Italy, where Engineering and Traffic Officers are as far as possible employed solely on duties for which they are recruited and specially trained, and it is believed that a three-fold advantage will accrue therefrom. From the point of view of the State, the redistribution of duties and in particular the abolition of dual control in combined offices will undoubtedly result in increased economy and efficiency. The public, at the same time, will reap the advantage of the greater telegraph and telephone facilities which may be expected to result from the increased efficiency of the administration. Finally, the scheme not only assures adequate protection of their prospects to all Telegraph officers now in service, but it also offers them a more congenial range of duties, while affording, for the first time, to competent subordinates a prospect of advancement to well paid appointments. The Governor General in Council desires to take this opportunity of expressing his very high appreciation of the manner in which Sir Charles Stewart-Wilson and the Hon'ble Mr. Maxwell have dealt with the many important and difficult problems involved in the formulation of the scheme of amalgamation now finally approved. In the opinion of the Government of India the scheme adequately provides for the interests of the officers of both Departments, while affording an improved service to the public combined with a considerable ultimate saving in annual expenditure.

ORDERED that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Finance and Home Departments, the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs, and the Accountant-General, Post Office and Telegraphs.

ORDERED also that it be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

The Report of the Union of South Africa Indian Enquiry Commission is published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India for general information.

R. E. ENTHOVEN,

Secretary to the Government of India.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

INDIAN ENQUIRY COMMISSION.

REPORT.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE RIGHT HONOURABLE VISCOUNT GLADSTONE OF LANARK, A MEMBER OF HIS MAJESTY'S MOST HONOURABLE PRIVY COUNCIL, KNIGHT GRAND CROSS OF THE MOST DISTINGUISHED ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE, HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR SOUTH AFRICA, GOVERNOR-GENERAL AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN AND OVER THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

May it please Your Excellency :—

We, the Commissioners appointed by Your Excellency to hold a public judicial Enquiry into the disturbances in connection with the recent strike of Indians in Natal, the causes and circumstances which led to that strike and to those disturbances, the amount of force used in the suppression of the disturbances, and the necessity for the use of such force, and as to any acts of violence alleged to have been committed upon persons sentenced to imprisonment in connection with the strike, and further to make recommendations in respect of any of the above matters have the honour to report as follows :—

The strike was one which was initiated and organised by Mr. Gandhi, the recognised leader of the Indian Community in South Africa. The causes which led to that strike will be hereafter considered : it is sufficient at present to state that it began in the coal area in the North of Natal, where a large number of indentured labourers is employed, that it spread from there to the sugar and other plantations, and that it ultimately affected all industries and employments, until even domestic servants fell under its spell. It was, however, of comparatively short duration.

The first symptoms of unrest appeared about the middle of October, and before the end of the month practically the whole of the coal area was affected. On the 1st November a large number of the strikers led by Mr. Gandhi, and accompained by their wives and children, to the number in all of over 2,200, began a march from the coal districts into the Transvaal with the deliberate object of contravening the Immigrant Regulation Act, 1913, and of courting arrest and imprisonment. On the 6th November they entered the Transvaal at Volksrust where Mr.

Gandhi was arrested, brought before the Resident Magistrate and released on bail. He was subsequently again arrested at Standerton and again released on bail, and finally he was arrested for the third time at Greylingstad, and was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for 9 months. On the 10th November Messrs. Polak and Kallenbach, who shared with Mr. Gandhi the responsibility of conducting the march into the Transvaal were also arrested, and on the 11th the Indians to the number of over 2,000 were stopped at Balfour, and were taken back by rail to their respective spheres of employment in Natal.

It is unnecessary for the purposes of this Enquiry to follow in detail the subsequent history of the strike. In the middle of November it spread to the sugar plantations and other industries in Natal. A large force of police under the command of General Lukin was collected and distributed throughout the affected area.

By Natal Law, the Indians who had struck work were guilty of criminal offences, and were liable to be arrested and punished. At various places arrests were made which in some instances led to disturbances and to conflicts between the police and the strikers. Two of these conflicts were of a serious nature, one, on the plantations of the Natal Estates, Ltd., near Mount Edgecombe, and the other on the plantations of Messrs. E. H. Hawkesworth & Sons, near Esperanza. On each of these occasions firearms were used by the police, with the result that, in all, 9 Indians were killed and about 25 were wounded. The other conflicts were not of a serious nature, and no special reference need be made to them. By the end of the first week in December the trouble was practically at an end: all the men who had been on strike, had returned to work, and on the 9th December General Lukin returned to Pretoria.

From the terms of reference and from the history of this movement, it was evident to the Commission that its work lay chiefly in Natal, where the trouble arose, where the disturbances took place, and where consequently the witnesses who could throw light upon the occurrences, resided. Before proceeding to that Province, however, a preliminary sitting was held in Pretoria on the 18th December, 1913, for the purpose of setling the procedure to be adopted and at the same time of giving an opportunity to any persons living in the Transvaal, who might desire to do so, of tendering their evidence. At this sitting a statement was made pointing out that it would be of the greatest assistance to the Commission if the Union Government, the Natal Indian Association, and any other association of persons having an interest in the Enquiry, would appear before it through counsel or other duly authorised representatives. It was also stated that it was essential that reasonable notice should be given to the Secretary of any specific charges of violence alleged to have been committed upon persons sentenced in connection with the strike and the disturbances. Further, with a view to enabling the Commission to make the enquiry as thorough as possible and of giving the Indians the fullest benefit of the advice and service of their leaders, the Commission recommended to the Government that the leaders of the strike movement, Messrs. Gandhi, Polak and Kallenbach, should be released from gaol. This recommendation was promptly responded to by the Government, and the same day the persons mentioned were discharged from custody.

We were disappointed, however, on meeting at Durban on the 26th February to find that the Government of the Union alone was represented by counsel, and only for the purpose of leading evidence regarding the two serious conflicts which took place between the Police and the Indians, to which reference has already been made.

A distinguished official of the Government of India, Sir Benjamin Robertson, Commissioner of the North-West Provinces, was present, however, to watch the proceedings on behalf of his Government and to give evidence before the Commission, and we desire to express our appreciation of the great assistance which we received from his presence and help in our Enquiry.

Unfortunately the main object which the Commission had in view in recommending the release of Messrs. Gandhi, Polak and Kallenbach was, to a great extent, frustrated by the attitude taken up by these persons.

So far from assisting the Commission by placing before it the case for the Indian Community for the redress of alleged grievances and by collecting evidence in support of the serious allegations of acts of violence committed upon persons sentenced to imprisonment in connection with the strike, the leaders decided on various grounds, which it is unnecessary to mention, entirely to ignore the Commission. The result was that not only was the Indian community not represented by counsel, but that, acting upon the advice given by Mr. Gandhi, no witnesses appeared to substantiate the charges of violence.

It is much to be regretted that the leaders of the Indian community should have taken up this attitude, as not only did it greatly hamper the Commissioners in their investigations into the grievances which led to the strike, but it further rendered it impossible to make any enquiry into the allegations of ill-treatment. These charges had been scattered broadcast throughout the length and breadth of the Empire and had created intense feeling in India, and it was therefore of the utmost importance that they should have been thoroughly investigated.

All that the Commission had before it, however, was the vague allegation that acts of violence had in fact been committed. It is needless to point out how unsatisfactory the position was, but we nevertheless expressed our willingness to hear any evidence that might be produced to substantiate any charge of this nature against any official of the Government, and invited witnesses who could assist us in any way, to come forward with their statements. Our appeal, however, fell upon deaf ears, as the Indians who had taken part in the strike, acting no doubt upon the advice given to them by Mr. Gandhi, obstinately refused to appear before us. We had no power to subpœna witnesses, and even if we had possessed that power we could not have compelled the witness to speak. In these circumstances there was no other course open to us but to eliminate this part of the reference from our Enquiry, and to allow the charges of violence and ill-treatment to go by default.

But before dismissing this subject from further consideration, it is perhaps desirable that we should mention that an Indian named Sooker, who was one of Mr Gandhi's assistants and who accompanied him on his march into the Transvaal, did appear before the Commission to tender evidence in support of these others on the subject, and that he could only speak as to what had been told him by others. It was clearly impossible to allow hearsay evidence in support of serious criminal charges, and we accordingly refused to hear him. He stated, however, that he had noticed amongst the prisoners in the precincts of the Court, a man named Balbadhur, who was himself one of the men who had been ill-treated after the strike, and who therefore could give direct evidence on the point.

We requested that this man should be brought before us for the purpose of taking his evidence, and this was done. It appeared from his statement that he had been working at the St. George's Mine No. 2 at Hatting Spruit: that he had taken part in the strike and in the subsequent march into the Transvaal: that on his being returned to the mine he was taken before the Magistrate, who ordered him to return to work, and that he did so. His complaint was that on his return to the mine he asked the compound manager for food and for the wages that were due to him, and that thereupon the compound manager told four of the mine police to hold him while he thrashed him with a sjambok.

This charge therefore did not fall within the terms of our reference, which was concerned only with "acts of violence alleged to have been committed (presumably by Government officials) upon persons sentenced to imprisonment in connection with the strike." This man had not been sentenced to imprisonment, and his complaint was not against the prison authorities, but against the compound manager of the mine. However, we thought it desirable to further investigate the matter, and ascertained from him that he had laid a charge against the compound manager before the Magistrate of Dundee, who sent him to a doctor to be examined, but who took no further notice of his complaint.

From the witness Sooker, however, we learned that Balbadhur had informed him that the Magistrate had tried the charge against the compound manager, and that although he had called three witnesses to substantiate his complaint the Magistrate had acquitted the accused. At the request of the Commission, Mr. Cross, the Assistant Magistrate of Dundee, appeared and gave evidence before us. He confirmed what Balbadhur had told Sooker, that so far from the Magistrate taking no steps in the matter as the witness had asked us to believe, the charge against the compound manager had actually been tried before him, and he produced the records of the proceedings in the case. This record showed that Balbadhur had given evidence of an assault committed upon him by the compound manager with a sjambok, and that he had called three other Indians working in the mine to corroborate his statement. These witnesses, however, one and all denied any knowledge of the assault, and thereupon the charge was withdrawn by the police officer who was prosecuting for the Crown, and accused was acquitted. All this was so entirely in conflict with the testimony of Balbadhur, to the effect that the Magistrate had neglected to take any steps upon his complaint, that we came to the conclusion that his evidence was wholly unreliable and that no good purpose could be served by further investigating the matter.

Having eliminated therefore from our Enquiry that part of it which had reference to acts of violence alleged to have been committed upon persons sentenced to imprisonment in connection with the strike, we proceeded to take evidence upon the other subjects which had been referred to us.

Fortunately during the latter end of our sitting a few Indians, chiefly from the Mahommedan section of that community, who represented the Natal Indian Congress, did appear before us and gave evidence of considerable value and importance. At a later stage of the Enquiry, when the Commission sat in Cape Town from the 23rd to the 27th February, several other Indians presented themselves, who claimed to represent various societies, three of them having travelled from the Transvaal for that purpose. These persons were, we think, well advised to refuse to follow the advice given by Mr. Gandhi to his fellow-countrymen to ignore the Commission. By appearing and giving evidence, they were able to give us important information on certain subjects, and by doing so, they, in our opinion, rendered considerable service to the Indian community.

The Commission sat at Durban from the 26th January to the 7th February. At the request of counsel, who appeared for the Government, we proceeded in the first place to enquire into the two disturbances already referred to which had taken place near Mount Edgecombe and Esperanza, in the course of which there had been conflicts between the police and the Indians, with the result that nine Indians in all were killed and about twenty-five were wounded. These were the only conflicts of a serious nature which took place throughout the strike, and the only ones on which evidence was led before us on behalf of the Government. There was, however, an obstinate refusal on the part of the Indians who had taken part in these disturbances, to appear before the Commission. Every effort was made to induce them to do so, but without success. After the evidence led on behalf of the Government had been taken, at our request an official from the office of the Protector of Immigrants, visited the plantations at Mount Edgecombe, informed the coolies working there that the Commission was sitting and was desirous of hearing their account of the events which had led to the loss of life, and invited any of them who were willing to do so to come forward and tender their evidence. A similar course was taken at Esperanza, where the Resident Magistrate himself interviewed the coolies. The net result, however, of these invitations was that only two Indians, both of whom were concerned in the disturbances at Esperanza, appeared before the Commission, but their evidence was of very little assistance, and in the main it supported the case made on behalf of the Government.

Our report therefore on these two conflicts between the police and the strikers, is based entirely upon the evidence of those by whom force was used, and we had not the advantage of hearing what might have been said on the other side by those against whom that force had been used. We have no reason, however, for thinking that the witnesses called on behalf of the police were not reliable and worthy of credence.

We proceed then to discuss these two disturbances and to consider whether on these occasions it was necessary to use force and whether the amount of force used in the suppression of the disturbances was excessive or not. And in doing so it will be convenient first to deal with the conflict at Mount Edgecombe, which is quite separate and distinct from that at Esperanza, and regarding which, though it occurred two days later, evidence was first led before the Commission.

Mount Edgecombe Disturbances.

On the 27th November there was a serious conflict between the police and a number of Indians working on the sugar plantations of the Natal Estates, Limited, near Mount Edgecombe. On these plantations about 1,700 Indians are employed, the large majority of whom are indentured labourers. The whole of these went out on strike on the 12th and 13th November, but by the 27th practically all of them had returned to work. The indentured Indians are housed in a number of so-called barracks, consisting of rows of houses or huts. There are several of these barracks on the property, and on the day in question the only men who were still on strike were those employed at the Hillhead and Blackburn barracks, the latter of which is distant about one mile from the former and six miles from Mount Edgecombe.

Previous to the 27th November a detachment of the S. A. M. R. under Lieutenant Clarke had been sent to the Natal Estates and were encamped on the plantation.

On the morning of that day, Mr. W. Campbell, the Managing Director of the Company, requested Lieutenant Clarke to proceed to the Blackburn barracks to arrest a number of Indians who refused to return to work. As already pointed out, this is a criminal offence on the part of indentured labourers, and these men were therefore liable to be arrested and charged before the Magistrate. Lieutenant Clarke went to Blackburn with a force of 16 European mounted men and three unmounted native constables. The mounted men were armed with staffs and revolvers; the native constables with kerries. Lieutenant Clarke halted his men a short distance from the barracks, while Mr. Campbell went into the barracks to interview the Indians. He returned in a short time, and informed Lieutenant Clarke that many of the men were willing to return to work, but that others refused to do so. Thereupon Lieutenant Clarke marched his men up to the barracks, where he found about 50 Indians standing in a group with sticks in their hands. At his request Mr. C. Campbell, who speaks their language, told them that the police had come to arrest any men who refused to return to work, and he asked all those who were willing to work to stand on one side. The majority of the men did so, and eventually after some parleying they were joined by the remainder, and all the men expressed their willingness to resume work. The roll was then called, and the men answered to their names. The trouble at these barracks being thus apparently settled, Lieutenant Clarke proceeded to Hillhead. On the way he was reinforced by some more men, so that he had under his command 22 European mounted men and three native constables. He halted his force about 200 yards from the barracks and he, himself, went with Mr. Campbell to the office. Messrs. Campbell and Sykes, the manager, then went into the barracks to interview the Indians. A certain number expressed their willingness to return to work, but the majority refused and their manner was insolent and defiant. Two bottles were thrown at Mr. Campbell and one man attempted to seize the reins of his horse. He thereupon rode back and reported to Lieutenant Clarke, who marched his men up to the barracks. A body of 80 to 100 Indians were collected on some rising ground between the huts, where there was a pile of bricks. At Lieutenant Clarke's request Mr. Campbell asked the coolies to draw up in line, his object being to separate those who were willing to work from the rest. They however, refused to do so, and Mr. Campbell then addressed one of the men, who appeared to be taking a leading part, and asked him if he was prepared to work. He replied in the negative and Lieutenant Clarke then ordered two of the native constables to arrest him, which they did. Thereupon there was a general rush of the Indians to rescue the man who had been arrested. All the coolies were armed with sticks many of which appeared to have been freshly cut. Some of them were upwards of 5 feet long and of considerable thickness, others were of smaller dimensions. They also had stones and bricks, and a few of them were armed with cane knives, which are weapons of a very formidable nature. Immediately upon the arrest of one of their number a general attack was made upon the police with stones and bricks, and Lieutenant Clarke ordered his men to advance. As soon as they came within striking distance of the Indians sticks were freely used by the latter. In a very short time four of the party had been knocked from their horses and were prostrate on the ground. Lieutenant Clarke received two or three blows on the head with sticks. His horse was also struck and rearing unseated his rider. After he had been dismounted he was attacked by a number of Indians, and he received amongst other injuries a severe blow on the side of the head, which felled him to the ground and caused considerable bleeding, and subsequently the wound had to be stitched up.

About the same time Corporal Sparks was struck with a stick across the forehead, and was felled to the ground. As he was rising he received a severe blow at the back of the head, which again knocked him down. A second time he rose and for the third time he was knocked down. Finding himself surrounded by Indians, who were attacking him with sticks he drew his revolver and fired. Gunner Unwin is another of the police who was unseated with a blow from a stick. While he was on the ground he was attack by several Indians. His left side was severely bruised. He drew his revolver when a man with a cane knife struck at him. Fortunately his revolver received the full force of the blow, but his hand was badly cut in two places, and at the date when he gave evidence two months after the occurrence he was still suffering from this injury. He then fired, believing that he was in serious danger of his own life, and one man fell, fatally wounded.

Mr. Campbell was also knocked from his horse with a blow from a brick on his temple, and while on the ground he was struck with sticks on different parts of the body.

Others of the police received injuries of a more or less serious nature. Sergeant Newman was struck on the right hand with a stick, which broke a bone at the back of his right hand and disabled him from making any further use of it. He then saw some Indians rush at him with cane knives, and as they were close upon him he drew his revolver and fired four rounds.

Sergeant Branningan's hand was severely hurt and his right arm was badly bruised. He also fired, chiefly to protect those who were lying on the ground, who he feared were in danger of their lives.

Shots were fired by others of the police who did not give evidence before us. The net result of the shooting was that two Indians were killed on the spot and one subsequently died, while fifteen were wounded. One of the latter was a woman who had received a bullet in the leg. There is no evidence as to how she came by the wound ; it is not suggested that she took part in the attack on the police, and the only possible explanation is that she must have come out of the huts where the women and children were at the time when the attack began and thus received a stray bullet.

In the circumstances set forth above, we have no hesitation in finding that the use of firearms was amply justified. When Lieutenant Clarke moved his men to the barracks, he gave them instructions that revolvers were not to be used except in the last resort. No order was given by him during the conflict to fire, but it was left to each man to exercise his own discretion as to whether he should use firearms or not. No other course indeed was possible in the circumstances. In the general mêlée the force of police had been broken up by the sudden attack made upon them, and Lieutenant Clarke who was in command was thrown to the ground. In our opinion, however, the men who did fire exercised a proper discretion in doing so. At the time, four of their party had been knocked to the ground from their horses and were being violently attacked by a large body of Indians in numbers about 100. It was absolutely necessary to repel the attacking party, if for no other reason than that the men on the ground were in serious danger of their lives, and had not the Indians been driven back, it is certain that they would have been seriously injured, and more than probable that they might have been killed. Moreover the attack was so sudden and violent that even those of the police who had not been dismounted were in considerable danger of receiving serious injuries. The case of Gunner Unwin, already referred to, is an instance of the risk to which the police were exposed, and shows how necessary it was that the attack should have been repelled as promptly as possible. The only way in which this could have been done was by the use of revolvers, and regrettable as the loss of life was, we are clearly of opinion that the police were amply justified in firing when they did, and that, if they had not done so, in all probability the eventual loss of life would have been considerably greater than it actually was.

The immediate effect of the firing was to drive back the Indians, who then took to their heels and ran into the cane fields. They were pursued by the police and 14 of their number taken prisoners. Lieutenant Clarke gave orders that the men were to be taken to Mount Edgecombe and sent them in charge of an escort, consisting of Sergeant Conquer with a corporal, who had been somewhat severely injured in the mêlée, a mounted trooper and three native constables. Sergeant Conquer took his prisoners along the road which leads from Hillhead to Blackburn, and which for a considerable portion of the way passes through cane fields. The main body of the police under Sergeant Withers followed them at some distance. In the meantime Mr. Campbell had ridden to Blackburn House to telephone for medical aid. While there he heard a noise of persons shouting and yelling, and saw a crowd of Indians coming from the Blackburn Barracks along the road leading to Hillhead. These were the men who had been interviewed earlier in the day, and who had all expressed their willingness to return to work. The only possible explanation of the change in their demeanour was that they must have received some information of the conflict which had taken place at Hillhead. Mr. Campbell at once mounted his horse and rode back to warn the escort of the approaching danger. When he reached Sergeant Conquer, the latter had already emerged from that portion of the road which runs through the cane fields; and, when Mr. Campbell reported to him, he moved his prisoners some distance from the road to a hollow where he left them in charge of the native constables and the injured corporal, while he and the mounted trooper of the escort rode back to join the main body under Sergeant Withers. It was soon after this that further conflicts took place between the police and the Indians from the Blackburn Barracks. The evidence on this part of the case is somewhat confusing, and the witnesses are not entirely consistent with one another. In the excitement and confusion which followed this is not altogether surprising.

The following, however, is, as far as we are able to judge, an approximately correct account of what actually took place.

After Mr. Campbell had warned Sergeant Conquer, he rode on along the road leading to Hillhead and gave a similar warning to Sergeant Withers, who was in charge of the main body of police. Thereupon they turned their horses and rode back towards Hillhead being apparently under the impression that the Indians would cut across the fields to Hillhead, instead of proceeding along the road. Observing their mistake they wheeled round and galloped back towards Blackburn. Five of them were considerably in advance of the rest of the party, and just as they emerged from the cane fields and got into the open they rode into a crowd of Indians, estimated at from 100 to 150. As they halted they were surrounded by the Indians who came from all sides and attacked them with showers of stones and with sticks. A few of them had cane knives, but the large majority were armed only with sticks and stones as at Hillhead. Several of the police were struck and thereupon they drew their revolvers and fired. The Indians drew back for an instant, leaving one of their number on the ground dead, but immediately renewed the attack. At this juncture Sergeant Conquer joined the small party of police, and the attack was so hot that he gave the order to wheel round and gallop back along the road. They retired about 100 yards where they met some more of their party, and halted. Meanwhile the Indians had rallied after the first fire, and again advanced with shouts to the attack, and, as they came up to the police, a few more shots were fired. Even this failed to check the advance, and Conquer again gave the order to wheel and retire. As they turned, Sergeant Newman's horse, which had received three wounds, fell upon him, and he was pinned to the ground. While in this position and helpless to defend himself several Indians attacked him with sticks, and he received one severe blow on the head. Fortunately at this moment Corporal Sparkes came up and, as some of the Indians had cane knives, shot and killed one of those who was assaulting Newman. Soon after the Indians broke and ran, and the disturbance was at an end.

From this narrative it will be observed that there were two separate conflicts on the road from Hillhead to Blackburn, during which firearms were used. The first occasion was when five men, the advance guard of the detachment, emerged from the cane fields and were immediately attacked by a large party of Indians. They were hopelessly outnumbered, there being at the lowest estimate 100 Indians: they were practically surrounded and were being violently attacked from all sides by sticks and stones. In the circumstances it became absolutely necessary to drive back the attacking party, for otherwise their own lives would have been in serious danger, and the only possible way in which that could have been done was by using their revolvers. In our opinion they were justified in the circumstances in firing in defence of their own lives. The result of the firing was that one man was killed and several were wounded. It is remarkable that the loss of life was not greater, and if it had been we do not think that any blame could have been attached to the police.

The necessity for the general use of firearms on the second occasion is not quite so clear. The police had retired along the road and had been joined by several more of their party. They halted in the road which was only about 10 feet wide with tall cane on either side, and in the narrow road the Indians could not possibly attack so effectively as if they were in the open. Apparently, however, fire was opened upon them as they advanced to the attack. It may be open to question whether that was absolutely necessary at the particular moment. At the same time it must be remembered that the Indians were very excited and violent, and so determined were they that, though one of their number had been killed and several wounded in the conflict at the edge of the cane field, they had not been intimidated, but had pursued the small party of police through the cane fields. It is more than probable, therefore, that the police would have been unable to check them otherwise than by the use of firearms, and that a failure to use them at once might eventually have led to greater bloodshed. It is also fair to bear in mind that the police had been very roughly handled in two previous conflicts, and that the men were smarting severely under the injuries which they had received. The firing had the effect of driving back the Indians, and though some were wounded no one was fatally injured. The only Indian who was killed at this spot was the one who was shot by Corporal Sparkes, when Sergeant Newman, whose horse had fallen upon him, was being attacked by a number of Indians, and there can be no question that, in the circumstances, Sparkes was fully justified in shooting him.

On the whole then, the conclusions to which we have come with regard to the Mount Edgecombe conflict is, that it was absolutely necessary for the police to use force: that they themselves were in serious danger of their own lives, when they used their revolvers, and that no greater force was used by them than was necessary to suppress the disturbance.

There is just one further observation which it is desirable to make on this subject before passing on. It appears that an independent enquiry into these disturbances was conducted by the Resident Magistrate of Mount Edgecombe, and a copy of the proceedings before him has been furnished to us by the Attorney-General of Natal. At this enquiry evidence was given by several witnesses to the effect that the police had been guilty of an entirely unprovoked attack on them. As these witnesses did not appear before us it may be permissible to refer to certain portions of the evidence given by them before the Resident Magistrate to show how unreliable it was.

It was sworn by several witnesses that Mr. Campbell ordered an Indian named Selvan, who was one of the men killed in the disturbance, to hold his horse, and directed two natives to handcuff him, and that one of these natives then stabbed him through the neck with an assegai. Further evidence was given that Mr. Campbell had deliberately, and without any provocation, fired his revolver into a crowd of Indians and had killed two of their number. The witnesses were so emphatic on these points that the Resident Magistrate considered it necessary to have the bodies exhumed for post-mortem examination. The examination was held before the District Surgeon, the Deputy District Surgeon, and a Dr. Nanji, who was present in the interests of the Natal Indian Association. The examination proved beyond doubt, as found by the Resident Magistrate, that the death of the Indian Selvan was due to a bullet wound and not to an assegai stab, and that the deaths of the two other Indians were due to bullet wounds fired from Webley revolvers and not from a Browning pistol, which Mr. Campbell was carrying. In these circumstances the Resident Magistrate had no hesitation in refusing to believe the evidence of these witnesses and accepted the version of the disturbance which was given by the members of the S. A. M. R., which substantially was in accord with the evidence given by them before this Commission.

ESPERANZA DISTURBANCE.

The facts elicited from the witnesses regarding this disturbance were shortly as follows :—

On the 21st November all the Indians to the number of about 200 working on the Beneva Sugar Estates, near Esperanza, the property of Messrs. E. W. Hawkesworth & Sons, went on strike.

On Monday, the 24th, Mr. Hawkesworth, senior, interviewed them and tried to persuade them to resume work, but they refused to do so. Early on the following morning, between 6 and 7 o'clock, he made another appeal to them. He told them that he would not press them for an answer then, but would return for it after breakfast. Up to this time they had been perfectly quiet and orderly in their behaviour. After breakfast Mr. Hawkesworth was proceeding in his motor to the barracks, when he was met by a special messenger sent by his son, with a note advising him not to go down without the police, as the men had all armed themselves with sticks. Thereupon he drove into Umzinto, a distance of five miles, and reported to the Resident Magistrate, requesting that some police should be sent for their protection. Major Trew, who was in command of the police at Umzinto, immediately dispatched a detachment under Sergeant Rorke, consisting of Sergeant Davidson and ten mounted European constables and one Indian constable. Sergeants Rorke and Davidson were armed with revolvers, and the constables with rifles. Rorke is a sergeant in the South African Police, stationed in Johannesburg, of considerable experience, who had seen some years' service in the Irish Constabulary. His orders were to report himself to Mr. Hawkesworth and find out what the trouble was with the Indians. He was also warned by Major Trew not to use firearms except in case of extreme necessity for the protection of life and property.

He arrived at Beneva soon after 11 o'clock, and learned from Mr. Hawkesworth what had taken place. He then sent Sergeant Davidson with four men to the barracks, about two hundred yards distant, to ask the Indians to come down to see him, while he remained with the rest of his force in the immediate neighbourhood of the office buildings. Davidson went to the barracks, and interviewed the Indians, who, to the number of two hundred, readily returned with him to the office. Rorke then addressed them and asked them if they were willing to return to work. He called for a show of hands, and about two-thirds of the number were opposed to resuming work. Thereupon Rorke told them that they would have to go with him to Umzinto to see the Magistrate, and they expressed their willingness to do so. The whole body of Indians then started on the road to Umzinto, followed by the police, but, after they had gone only a few yards, there was an outcry from their women and children at the barracks, and they then asked that their women and children might accompany them. Sergeant Rorke consented, and they accordingly returned to the barracks, followed by the police. As they approached the barracks, suddenly one of the Indians threw himself on his back at full length on the ground. He said something to the others, and the whole number then followed his example. What prompted this movement on the part of the Indians is not satisfactorily explained by the evidence, and it is needless to speculate upon the subject. Amongst their number was a man named Sammy who spoke English, and Sergeant Davidson asked him to tell them to get up and go to Umzinto, and that it would be all right. He replied that they would not go; that if they did they would be knocked about on the road, and that they preferred to die where they were. He then said to Davidson: "Get off your horses and come and cut our throats." Instead of dismounting, however, Sergeant Rorke ordered his men to advance quietly towards the prostrate Indians. They did so, and as they came up to them one of the latter jumped up with a long stick, or pole, in his hands, and swinging it with both hands, he struck Trooper Coetzee's horse between the eyes with great violence, felling the horse to the ground. Sergeant Davidson dismounted to arrest the man who had struck the blow, but he escaped into a room in the nearest building. Davidson followed him, forced open the door, and as he entered the room the Indian struck at him with his stick, but missed him, hitting the door instead. Two other troopers then went to Davidson's assistance, and he went into the room and hauled out the Indian.

Thereupon a number of coolies ran to his rescue, and soon there was a general attack upon the police with sticks, stones, bottles, etc. There were piles of firewood lying about amongst the huts, and the Indians had armed themselves with pieces of firewood and with stones. A few of them had cane knives and heavy pieces of scrap iron. The attack was so fierce that Rorke ordered his men to retire, and they rode back slowly to the neighbourhood of the office buildings, where there were at the time six or seven Europeans, consisting of Mr. Hawkesworth, senior, his two sons and others, none of whom were armed. Rorke halted his men at this spot, realizing that if he retired further, the unarmed men at the office would be at the mercy of the mob of coolies. Meanwhile the Indians had pursued the retreating police, hurling sticks and stones at them as they retired.

At the office buildings they divided into two bodies, one going to the right and the other to the left of the house nearest to the barracks. As they came from behind the building they renewed the attack and Rorke ordered his men to dismount. By this time most of the troopers had been struck several times, though fortunately none had been seriously injured. Many, however, had their helmets smashed, and there can be no question that but for the protection afforded by their helmets some of them would have been severely hurt. Sergeant Rorke himself had received six or seven blows; his helmet was broken and also the holster of his revolver by blows from a piece of iron with which one of the Indians was armed. The position had become extremely critical, and Rorke had only two courses open to him, either to retire, which he could easily have done, or to beat off the attack by using firearms. To retire was, however, out of the question. Had he done so he would have left the unarmed Europeans at the office at the mercy of an excited crowd of almost two hundred Indians. Moreover, at a distance of only about four hundred yards were houses with women and children. Whether the Indians would have attacked their employers it is impossible to say, and Mr. Hawkesworth did not think it probable. But however that may be, Sergeant Rorke would have been clearly guilty of very grave dereliction of duty if he had retired, and had deserted those whom he had come to protect. Moreover, the moral effect would have been disastrous upon the remaining Indians on strike, of whom there were ten thousand at Esperanza with only 50 police under Major Trew to keep them in check. In these circumstances it being impossible for Sergeant Rorke to think of retiring, the only other course open to him was to repel the attack, and that could be done only by the use of firearms. Had he not done so it is clear that the small body of 13 troopers, who had by this time dismounted, would have been overwhelmed by the mob of two hundred infuriated Indians. Sergeant Rorke, however, first ordered his men to fire a volley over the heads of the Indians, hoping that this might frighten them, but it had no effect in stopping the attack. He then ordered a second volley to be fired at their feet, with no better result. Then in the last resort, he ordered his men to fire two volleys into the crowd of Indians. Two of the number were killed on the spot; two were fatally wounded and died shortly afterwards, while ten men were wounded. These volleys had the desired effect, and the Indians broke up and dispersed.

We are of opinion that in the circumstances the use of firearms was fully justified, and that they were not brought into use a moment sooner than was necessary. Sergeant Rorke had observed great restraint, considering the nature of the attack made upon his small force, and any further delay would probably have been attended with serious consequences to his men. Sooner or later recourse must have been had to firearms, for in no other way could the attack have been repelled, and the probability is that the longer the delay the greater would have been the eventual loss of life.

We are of opinion, therefore, that the force used on this occasion was necessary, and was not in excess of what was required by the emergency.

THE LA MERCY DISTURBANCE.

There is only one other disturbance to which it is necessary to make any reference. A complaint was made to us by three Indians who appeared before the Commission, to the effect that the indentured labourers working on the La Mercy Estate, near Verulam, had been assaulted by some native constables with kerries, and that three of their number had been injured. On investigation, however, it turned out that this was a comparatively trivial matter. Only one of the Indians had been at all severely injured, his arm having been broken, and it seems doubtful whether this had been caused by a blow from a stick.

It appeared from the evidence that the labourers on this estate to the number of about 400 had gone on strike on the 12th November, and had joined a number of other strikers at Verulam, making a total of about 1,200 in all. They had encamped on the outskirts of the village, and as it was thought that their presence might be a a danger to the peace of the neighbourhood, a detachment of police was sent to disperse them and conduct them to their respective plantations. No difficulty was experienced in effecting the necessary separation. The labourers on the La Mercy Estate were being conducted to their homes by a small force of police, consisting of two Europeans and eight natives. At first they went quietly enough, but trouble arose before they had reached their destination. The evidence of the Indian witnesses is that they were attacked by the native constables with sticks, without their giving them any provocation, but merely because they refused to hurry along when ordered to do so. This seems improbable and was denied by the European and one native constable who gave evidence before us. According to the evidence of the native constable, the trouble arose through the Indians attempting to make their way back to Verulam. When they were stopped, they picked up stones and attacked the police, compelling them to retire about one hundred yards. They then halted, and were again attacked by some of the Indians, and it was only then that the native constables used their sticks in self-defence. No great harm was done on either side, only three of the Indians being injured. No further difficulty was experienced in inducing them to proceed to the La Mercy Estate.

Shortly after their arrival Colonel Clarke of the S.A.M.R., who was in command on the North Coast, appeared on the scene, and hearing that a conflict had taken place between the police and the Indians, proceeded at once to hold an inquiry. The coolies, however, refused to give any information, and said that they wished the matter to be allowed to drop. The disturbance, therefore, it will be seen, was of a comparatively trivial nature and calls for no special comment.

We have now discussed all the evidence taken before the Commission bearing upon disturbances in connection with the strike, and the way has been cleared for the consideration of the causes and circumstances which led to it. This was, in our opinion, the most important part of our work, and it was to this subject that the bulk of the evidence was directed. Logically, a consideration of the causes which produced the strike should have preceded instead of following a review of the disturbances arising out of it, but it was thought on the whole more convenient to follow the order in which the evidence was taken.

THE CAUSES AND CIRCUMSTANCES WHICH LED TO THE STRIKE AND DISTURBANCES.

The documentary evidence as contained in the various Blue Books which have been placed at our disposal, make it clear that the strike was immediately due to dissatisfaction on the part of the leaders of the Indian Community with the provisions of the Immigrants Regulation Act, 1913. That Act was assented to by the Governor-General on the 14th June, and came into operation on the 1st August, 1913. But even before the Bill was introduced into Parliament immediately upon its publication in the Gazette a telegram was sent on the 22nd April, 1913, by the Natal Indian Congress at Durban, to the Governor-General, protesting against it, "as contrary pledges maintain existing rights." The full telegram is to be found in Blue Book C. D. 6940, page 17, and need not be set out at length.

Certain amendments were made in the Bill in its passage through Parliament, and the Bill so amended became law, as already stated on the 14th June of the same year. Two days thereafter the following telegram was sent by A. M. Cachalia, Chairman, British Indian Association, Johannesburg, to the Governor-General: "View passage Immigration Bill, Parliament, my Association would respectfully draw Your Excellency's attention to following objections Bill from standpoint Indian community. Bill fails to carry out provisional settlement in that contrary to that settlement it takes away existing rights. It restricts right appeal Supreme Court presently existing. It deprives Indians resident Natal of facility presently enjoyed, re-enter that Province after absence on strength of three years' previous residence while indentured Indians who have paid £3 tax may not under Bill be allowed claim right residence that Province. It takes away right South African-born Indians enter Cape under its existing statute. Free State difficulty remains as before in that declaration required from educated Indian immigrant, which would not be required from any other immigrant as immigrant . . . ."

Thereafter, on the 30th June, a letter was written by Mr. Gandhi to the Minister of the the Interior, in which the former while admitting that the Act was an improvement on the original Bill, raised four specific objections to it on the ground that it failed to carry out what is described by him as "the provisional settlement of 1911." Correspondence then took place between the Minister and Gandhi, and the four objections taken to the Act were further elucidated and discussed. Upon two of them assurances were given by the Minister, with which Gandhi was practically satisfied, and these had no immediate effect on the subsequent occurrences. It will be sufficient therefore to refer to them in the briefest possible way.

The first objection is thus stated by Gandhi in his first letter to the Minister of the 30th June, 1913 :—

> "According to the definition of the term domicile, these Indians who arrived after the Indian Immigiation Law Amendment Act, 1895, and their descendants, appear to become prohibited immigrants."

It will be necessary hereafter to consider the above-mentioned Act, in detai, but it is sufficient here to state that, under it every indentured Indian who camle to Natal after the Act came into force, was required, on the expiry of the indenture, either to re-indenture or to take out annually a pass or license to remain in the Colony. The definition of " domicile " in the Immigrants Regulation Act, 1913, was as follows :

" Domicile shall mean the place in which a person has his present home, or in which he resides, or to which he returns as his place of present permanent abode, and not for a mere special or temporary purpose : and a person shall not be deemed to have a domicile within the Union or any Province (as the case may be) for the purposes of this Act, unless he has resided therein for at least three years, otherwise than under terms of conditional or temporary residence permitted by this Act or any other law or as a person under detention in a prison, gaol, reformatory or lunatic asylum : and a person shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to have lost his domicile within the Union or any Province (as the case may be) if he voluntarily go and reside outside the Union or that Province (except for a special or temporary purpose) with the intention of making his home outside the Union or that Province (as the case may be)."

The point raised by Mr. Gandhi was whether an indentured labourer, who after his indentures had expired, resided in the country for three years, under license, acquired thereby a domicile in Natal, or whether his status was affected by the words of the above definition " otherwise than under terms of conditional or temporary residence permitted by this Act." The reply of the Minister on that point was that the Government was of opinion that in the circumstances stated above a domicile would be acquired and that the case was not affected by the definition of domicile in Section 30 of the Act. With this assurance Mr. Gandhi was satisfied, and on this subject no further difficulty has arisen.

Mr. Gandhi's second objection to the Act may be stated as follows :

By Free State Law Book, Chapter 33, Section 7, it is provided that no Indian shall be allowed to have immovable property registered in his name or to carry on trading or farming operations in that State. It was also provided by Section 8 that every Indian entering that State before being permitted to settle there should make a sworn declaration before a Magistrate that he will not engage in any trading or farming operations.

Further, by Section 7 of the Immigration Regulation Act, 1913, it is provided :—

" Any such person as is described in Chapter XXXIII of the Orange Free State Law Book shall, notwithstanding that he is lawfully resident in a particular Province, or that he has been permitted to enter the Union, continue to be subject in all respects to the provisions of Sections 7 and 8 of the said Chapter XXXIII, and if he acts in contravention of those provisions he may be dealt with under this Act as a prohibited immigrant in respect of the Orange Free State."

Now, in the course of the negotiations that took place between the leaders of the Indian Community and the Government, it was conceded by the latter, that, while for the future immigration of Asiatics into South Africa was to be stopped by administrative action, leave should be given each year to a limited number of educated Indians to enter and reside in the Union. As regards any such persons entering the Orange Free State, it was not questioned by Mr. Gandhi that they would be subject to the provisions of Section 7, Chapter XXXIII, of the Free State Law Book, but he contended that the declaration required by Section 8 was no longer necessary, and he protested against these educated Indians being called upon to make any such declaration as being unnecessary and humiliating to them. He suggested, therefore, that at the back of the declaration required by Section 19 of the Immigration Regulation Act, 1913, from every person arriving at any port of the Union the disabilities set forth in Section 7, Chapter XXXIII of the Free State Law Book, should be printed, and that thereafter no further declaration should be required.

To this suggestion the Minister readily assented, stating that " he saw no difficulty but rather an advantage in notifying all educated Indians admitted into South Africa of the disabilities that Indians are under in the Free State." That has now become the practice of the Immigration Department and consequently the question of a declaration, such as was required by the Free State Law, no longer arises.

Upon the remaining objections taken by Mr. Gandhi to the Immigration Regulation Act, 1913, unfortunately no agreement was arrived at, and it will be necessary hereafter to refer to these in some detail. For the present, however, it will be sufficient to state what the objections were.

The first was that, under the proviso to Section 5 of the Act, Indians born in South Africa are deprived of the free right, which they had hitherto enjoyed under the Immigration Act 30 of 1906 of the Cape Colony of entering that Province, and were now prohibited from immigrating into it unless by virtue of the provisions of Section 4, Sub-section 2 (a), they were able to comply with the educational requirements set forth in Section 3 (a) of the aforesaid Act of 1906.

The second objection had reference to the admission and status of Indian women married in accordance with the rites of their respective religions.

These two points were discussed between the Minister and Mr. Gandhi in several letters, beginning on the 2nd July, and ending on the 28th September, 1913, which are to be found in the Imperial Blue Book, C.D. 7111. Being unable to obtain from the Minister what he considered to be satisfactory assurances on these points, Mr. Gandhi deliberately decided to take the grave steps which immediately led to the strike and to the subsequent disturbances which are the subject of this enquiry. In his letter of the 28th September, which closed the correspondence between the Minister and himself, he informs the former that the step which he proposes to take " consists in actively, persistently and continually asking those who are liable to pay the £3 tax to decline to do so and to suffer the penalties for non-payment, and, what is more important, in asking those who are now serving under indentures and who will, therefore, be liable to pay the £3 tax on completion of the indentures, to strike work until the tax is withdrawn."

This is the first occasion on which, in the course of the correspondence already referred to, mention was made of the £3 tax. It was a matter, however, on which there can be no doubt that many of the Indians felt very strongly, and it had been one of the chief subjects of discussion between the Union Government and Mr. Gokhale when he visited South Africa in 1912. The feeling of the Indians on this subject had been much aggravated by the statements made to them that the Union Government had promised Mr. Gokhale that a Bill would be introduced in the next session of Parliament to repeal the tax.

When, therefore, no such Bill was introduced and when in addition the Government repudiated having made any promise to that effect, the result was that there was grave disappointment on the part of the Indian Community, especially in Natal. It is impossible for us in this enquiry to enter into the controversy which has arisen on the subject of the promise alleged to have been made to Mr. Gokhale : it is sufficient for our purpose to state that the Indians had been led to believe that such a promise had been made, and that on failure to introduce the expected legislation there was considerable feeling on their part against the Government.

On the 29th July, 1913, a mass meeting of Indians, held at Durban, passed a resolution condemning the £3 tax on ex-indentured Indians. Subsequently in a letter of the 12th August, addressed by Mr. A. M. Cachalia, Chairman of the British Indian Association in the Transvaal, to the Secretary of the Interior, stress is laid upon the failure of the Government to carry out the promise alleged to have been made to Mr. Gokhale, and it is stated that the struggle upon which the Indian Community was about to enter would be continued so long as, amongst other things, " the £3 tax upon ex-indentured men, women and children is not removed." This was a grievance which probably appealed to a far larger number of Indians than did the objections taken by Mr. Gandhi to the Immigration Regulation Act, 1913, and advantage was no doubt taken of this fact to secure that concerted action which was necessary, if the strike threatened by him, was to be in any way effective.

That this alleged grievance had considerable effect in inducing the indentured and ex-indentntured labourers to take part in the strike is scarcely open to question, though it would appear from the evidence before us that many of them were more influenced by false reports spread amongst them by persons whom it is impossible to trace. On one of the large plantations, for instance, the labourers when asked why they had stopped work, stated that they were told that the big Rajah was coming from India, who would cut off the heads of those who worked: on another plantation, that the big Rajah was going to pay them £3 a month, provided they did not work, and so on. In other places the labourers on one property ceased work because those in the neighbouring plantations had done so. The causes which led to the strike were diverse and, in many cases, strange, but amongst them there can be no question that the alleged promise of the £3 tax had a definite effect. It is, therefore, one of the subjects which properly falls within the scope of our enquiry, and the greater portion of the evidence which we heard was directed to this subject.

There were other matters affecting Indians which we were invited by certain witnesses to investigate, but which, in our opinion, did not fall within the scope of our reference. Our enquiry into alleged grievances is limited to those which in any way contributed to the strike. We have no authority to investigate and to make recommendations upon the general position of Indians in the Union, and the disabilities under which they suffer.

There was one other subject, however, upon which, though we at first felt some doubt as to whether it was within the terms of our reference, we ultimately decided to hear evidence. Complaints were made that the laws of the Union, more especially the Immigration and Licensing Acts, were being administered against Indians in a harsh and unsympathetic manner. That was one of the subjects specially referred to in a letter from Mr. Cachalia, the Chairman of the British Indian Association, to the Secretary of the Interior, dated 12th August, 1913, and published in Blue Book C.D 7111, page 26, in which he formally notifies the Government that the Indian Community purpose again to have recourse to passive resistance, and in which he states that the struggle will be continued so long as, amongst other things, " a spirit of generosity and justice does not pervade the administration of the existing laws referred to therein."

The same subject is referred to in other communications that took place between the Indian Leaders and the Government, and in his letter of the 21st January, 1914, in which Gandhi intimates to the Minister his intention not to take part in the proceedings before the Commission, he sums up the points on which relief is sought, as follows:—

(1) The Orange Free State question,

(2) The Cape Colony question,

(3) The Marriage question,

(4) Repeal of the £3 tax,

(5) An assurance that existing laws, especially affecting Indians, will be administered justly and with due regard to vested rights.

In view of these circumstances we came to the conclusion that we were justified in extending the scope of our enquiry so as to include an investigation into the subject of the administration of the Immigration and Licensing Laws.

We feel bound, however in view of the terms of reference to limit our investigation to the five subjects specified above, and to eradicate from our enquiry such questions as the following, which we were invited by various witnesses to consider:—

(a) That the Transvaal Laws prohibiting Asiatics from becoming the owners of fixed property and from acquiring rights under the Gold Law should be repealed;

(b) That it should be illegal for the Government to insert in grants and leases of land in townships in the Transvaal a clause prohibiting the transfer or sub-letting of the land to Asiatics;

(c) Such general questions as the alleged want of proper educational facilities for the children of Asiatics; their inability to carry firearms, to ride in trams in the Transvaal, etc.

None of these matters in our opinion had any effect in bringing about the strike, and most of them could only be dealt with by legislation and not by administrative action, so that we do not consider that they fall within the scope of our enquiry.

That being so, we now proceed to discuss the five subjects set forth by Mr. Gandhi in his final letter of the 21st January, 1914.

The Orange Free State Question.

This has already been referred to, and in view of the assurances given by the Minister on the subject it is somewhat difficult to understand why it has been resuscitated. The only point that can be made regarding it is, that inasmuch as under Section 7 of the Act of 1913, educated Indians entering the Free State become subject to Section 8 of Chapter 33 of the Free State Law Book, which amongst other things requires that a declaration shall be made before a Resident Magistrate, and inasmuch as it has been agreed by the Minister that no such declaration shall in future be required, it might be advisable to amend Section 7 of the Act so as to make this perfectly clear.

The Cape Entry Question.

Section 4 of the Immigration Restriction Act, 1913, defines the expression "prohibited immigrant," while Section 5 contains a list of the classes of persons, who, though falling under Section 4, are not to be deemed prohibited immigrants. At the end of this section is the following proviso:

> "Provided that nothing in this section contained shall be construed as entitling a person to whom the provisions of sub-section (1) (a) of the last preceding section apply to enter and reside in a Province in which he has not previously been a lawfully resident."

The effect of this proviso is to prevent, in general, Indians who reside in one Province of the Union from entering and residing in another Province. But under Section 4, sub-section (2) (a) it is provided that any Indian "Who at the commencement of this Act was lawfully entitled to reside in any Province shall not be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant in the Cape of Good Hope if he shows or has shown that he is able to comply with the requirements described in Section 3 (a) of Act No. 30, 1906." The requirements described in that section are that a person shall have sufficient education to be able to "himself write out and sign in the character of any European language an application to the satisfaction of the Minister." Consequently, any Indian residing in any of the other Provinces of the Union is prohibited from entering the Cape Colony, if through deficient education he is unable to satisfy this requirement. And the point raised by Mr. Gandhi in his correspondence with the Minister is that this legislation is an interference with the existing rights of Indians and therefore a breach of the provisional settlement of 1911, made between the Minister of the Interior and himself, inasmuch as under Act, 30, 1905, of the Cape of Good Hope, Indians born in South Africa had prior to the Act of 1913 free rights of entrance into the Cape Province in terms of Section 4 (f) of that Act without being subjected to any educational test.

Now, it is clear that if the provisional settlement of 1911 did in fact safeguard the existing rights of Indians, then in strict law there has been a breach of that agreement. Unfortunately, the terms of this settlement are not set forth specifically in any formal document, but are to be gathered from two letters which passed between the Private Secretary to the Minister and Mr. Gandhi on the 23rd April, 1911, and which are published in the Imperial White Book C.D. 6283, pages 3 and 4. At that time a passive resistance movement on the part of Indians in the Transvaal had been going on for a considerable period. The Minister was anxious that this should come to an end, and on the 21st April, 1911, his Private Secretary wrote to Mr. Gandhi suggesting that the "passive resistance movement, which has caused and still continues to cause considerable suffering, might now be well brought to a close." To this letter Mr. Gandhi replied on the 22nd April in a letter of some length which it is unnecessary to set out in full. In it he says "I share General Smuts' anxiety that passive resistance may now be brought to a close. May I then suggest the following for his consideration so that the suspicion that is sure to be aroused among my countrymen owing to a postponement of the solution may be allayed. An assurance should be given that 'Legislation will be passed next session repealing Act 2, 1907, subject to the reservation of the rights of minor children—and restoring legal equality as to the immigration of Asiatics into the Transvaal and maintaining existing rights.'" Assurances were asked on other points also, which it is unnecessary to specify. To this letter the Private Secretary replied on the same date dealing seriatim with the various points on which assurances were required, but making no direct reference to the demand for the maintenance of existing rights. There was no reply by Mr. Gandhi, to this letter, but it was accepted as the basis of a settlement. On the 27th April a large meeting of the Indians was held at which a resolution was carried almost unanimously "That the proposal and acceptance embodied in the correspondence between General Smuts and Mr Gandhi be accepted as a provisional settlement conditionally upon the pledges embodied in General Smut's letter of the 22nd April being carried into effect." The result of this resolution was that the passive resistance movement was thereupon brought to a close.

It has been pointed out that in the letter of the Private Secretary of the 22nd April, there was no direct assurance that existing rights would be maintained, but there is no doubt that Mr. Gandhi and the Indian Community generally understood that this was one of the terms of the settlement. This appears from many letters subsequently written by Mr. Gandhi to the Minister and specially from certain correspondence which took place between them in January and February, 1912, and subsequently in July and August, 1913. For example, in Mr. Gandhi's letter of the 24th August, 1913, he states specifically that "The correspondence setting forth the provisional settlement of 1911 protected all existing rights of the British Indians." Statements to the same effect are made in other letters, and never on any occasion was this claim repudiated by the Minister. In fact, a perusal of the correspondence leaves the impression that this was common cause between the parties, and was never the subject of controversy.

Then, if that be so it follows that by restricting the entry of Indians born in South Africa into the Cape Colony to those who can satisfy the educational requirements of Act 30, 1906, there has been a departure from the provisional settlement of 1911. At the same time it is clear from Mr. Gandhi's own letters to the Minister that there is very little substance in this alleged grievance. That this was not one of the rights which he had in contemplation at the time is clear from the fact that he himself had entirely overlooked the point until his attention was directed to it by a friend. In January and February, 1912, he had carried on a long correspondence with the Minister in which he raised various objections to the Immigration Regulations Bill, 1912, which on this question was substantially in agreement with the Act of 1913. But nowhere in his letter does he raise the question of the restriction of the right of entry into the Cape Province by an insistance upon the education test provided for by the Cape Act 30 of 1906.

His only objection to this Bill on these points was that in his opinion it made the education test for Indians entering the Cape or Natal, stiffer than it was under the existing laws of these Provinces. And in a letter of the 15th February 1912, he says, "Passive resisters can have nothing to complain of if the present legal position, namely the ability of educated Asiatics to enter Natal or the Cape from the Transvaal by passing the education tests provided by the respective laws of the Province, is retained."

If passive resisters from the Transvaal could have nothing to complain of, it need scarcely be said that Indians in Natal would have still less cause to complain. For the Provisional Settlement had special reference to the Transvaal, or as Mr. Gokhale himself puts it in a speech made by him at Bombay on the 24th October last, "as the struggle was confined to the Transvaal, the terms of compromise could only refer to the Transvaal."

No doubt Mr. Gandhi was wrong in his idea that this was the legal position, for as regards the Cape no test of any kind was required from Indians born in South Africa. But this letter is important as showing, that, apart from the technical point that there had been an interference with existing rights. Mr. Gandhi himself, zealous as he is of the treatment of Indians in South Africa, saw nothing in principle objectionable in enforcing the Cape educational test. Moreover, to show how little substance there is in this grievance reference may be made to another letter of Mr. Gandhi's dated 2nd July, 1913, in which he writes to the Minister, "As you are aware most of the Colonial born Indians have passed through the Government Indian Schools and possess sufficient knowledge to undergo the Cape examination. It is also a well-known fact that throughout the time that the Cape Act has been in force hardly any South African Indian, not belonging to the Cape, has endeavoured to migrate to that Province; the reason is that there is no scope for them there." The education test, indeed, required by the Cape Act, which has already been described, is of the simplest possible nature, and can be satisfied by any one who has had even the most elementary education. In fact, therefore, it would have very little effect in excluding Colonial born Indians even if any considerable number of them were desirous of entering the Cape Province from Natal, and we have Mr. Gandhi's own authority for the statement that in fact very few of them have any such desire.

In truth the grievance is one of sentiment rather than of substance This is what Mr. Gandhi himself says in a letter of the 29th August, 1913, to the Minister, "From the Indian standpoint I want to emphasize the fact that we were fighting for the sentiment, namely, that the liberal and reasonable view taken by the old Cape Parliament shall be left untouched." How long, however, that liberal view would have obtained had Union not taken place, may well be open to question. As the Minister said in his letter to Mr. Gandhi of the 19th August, "You will be aware also that the point was fully dicussed in Parliament last Session and the very strongest exception was taken by members representing constituencies in the Cape Province to any proposal for allowing non-educated Indians to enter the Cape." The assurance of the Minister to Mr. Gandhi to maintain existing rights could scarcely bind the Legislature to hold its hand for all future time and we have to take account of the sentiment or prejudice, call it what you will, on the part of Europeans as well as on the part of Indians. Looking at the whole subject from a practical point of view we have come to the conclusion that no good purpose could be gained by recommending that this shadowy grievance should be remedied by amending the Act of 1912, so as to restore the right of South African born Indians to enter the Cape without undergoing the educational test therein provided.

Before leaving the subject we might refer to a point to which our attention was directed by Sir Benjamin Robertson. Section 4, (2) (a) of the Act of 1913, which deals with the educational requirements of the Cape and Natal Provinces, makes provision for those who were, at the commencement of the Act lawfully entitled to reside in any Province. It was pointed out that the right conferred by that section would not strictly avail any person who became lawfully entitled to reside in any Province after the Act came into force, as for example, a child born after the commencement of the Act of Indians domiciled in South Africa.

It is indeed difficult to see what good purpose is served by the inclusion in the Section of the words "At the commencement of the Act," and they might very well be deleted.

THE MARRIAGE QUESTION.

This is the most difficult of all the questions into which we have to enquire and it raises several separate and distinct points.

(a) The first is as to the right of entry into the Union, of the wife and minor children of an Indian resident in South Africa. Section 5 (g) of the Immigration Regulation Act, 1913, excepts from the definition of prohibited immigrant "any person who is proved to the satisfaction of an immigration officer, or in the case of appeal to the satisfaction of the Board, to be the wife or the child under the age of 16 years, of any person exempted by paragraph (f) of the section (that is to say any person with certain exceptions, domiciled in any Province) including the wife or child of a lawful or monogamous marriage duly celebrated according to the rites of any religious faith outside the Union." Judging from the debates in Parliament on the Bill and the evidence before us, the intention of this clause appears to have been to admit freely into the Union the wife and the children by her of any domiciled Indian, if she were in fact his only wife, even though she had been married to him according to the rites of a religion which recognises polygamy. The Natal Courts held, however, in the case of a woman named Kulsan Bibi, that under the words "lawful and monogamous marriage" are included only such marriages as are recognised as valid in South Africa as well as in England, that is to say "the voluntary union of one man with one woman, to the exclusion, while it lasts, of all others," and that consequently the marriage of a man with one woman under a system which recognises the right of the husband to marry another woman, was in law not monogamous but polygamous.

Seeing that the Act of 1913 is a general Act and does not deal with Asiatics eo nomine it is impossible to question that decision. Unfortunately the effect of it clearly is to defeat the apparent intention of the legislature, and to stigmatise as a prohibited immigrant the only wife of a domiciled Indian if she were married to him according to the rites of a religion which recognised polygamy.

There is abundant evidence, however, to show that it has never been the intention of the Government in the administration of the Act to place upon the words of Section 5 (9) their strict legal meaning.

Accordingly when Mr. Gandhi, in his letter to the Minister of the 2nd July, 1913, required from him an assurance that "the present practice of admitting one wife of the Indian immigrant, so long as she is the only one in South Africa, irrespective of the number of the wives that he might have in India, should be continued," that assurance was readily given.

In the letter of the Secretary of Interior to Mr. Gandhi, dated 19th August, 1913, he says "the present practice of admitting one wife of an Indian now entitled to reside in any Province, or who may in future be permitted to enter the Union, irrespective of the fact that his marriage to such wife may have been solemnized according to tenets which recognise polygamy, or that she is one of several wives married abroad, will be continued so long as she is his only wife in South Africa."

In the case of Kulsan Bibi, already referred to, the reason why her entry into Natal was prohibited, was, according to the evidence of the immigration officer, because her reputed husband already had a wife living with him in Natal. There was therefore no departure in that case from the recognised practice of the Department, with regard to which no complaint had been made to us. Inasmuch, however, as the practice is contrary to the express provisions of the Act, which recognises the right of entry of only the wife of a lawful and monogamous marriage, and as no other women, therefore, could legally claim the right, it is desirable in our opinion that the section of the Act in question should be amended so as to bring the law into conformity with the practice.

(b) The next point raised by Mr. Gandhi in his correspondence with the Minister on this subject was with regard to the right of entry into the Union of the plural wives of Indians resident in South Africa.

It is not altogether clear what is the exact extent of the claim made by him on this point. In his letter to the Minister, dated 24th August 1913, he says "All I contend is that in continuation of the practice hitherto followed, existing plural wives of domiciled residents should be allowed to enter. And this was the assurance given in the letter quoted by me in my correspondence with you."

The letter referred to by him is one of the 10th July, 1913, written by the Chief Immigration Officer in reply to one received by him from Cachalia, the Chairman of the British Indian Association, drawing attention to a recent judgement of the Transvaal Provincial Division, and enquiring "whether it will affect the practice hitherto followed of allowing more than one wife of Mohammedan residents of the Province to enter it." By the judgment referred to it was laid down that under the Transvaal law only one wife of an Asiatic was entitled to enter that Province. The reply of the Chief Immigration Officer is as follows:

"With regard to your letter of the 5th instant, I am instructed to inform you that the ruling of the learned Judge in the case of Adam Ismail versus the Registrar of Assiatics regarding the immigration of the wives of Indians has been noted, and to state that if any case involving hardship is brought to the notice of the Hon. the Minister it will receive consideration." This letter is decidedly non-committal, and certainly does not bear the construction placed upon it by Mr. Gandhi in his letter of the 24th August already quoted. It is unfortunate that he did not himself appear before the Commission to explain exactly what it is that he desires in this connection. From Sir Benjamin Robertson and others, however, we gathered that the general principle as recognised in the practice of the Immigration Department of "admitting one wife of an Indian immigrant so long as she is the only wife in South Africa, irrespective of the number of wives that he may have in India" is generally accepted by the Indian community, but that it was desired that an exception should be made in favour of a limited number of men of long residence in South Africa, who have now or have had more than one wife living with them in this country, so that these wives should be allowed to go backwards and forwards to India without question. Sir Benjamin Robertson stated that he understood that there were only from 40 to 50 of such persons in Natal, that a list of them could be made, and that it would be regarded as a graceful concession if this privilege could be extended to them. Mr Dick, the Chief Immigration Officer in Natal, was examined on the subject. He informed us that up to within the last seven to ten years the practice in Natal had been to admit more than one wife of a husband resident in that Province, but that of late the right of entry had been restricted to only one wife. Where more than one wife had been admitted by the Department, the right of such wives to go backwards and forwards to India was also recognised. He thought that there might be in Natal from 50 to 100 old residents to whom this privilege had been accorded, and if it was to be continued he thought that a register should be made of them, that a period of 12 months should be given them within which to register their names and those of their wives, and that the right should be limited to those so registered and to their minor children. The period of twelve months was suggested, inasmuch as that is the time for which an identification certificate which is given to Indians visiting their native land remains in force. Consequently there would be sufficient time for any of such persons who might be absent from the country when the register was opened, to make applition for registration after their return to South Africa.

The evidence goes to show that a similar state of affairs exists in the Cape Colony and Transvaal, though we have no accurate information as to the number of the persons concerned in these Provinces.

The concession asked for in respect of the limited number of Indians resident in South Africa is a comparatively small one, and should in our opinion be granted. With regard to plural wives who are at present lawfully living with their husbands in any of the Provinces, their case will seem to be met by Section 25 (2) of the Act, and we understand from Mr. Cousins, the Chief Immigration Officer of the Province of the Cape of Good Hope, that there would be no objection to granting them identification certificates if they desired to go to India for a visit with the intention of returning to this country. The only point that could arise as to them would be with reference to the period of their absence, inasmuch as indentification certificates lapse after the period of one year. If, however, the recommendation which is hereafter made that the period should be extended to three years is adopted, no difficulty need be anticipated regarding them. It may very well be, however, that there are women who have been in South Africa with their husbands, but who are at present in India, and in their case we are of opinion that they, with their minor children, should be allowed to join their husbands again at any time that may please them. It is chiefly with a view to these that we recommend that instructions should be issued to the Immigration Department to open registers in the various Provinces as suggested by the Chief Immigration Officer of Natal.

(c) The third point that arises in connection with the marriage question has reference to the celebration in South Africa of marriages between Indian men and women in conformity with the rites of their respective religions. In his letter to the Minister of the 2nd July, 1913, Mr Gandhi writes: "As to the marriage question, in view of the Searle judgment, it is absolutely necessary to legalise Indian marriages celebrated or to be celebrated within the Union. This can be done by amending the marriage laws of the different Provinces authorising the Government to appoint marriage officers for different denominations, whose certificates as to the celebration of marriage according to the rites of the respective religions of the parties would be recognised as proper proof of marriage."

It is necessary to point out here that as regards Mohammedans provision has been made in the Cape Colony by Act 16 of 1860, and in Natal by Act 19 of 1891, for the appointment by the Governor of marriage officers for the purpose of solemnising the marriage of persons professing the Jewish faith and of persons professing the Mohammedan faith. We are informed, however, that, though both in the Cape and in Natal, after the passing of the Acts, Mohammedan priests were appointed as marriage officers, the Mohammedans have not availed themselves of the privilege to any great extent, and that for years past no appointment of marriage officers has been made. The difficulty, according to the evidence before us, is that their religion recognises the right of a man to marry as many as four wives, and they consider that they should be false to their faith if they renounced that right. A marriage contracted in South Africa before a marriage officer would necessarily be monogamous and not polygamous, and they prefer not to enter into such unions, but to accept the position that in law their marriages are not valid rather than renounce the doctrines of their religion. This is the attitude which has always been taken up by the Malays in the Cape Colony, and, as far as we know, there has been no agitation on their part for an amendment of the law so as to recognise polygamous marriages as valid.

Whether the Indians who profess religions other than the Mohammedans hold the same views on this subject seems doubtful. A witness named Aiyar, who is the editor of the Indian newspaper called the "African Chronicle," and who gave evidence before us, stated that the Indians would be quite willing to contract marriages before a priest who had been appointed a marriage officer, with full knowledge of the fact that by so doing they were entering into a monogamous and not a polygamous marriage. Whether the witness speaks with authority and represents the views of the Indians generally, we unfortunately had no opportunity of ascertaining, as the Indian community in general, other than the Mohammedan section of it, persistently ignored the Commission. From the fact, however, that Mr. Gandhi, in the letter already quoted, made a request for the appointment of marriage officers for the different denominations, we gather that he is of the same opinion as Aiyar for he must have realized that a marriage celebrated before a marriage officer would necessarily be in accordance with the laws, of South Africa, or, in other words, would be monogamous. And that this was his view at the time when this letter was written is further indicated by the following passage in it: "With reference to the marriage amendment in the new Act, I understand that only monogamous marriages will be registered, and I appreciate that nothing more can be done in law at present, but an assurance is necessary to the effect that the present practice of admitting one wife of an Indian immigrant, so long as she is the only wife in South Africa, irrespective the number of wives he may have in India, will be continued." In that passage he apparently accepts the position that only monogamous marriages can be recognised in law as valid. Whether Mr. Gandhi is still of this opinion we have had no opportunity of ascertaining from himself.

As regards the indentured Indians, however, we do not anticipate that any difficulty will arise. They apparently are quite content to contract monogamous marriages. By the Indian Immigration Act, 25 of 1891 of Natal, it is provided by Section 66 "that no polygamous marriages which may hereafter be contracted by Indian immigrants in this Colony shall be considered valid as far as this Colony is concerned, and that no polygamous marriage shall be registered by the Protector of Indian Immigrants or by any Magistrate."

Provision is then made in Section 70 for the marriage of all Indian Immigrants, except those professing the Christian religion, before a Magistrate or before the Protector of Indian Immigrants. Such marriages are registered by these officers, and are necessarily monogamous.

According to the evidence of the Protector of Immigrants the indentured Indians have no scruples against contracting such unions. During last year, he informed us, that 1,075 marriages were solemnised before himself and different Magistrates in Natal. Many of these persons are first married according to the rites of their own religion, and subsequently go through the ceremony of marriage before the Protector or a Magistrate. In respect of these Indians, therefore, there appears to be no necessity for making further provision.

When, therefore, Mr. Gandhi applied for the appointment of marriage officers amongst Indian priests, he probably had in mind Indians other than indentured labourers, who might have scruples about contracting marriages before any such official. We are informed that amongst their priests in Natal and other Provinces there are educated men of good character, by whom marriage registers could be kept. If that be so we see no reason why the request for the appointment of marriage officers from amongst their number should not be granted. The Minister, indeed, in his reply to Mr. Gandhi's letter, entirely approved of the principles. In the letter of the Secretary of the Interior of the 19th August, 1913, he writes : " Fourthly, General Smuts is prepared, when some suitable occasion presents itself for dealing with the consolidation of the marriage laws of the Union, to make provision for the appointment of special marriage officers, for denominations other than Mohammedans, upon its being shown that there is a demand by the members of such denominations for such appointment, and that there are suitable persons in the different communities on whom the appointment could be conferred." We would recommend that the necessary legislation on the lines of the Cape Act 16 of 1860 should be passed as early as possible, so that those who are desirous of availing themselves of the privilege of contracting a valid marriage before their own priests, whether such persons be many or few, should have the opportunity of doing so without further delay.

(d) And that brings us to the fourth and last point which is raised on this question, and which presents greater difficulties than any of the preceding.

The point is not brought out very clearly by Mr. Gandhi in his letters, but it has been elucidated by the evidence given before us, especially by that of Sir Benjamin Robertson. It has been held in more than one case in the South African Courts, and notably in what is spoken of throughout the evidence as the Searle judgment, that where a man had married only one wife under a system which recognises polygamy, such a marriage is in law a polygamous and not a monogamous marriage. The result is that, as polygamous marriages are not recognised by our law, the wife in such a case has no legal status as a married woman, and the children are illegitimate. It appears from the evidence that the Searle judgment, which was delivered in 1910, caused intense feeling in India as casting a slur upon Indian women. That judgment, however, merely laid down the law in accordance with previous decisions of the Courts, both in England and in South Africa.

In the Cape Colony it was decided, so long ago as 1860, in the case of Bronn and Fritz Bronn's executors, that children born of a marriage celebrated according to Mohammedan rites in the Colony, were illegitmate, as no valid marriage had been contracted. It was in consequence of that decision that Act 16 of 1860 of the Cape of Good Hope was passed authorising the Governor to appoint marriage officers for the purpose of celebrating the marriages of persons professing the Mohammedan faith, but, as already explained, the Malays in the Cape Province have failed to take advantage of the provisions of that Act, preferring to accept the legal position that their marriages are invalid than to renounce the right which is recognised by their religion, of marrying more than one wife.

It is almost unnecessary to point out that on this subject our law is identical with that of England, and that the status in that country of a woman married under a system which recognises polygamy is no better than it is in South Africa. So far as we know, however, there has been no demand for a change in the laws of England with the view of validating such marriages. The probable explanation is that there is no large Indian population settled there, so that the question is not brought home to them as regards that country. But, however that may be, we are bound to consider the subject on its merits, without regard to the position in other parts of the world.

Now the suggestion, as we understand it, is that some provision should be made by legislation for legalising what are called de facto monogamous marriages, that is to say, the marriage of one man with one woman under a system which recognises the right of the husband to take one or more other wives. Such marriages are the rule amongst Indians of all denominations. It is the rare exception for an Indian to have more than one wife. It is more often amongst the Mohammedans that that number is exceeded, but even with them it is a matter of only occasional occurrence. And in all cases where in fact a man is married to only one woman we can see no objection to legislation validating such marriages from the date when they were contracted, on certain conditions.

The first condition is that such marriages should be registered before a marriage officer, whether he be a priest or a Resident Magistrate or an official specially appointed for that purpose. It is important in our opinion that a complete register of all marriages should be kept and that Indians, both men and women, who have been married according to the rites of their respective religions and who desire to avail themselves of the proposed law to validate such marriages should be required to appear before a marriage officer and apply for registration. It is not suggested that they should go through any ceremony but merely that they should satisfy the officer that their marriage is an ipso facto monogamous one, and should supply him with particulars of their names and ages as well as of the time and place of their respective marriages.

It is unfortunate that in India there is no system of registration of marriages, otherwise all that would have been necessary would have been to produce to the officer a copy of the register. As that, however, is impossible the necessary information for filling in the register must be obtained from the persons applying for registration. When the particulars have been entered in the register and when it has been signed by the officer the marriage should be taken to have been validated from the date when it was contracted. Provision should also be made for the filing of a duplicate original register in the office of the Minister of the Interior as is required in respect of all marriages celebrated in South Africa.

It has been suggested that a law should be passed simply validating all de facto monogamous marriages and not insisting upon registration. The objections to that course are obvious. In the first place registration of marriages is important from the point of view that it provides a simple means of proof of the fact that a marriage has been solemnised. In the absence of registration the only way in which a marriage can be established, when that fact is in issue, is the evidence of witnesses who were present at the ceremony or who can prove it in some other way. Serious difficulties might often arise in such cases, particularly if the marriage had been contracted many years ago, or if one of the parties chose to deny the fact.

In the second place it may very well be that there are many Asiatics who have no desire that their marriages should be validated except on their own terms and their wishes should be respected. All persons, therefore, should be entitled to elect whether they should come under the provisions of the proposed law or not, and an application for registration would be conclusive evidence of such election.

The second condition which in our opinion is essential to the validation of such marriages is that they should by registration become monogamous in law as well as in fact. All the legal consequences therefore which flow from marriage under our common law, should follow upon such registration, except in so far as it may be deemed necessary to make special provision by legislation. One result would be that thereafter the husband could not enter into any relations with another woman which would be recognised by law.

If, however, he desired to go through a form of marriage with another woman before a priest, who is not a marriage officer, according to the forms of his religion, we see no reason why such a proceeding should be prohibited by law. It clearly would not amount to bigamy, inasmuch as a marriage solemnised before such a person would not be valid by our law, and consequently the legal requisites which are necessary to constitute the crime of bigamy would be wanting. Inasmuch, therefore, as such marriages would not transgress the provisions of the criminal law, there is no necessity for interfering with those who desire to contract them. But it must at the same time be clearly understood that the relation so created is an irregular one, which is not recognised by law, which would not confer any rights upon the woman and her offspring, and of which the first wife, if she is so disposed could take advantage.

Nor do we recommend that any legislation should be passed to recognise and legitimise such an intercourse. To do so would be to ignore the principles underlying monogamous marriages and partially to recognise polygamy. In our opinion, however, there can be no convenient half-way house between monogamy and polygamy. If the latter is to be recognised at all in respect of Asiatics, we must be prepared to go the whole length and accept it to its utmost extent. We are not prepared, however, to recommend that legislation should be passed to legitimise polygamy. That would be so serious a departure from our principles and law that we do not think that it would be endorsed by public opinion. The position is that the Asiatics have of their own accord migrated to a country where monogamy is the rule, but nevertheless they have never been restricted in the exercise of their religious rights. The Malays have accepted the situation for many years past and there has been no demand on their part for a change in the law. In truth the agitation on this subject has arisen rather in India than in South Africa. It has already been pointed out that the indentured Indians have in practice accepted the principle of monogamy, and have no scruples about contracting such marriages. Moreover, Mr. Gandhi himself in the letter already quoted above, says that he understands that only monogamous marriages will be recognised, and that he appreciates that nothing else can be done in law at present; while in another letter of the 22nd September, 1913, he says: "With regard to polygamy, I have not asked for legal recognition." The demand indeed for recognition of polygamy comes only from the Mohammedan section of the Indian community. That claim is distinctly formulated in the evidence given before us by the three delegates of the Natal Indian Congress. When asked the question whether they claimed that polygamous marriages should be recognised, the answer was:—"That is the only thing we could ask." They also stated that they would object to registration of a de facto monogamous marriage if the husband was thereby to be limited to one wife, as by so doing he would be false to his religion.

They also object for the same reason to becoming subject to our laws with regard to divorce. According to the doctrines of their religion, there is no necessity to apply to a Court of Justice for the dissolution of a marriage. In fact, as regards divorce the husband is the judge in his own cause. If he is satisfied in his own mind that his wife is misconducting herself, he is entitled, after warning her three times, an interval of a month taking place between each warning, to go to the priest and write out before two witnesses what is called a "Divorce Paper" setting forth his reasons for divorcing his wife.

He then utters a special word signifying "I leave her alone," and thereupon the marriage is dissolved. The paper is handed to the wife as evidence, to enable her to contract another marriage. The priest himself, it will be noted, makes no investigation into the charge, and all that is necessary is that the husband himself should be satisfied of his wife's misconduct. On the other hand the wife has no similar right to divorce her husband. All she can do is to lay a complaint before the priest, who enquires into the matter and, if satisfied that the charge is true, he summons the husband before him and if he persists in his misconduct, the priest can bring pressure upon him, to divorce his wife.

This is the effect of the evidence given before us on this subject, and this is the law which we are asked to recognise. It needs only to be stated, however, to realise how open to abuse it is, and how impossible it would be for us to accede to the request of the Mohammedans that we should recommend legislation, recognising and legalising the Mohammedan law of marriage and divorce.

It is possible, however, that, if they clearly understand that there will be no prohibition against their going through the form of marriage with one or more women after their first marriage has been registered, and that by so doing they would not be incurring any penalties, they would be prepared to accept the suggestion already made as a solution of this question. What they apparently object to is the renunciation of the rights, which they enjoy under their religion, of marrying more than one wife. Such a registration as we have suggested, however, would not require any renunciation of their rights, nor would they be debarred by law from marrying other women in accordance with the rites of their own religion, though these women could not be recognised as having any legal status as married women.

The solution which we have suggested is approved of by Sir Benjamin Robertson in his evidence. Moreover, there is precedent for it in the Natal laws with regard to the indentured Indian immigrants.

By the Consolidation Act 25 of 1891, section 68, provision is made for the registration by the Protector of Immigrants of persons who are described as married in the Immigration Lists, and such registration has the effect of validating the marriage. There is a distinct prohibition, however, in section 66 against the registration of any polygamous marriage, though by an earlier Act, 12 of 1872, provision was made for the registration of such marriages, and section 68 provides for the validation of those which had been registered at the time of the passing of the Act of 1891. A later Act of 1907 departs from the principle laid down in section 66, "That no polygamous marriage shall be registered by the Protector of Indian Immigrants or by any Magistrate," for by section 6 it is encited that "The provisions of section 68 of the Indian Immigration Law 1891 shall, as regards Indian immigrants arriving in the country after the commencement of this Act, apply to all marriages shown in the certified copies of their marriage certificates notwithstanding that any such marriage may be a polygamous marriage." And in section 7 provision is made for the registration of polygamous marriages of Indian immigrants who had arrived in the Colony prior to the commencement of the Act. The section then sets forth, "That the registration of a marriage under this section shall have the same validity and effect as the registration of marriages under the 68th section of the said Law 1891." In this Act, therefore, it will be seen that there is a distinct recognition of polygamy in the case of a limited number of indentured Indian immigrants, but as immigration from India has now been stopped this Act is no longer of any effect. The principle embodied in it, however, is one of which we do not approve, and we do not feel justified in recommending that it should in any way be extended.

There is another precedent in South Africa for the validation by registration of marriages which were invalid by law in the regulations for the Native Territories made in 1879 under the provisions of the Transkeian Annexation Act of 1877, which regulations have the force of law in those territories. Regulation 31 provides that "Any marriage celebrated according to ordinary Kaffir or Fingo forms, provided that it is registered within three months from the date of such marriage in a book to be kept for that purpose by the Resident Magistrate of the district, shall be taken to be in all respects as valid and binding.........as a marriage contract under the marriage laws of the Cape Colony."

The recommendation which we have made on this subject, therefore, is one which not only commends itself to our sense of what is right and proper in the circumstances, but it is also supported by precedent, and we feel justified, therefore, in submitting it for favourable consideration.

THE £3 LICENSE.

This is a subject upon which it is evident that considerable misapprehension exists, and it is desirable, therefore, that we should set out as shortly as possible the history and incidence of this tax. It appears that the immigration of indentured labourers from India to Natal began in 1860, and continued until 1866, when it was put a stop to for a few years. During these years, however, the want of imported labour was severely felt by planters and others owing to the total inadequacy and unreliability of the local supply and in response to a strong demand on the part of the public the importation of indentured Indian labourers was resumed in 1874.

From that date it continued uninterruptedly until 1911 when a final end was put to it by the Government of India. The terms of the indentures under which labourers were imported were regulated by Acts of Parliament made from time to time until in 1891, an Act was passed, which is still in force, repealing all previous enactments and consolidating the law on the subject. It would appear that these Acts either before being passed, or subsequently were all submitted to and approved of by the Indian Government without whose co-operation indeed no importation of Indian labourers would have been possible. The term of indenture provided for by the Act of 1891 was for five years, at the end of which period the labourer was required to reside in the Colony for another five years before he was entitled to return to India. The idea apparently was that during the second period of five years he would re-indenture himself, but this expectation was not realized to any great extent, the majority of those who had completed their indentures preferring to settle in the country and to devote themselves to farming, market gardening, hawking or other pursuits. The result was that the number of what are known as Free Indians as distinguished from indentured labourers, increased from year to year, until at length it came to be felt that in view of the small European and the large native population in Natal the position was becoming serious, and that it was undesirable to continue to import labourers except on condition that they should return to India at the expiration of their indentures.

With this object in view a deputation consisting of Mr. Henry Binns, M.L.A. and Mr. Mason, the Protector of Indian Immigrants, left Natal in December, 1893, for the purpose of conferring with the Government of India on the subject. The delegate returned to Natal in April, 1894, and their report was published for general information under Government notice 144 of 1894, and is to be found in the report of the Protector of Immigrants for the year ending 30th June, 1894.

The main object of the deputation was to obtain the consent of the Government of India to an alteration in the terms of indentures so as to provide that the labourer at the expiration of his period of service should return to India. Interviews took place between the Natal delegates and Sir Edward Buck, Secretary to the Government of India, Revenue and Agricultural Department, who was the officer in charge of Immigration, and later with Sir Anthony McDonnell, a member of the Viceregal Council. The proposals of the delegates were submitted in writing to the Government of India and were carefully considered by them. The report states that no written reply was received from the Government of India, but that they were verbally informed in substance " that there would be no objection raised to a condition being inserted in the contract to the effect that coolies must return to India at the end of their last term of indenture, provided that failure to fulfil this condition shall not constitute a criminal offence."

In view of the condition insisted upon by the Government of India, it was deemed necessary by the delegates that some provision should be made to meet the case of labourers failing to comply with the covenant requiring them to return at the expiration of their indentures, and a residence tax was suggested by them. The report states that though the delegates had not received any formal communication on the subject, it was continually discussed in the course of their conversations, and it was not anticipated that any difficulty would arise with regard to it. The immediate result of the report was the passing of Act 17 of 1895, amending the Indians Immigration Act 1891 in certain important respects. Section 2 provides that " from and after the date when this Act shall take effect, the indentures to be signed by Indian immigrants as provided by Schedules B and C of the Indian Immigration Law, 1891, referred to in Section 11 of the said Law, shall contain a covenant by the Indian immigrants in words as follows :—

" And we further agree that, after the expiration or other determination of this contract, we shall either return to India or remain in Natal under indentures to be from time to time entered into: provided that each term of new indentured service shall be for two years, and provided further that the rate of wages for each year of indentured service after that provided by this contract shall be 16s. per month for the first year, 17s. per month for the second year, 18s. per month for the third year, 19s for the fourth year, and 20s. for the fifth and each succeeding year."

Section 3 reads as follows :—

" Every Indian desiring to return to India on the expiry of the first or any subsequent period of his service under any contract of indenture or re-indenture entered into under the Laws for the time being in force, shall be provided by the Indian Immigration Trust Board with a free passage to India."

Lastly by Section 6 it was provided that :—

" Every indentured Indian who shall have entered into the covenant set out in Section 2 of this Act and who shall fail, neglect, or refuse to return to India or to become re-indentured in Natal, shall take out year by year a pass or licence to remain in the Colony to be issued by the Magistrate of the district, and shall pay for such pass or licence a yearly sum of three pounds sterling, which may be recovered by summary process by any Clerk of the Peace or other Officer, appointed to get in such licence money."

The Act came into force in 1896, and was accepted by the Government of India, and thereafter all indentures entered into contained a covenant in terms of Section 2 as well as a clause in terms of Section 6.

The practice, according to the evidence, is that the contract is read over and explained to intending immigrants by the Magistrate of the district in which they are recruited, in whose presence the indentures are signed, and by whom they are witnessed, and the coolies are then taken to Madras or Calcutta, the two ports of embarkation for Natal, where they are kept in depôts pending their departure. Here the contracts are again explained to them by the agent of the Natal Immigration Trust Board, and they are constantly visited by the Protector of Immigrants of the Government of India, whose business it is to see that they understand the terms under which they are emigrating. It will be seen, therefore, that they leave India with full notice of the fact that they are bound at the expiration of their service either to return to India or to re-indenture and that, in default of so doing, they become liable to take out an annual licence to remain in the Colony for which the sum of £3 has to be paid.

It has been suggested, however, by several of the witnesses that, notwithstanding the precautions which are taken to explain the contract to the coolies, they as a rule either do not understand or at any rate do not realise the effect of this term of their service. That is the view of Sir Benjamin Robertson who, while a magistrate, has himself had considerable experience in these matters. He says: " I should say that in a great many cases they do not understand. They have no comprehension of what it means. They won't try to understand. They have no idea but to get away from India owing to some domestic or caste trouble or something of the sort." Other witnesses are of a similar opinion, but on the other hand there is a great deal of evidence to the contrary. It is clear that no satisfactory conclusion could be arrived at on this subject without the fullest enquiry amongst the labourers themselves, and that, of course, was rendered impossible by the attitude taken up by them under Mr. Gandhi's advice. We do not think, however, that upon the evidence as it stands we are justified in finding as a fact that the indentured labourers in general did not understand this term of their contract, though, on the other hand, it is impossible to say that the question is free from doubt. One thing, however, is clear, and that is that all that could be done by the Government of Natal was done to explain the real position to them, and that it was upon the express understanding already set forth that they were introduced into the Colony. It is equally clear that, whatever may be said about the coolies themselves, the Government of India, which may be regarded as standing in the position of guardians to their ignorant subjects, accepted and acquiesced in the provisions of Act 17 of 1895, which are embodied in the indentures, and that they, at any rate were under no misconception as to the conditions under which the coolies were admitted into Natal. These are facts which it is well to bear in mind when the retention of the £ 3 tax is being violently denounced in India.

Passing on, we find that Act 17 of 1895 came into operation in August 1896, though it was not till five years thereafter, that is to say, at the expiration of the first indentures entered into under the Act, that it began to take effect. It would appear, however, that the object aimed at by the Act of compelling the immigrants to return to India was not attained, for only two years subsequently, viz., in 1903, a second deputation left Natal to interview the Government of India on the subject. The proposal made by this deputation was that the indentures should in future be made to terminate in India instead of in Natal.

The Government of India was prepared on certain conditions to agree that it should be a term of the indenture that " after the expiration of the contract the immigrant should either return to India or remain in Natal under indentures to be from time to time entered into, provided that each term of indentured service shall be for not more than two years, and provided further that after ten years of indentured service the immigrant must, if so required, return to India at the expense of the Trust Board. Should he be permitted to indenture for a further period or to remain in the Colony without indenture for more than three months after the expiry of his last indenture, he shall be entitled to settle in the Colony free from all liability to any special tax or to further indenture............". It was found impossible, however, to arrive at any settlement in the matter, and the negotiations, therefore, came to an end without any result.

It is difficult indeed, to understand how the policy of repatriating the Indians at the end of their indentures could have been carried out effectively in view of the fact that the Government of India had insisted that failure on the part of an immigrant to comply with the terms of his contract should not be treated as a criminal offence. It was only by the legislature giving the Executive powers to compulsorily deport all labourers who, at the expiration of their indentures, refused to return to India, that effect could possibly have been given to this policy, and that was rendered impossible by the attitude taken up by the Government of India. And it was for this very reason that in the Act of 1895 provision was made for the taking out of a licence of £3, which it was hoped would have the effect of inducing them to return to India so as to escape this heavy annual payment.

And here we may pause for a moment to point out that the word " licence ' is singularly inappropriate in connection with this annual payment. As a rule, where a statute provides for the taking out of a licence to do a particular thing, it follows as a matter of course that no person is entitled to do that thing unless he has obtained the licence, and penalties are provided to ensure his doing so. This is the case of a licence to carry on a trade or business, no one can carry on that trade who has not procured a licence, and if he does, he renders himself liable to certain penalties. Under Act 17 of 1895, however, it is not only the ex-indentured Indian who has taken out the licence who is entitled to remain in the country, but those equally who have not obtained licences, have the right to remain for the simple reason that they cannot be deported.

Nor is there any sanction to the provision on the way of a penalty upon those who fail to take out licences. It is true that section 6 provides that the amount of £3 may be recovered by summary process; but this is not a penalty, but merely a provision prescribing the procedure to be adopted for recovering the amount, and it is in fact a recognition of the right of the defaulter to remain in the country. In truth, the person who takes out the licence required by the Act is in a worse rather than in a better position than he who fails to do so. For the former is bound to pay £3 before he can obtain his licence to remain in the country, while the latter, although he is equally entitled to remain may, and very often does, evade the payment.

The fact of the matter is that though the section speaks of a licence, the effect of it really is to impose a £3 tax upon residence, which is the suggestion which was made to the Government of India by the Natal delegates who visited that country.

At the same time the word "Tax" is also somewhat out of place, for the object is not to raise revenue, but to bring pressure to bear upon the indentured Indians to induce them to return to India at the expiration of their indentures; so that the smaller the amount that is collected the more effectively is the object of the Act attained. The charge in truth is a penalty upon residence. It is as if the Government of Natal had said to the labourers: "We do not wish you to settle in the country, but we cannot prevent your doing so; if you do, however, we shall penalise you by compelling you to pay annually the sum of £3 which, though not actually prohibitive, is so heavy that we anticipate that it will have the effect of compelling you to return to India at the end of your first or subsequent indentures." That being the position it is difficult to find a word which exactly meets the case, but on the whole the word "tax" is the most convenient and appropriate, and we propose, therefore, to use it in discussing this annual charge.

Passing on, then, from this digression, and continuing with the history of the subject, we find that in 1903, the same year as the second deputation from Natal visited India, an Act was passed to amend Act 17 of 1895, by which it was provided that the children of Indian immigrants, who came under the provisions of section 2 of Act 17 of 1895, on attaining the age of majority, which is 16 in the case of boys, and 13 in the case of girls were, with certain exceptions, compelled either:—

(a) To go to India; or

(b) To remain in Natal under indentures; or

(c) To take out year by year in terms of section 6 of Act 17 of 1895 a pass or licence to remain in this Colony.

This, certainly, was a very drastic legislation. In the case of the indentured labourer himself, there is much force in the contention that he expressly agreed to pay the tax before he was allowed to settle in the country, and that he is bound by his agreement; but this argument cannot be heard in regard to their children. The Act, however, was acquiesced in by the Government of India, which, having accepted the legislation of 1895, apparently considered that it could not very well object to the extension of the principle.

Legislation, however, on this subject did not stop here. It was found that, in spite of this heavy tax upon residence, large numbers of the indentured labourers at the expiration of their indentures, instead of returning to India in order to escape the annual payments, preferred to remain in the country. Great difficulty, however, was experienced in collecting the tax. Accordingly, in 1905 an Act was passed prohibiting any person under certain penalties "from employing any Indian immigrant, who was liable to take out a licence to remain in the Colony, unless such Indian shall first produce to him such pass or licence, nor shall he retain such Indian as an employee in any year thereafter unless such pass or licence shall have been taken out before the 15th July in each year."

There are other provisions to the effect that "No person shall have the right at law to enforce any contract of service made in disregard to this law to charge any Indian so employed with any offence under any Act relating to Masters or Servants," and further "No hawkers' licence to trade in the Province of Zululand shall be granted to any Indian, who is required to take out a pass to remain in the country, unless the pass for the current year is produced to the licensing officer." The evidence of the Protector of Immigrants, however, is that this Act has had very little effect and is practically a dead letter.

The legislation on the subject closes with an Act passed in 1910, which provided in the first place that "It shall be in the discretion of a Resident Magistrate to release any Indian woman from payment of licence money upon the ground of ill-health, old age or for other just cause," and in the second place that "The payment of arrears of licence money shall be suspended during the period of re-indenture or contract of service for a term of not less than two years, and that in the event of a return to India at the expiration of such contract or indenture, payment of arrears shall be waived." The effect of the first part of this Act has been that in practice the authorities have virtually ceased to collect the tax from women.

Having now reviewed the whole of the legislation on this subject, we proceed to discuss the claim made on behalf of the Indians for a remission of this tax, and in the first place we may observe that it is the unanimous opinion of all the witnesses, who were questioned on the subject, that as far as women are concerned they should be relieved from the payment of this charge. It would appear indeed from the speeches of the Attorney General of Natal, who piloted the Act of 1895 through the Legislature, that it was never intended to apply to women but only to men although unfortunately the language used was wide enough to include both males and females. In practice, moreover, the tax has not been collected from them for some time past as has been already pointed out, and during the last Session of Parliament, a Bill was introduced by the Government remitting this annual charge in the case of women. It is true that this Bill did not become law, but that was entirely due to the fact that through want of time it had to be withdrawn with a number of other Bills at the close of the Session. We have no reason to suppose that there has been any change in the policy of the Government as regards the desirability of exempting women from the annual charge, and we may assume, therefore, that apart altogether from any recommendations of this Commission effect would have been given to that policy during the present Session of Parliament.

That leaves for consideration the question whether the tax should be retained in respect of men. A certain number of these fall under the provisions of Act 2 of 1903, that is to say they are the sons of indentured labourers who were introduced under Act 17 of 1895. As regard these it is difficult to justify the legislation embodied in the Act of 1903, and we recommend that as far as they are concerned the tax should be abolished.

The case for the retention of the tax in respect of the rest is no doubt a much stronger one. These are men who were introduced on the express terms that they should at the expiry of their last indenture leave the country and that if they failed to do so, they should take out an annual licence of £3 entitling them to remain. Moreover, as has already been pointed out, the Government of India acquiesced in this legislation. These are important facts and might very well be regarded as a good answer to any demand that is made either by the labourers themselves or by the Government of India for the abolition of the tax. That, however, by no means concludes the matter. The question cannot be disposed of on this narrow technical ground; we are bound to regard it from a broader point of view and to consider whether in the general interests of the Union the time has arrived for a remission of this tax.

Now it is to be observed in the first place that this is not a general charge upon Indians like the hut tax upon natives. The explanation of this is to be found in the history of the Act which has been given above. But the fact remains that the charge falls upon only a comparatively small section of the Indian community. Eliminating women from the calculation, we find that out of a total of 54,000 men who have come into Natal under indentures since Act 17 of 1895 came into force only 10,800 are liable to the tax. Moreover in addition to the former there are several thousands of men who have immigrated to Natal otherwise than under indentures. In these are included the majority of the trading class, many of whom are men of substance, but who are entirely exempt from the payment of any special tax. The £3 licence in truth has to be taken out as a rule by the Indians who are least able to afford it.

The next observation to be made is that out of the 10,800 males who are liable to pay the tax, it is actually collected from less than a third of that number and the percentage of those who pay it appears to have been steadily falling during the last few years In 1911, for the ten months ending March 31st 1911, the amount collected was £20,268; for the financial year 1912 it fell to £14,241; and in 1913 only £10,273 was realised, and in these sums are included the amounts collected under the Act of 1903. This is a highly unsatisfactory state of affairs. The explanation would appear to be that not only has there been some laxness in enforcing payment but that in addition considerable difficulty is experienced in collecting the licence money. In the case of the coolie, who is in regular employment, e.g., men engaged upon the Railway and industrial works, it is a simple enough matter, inasmuch as the employer as a rule, pays the charge and deducts the amount from their wages. These, however, are the exceptions and not the rule. Many of those, indeed, who are liable to the charge are in fact unable to pay it. Civil proceedings have then to be taken against them, and if the Resident Magistrate is satisfied that the defaulters have not sufficient means to pay the full amount, an order is made upon them to liquidate the debt in instalments. Failure to pay an instalment probably leads to further proceedings for contempt of Court in accordance with the provisions of the Resident Magistrates Court Act, and not infrequently they end in committals to prison with hard labour, a result which is scarcely consistent with the undertaking given to the Government of India that failure to return to India should not subject the defaulters to criminal penalties.

Many others again, in order to evade payment move about from place to place leaving a district as soon as they find that their identity is known to the police and so tend to degenerate into loafers and vagrants, whilst the sum total of their arrears grows from year to year. Attention has already been drawn to the legislation which was devised for the purpose of enforcing the payment of the tax, but as was pointed out, it has been of little effect.

Not only, therefore, is the tax most unequal in its incidence, but it is also most uncertain in its operation, and it is easy to understand that these facts cause a considerable amount of feeling on the part of those by whom it is actually paid. It must be very galling to the hard-working Indian in regular employment or to the owner of a piece of land on which he makes a precarious living, to find that not only is the well-to-do merchant free from any special charge, but that the large majority of the coolies, who, like himself, undertook to take out an annual licence, fail to do so and successfully evade the payment of the tax. It is difficult indeed to conceive of anything more demoralising or more likely to lead to attempts at evasion on their part. Is it surprising that the effect often is to induce men to wander about from district to district and so to degenerate into loafers, thus creating the very state of affairs which some of the witnesses fear will take place if the tax is abolished? The result, consequently, is to put a premium on vagrancy and to penalise the industrious labourer. Not only, therefore, is the tax, as already pointed out, objectionable in principle as being a penalty upon residence, but its incidence is such that it causes considerable irritation and discontent. We have to realise the facts that the indentured Indians have been brought here to serve our own needs, that for better or for worse the majority of them have come to stay, and that in the interests of good government it is desirable to remove as far as possible any causes of irritation.

No doubt the considerations to which attention has been drawn may be counterbalanced by others, if it could be shown that any really good or useful purpose were served by the retention of the tax. That the amount realised by it is negligible from the point of view of revenue, is clear, and it is common cause amongst those who advocate its retention as well as amongst those who are in favour of its abolition, that, if the revenue alone had to be considered, it might very well be allowed to lapse. The main contention, indeed, urged by those who are opposed to its remission is that the charge was imposed not for revenue purposes but on the ground of policy for a specific object, viz., to induce indentured Indians to return to India at the expiration of their contracts or to re-indenture for a further period, and that so long as it affects the object there is no justification for withdrawing it.

Two questions here arise for consideration, (1) Whether in fact the tax does effect the purpose for which it was imposed, and (2) whether, if it does, such purpose is a desirable one. As to the first of these questions, there is considerable conflict of evidence. Many of the witnesses, amongst whom are some of the largest employers of Indian labour in Natal, and whose testimony impressed us very favourably, hold a very strong opinion that whatever may have been the case some years ago the tax at present has no appreciable effect in inducing the ex-indentured Indians to return to their native country. And here it is well to draw attention to two very important factors which have materially changed the whole position during the last few years. The first of these is that in 1911 the Government of India finally put an end to the importation of indentured labourers into Natal, and the second is that arising mainly out of the fact that wages of re-indentured Indians have risen very considerably, and are practically double what they were a few years ago. Before 1911 the general wage for a coolie entering upon a second indenture was from 16*s*. a month for the first year and rising to 20*s*. a month for the fifth year, whereas now they can readily earn from 30*s*. to £2 per month, and frequently more than that. One effect of the stoppage of further immigration is that it is impossible in the future for a labourer who has returned to India again to immigrate to Natal, as they frequently had done previously, and this to some extent checks the number of those who avail themselves of free passages to their native land.

Probably also the rise in wages acts in the same direction, as the inducement to remain in this country is considerably greater. Another factor which seems to us to have a considerable influence in keeping the indentured Indians in the country is the treatment they receive at the hands of the employers. No complaints were made on this subject but on the contrary the evidence shows that they are well and considerately treated on the estates and other works where they are employed. But whatever the reasons may be there is no doubt very strong evidence in favour of the view that the tax itself at present has very little effect in bringing pressure upon them to return.

On the other hand, however, there are many witnesses who hold a different opinion, and undoubtedly the figures put in by the Protector of Immigrants show a considerable increase in the number of those who returned since 1901 when the tax first became operative. This must, however, be taken in connection with the fact, that during the last three years there has been a large falling-off, which in great measure is accounted for by the fact that the number of re-indentures has risen in the most remarkable manner. It is very difficult indeed to draw satisfactory inferences from the figures in the abstract, as special circumstances must clearly have operated to cause a rise or fall at certain periods.

Thus according to the figures supplied by the Protector and taking the percentage of the total number of indentures which expired in any year, we find that in 1902 the percentage of those who returned to India was 10 per cent.; in 1906 it was 18 per cent.; in 1908 it rose to 34 per cent.; in 1911 it sunk to 14 per cent.; and in 1912 it fell as low as 7 per cent. Taking the actual numbers we find that while in 1902 there were 329 male coolies returning to India, in 1908 the number was 2,117, while in 1912 it fell to 701 and in 1913 to 776. Again the percentage of those who re-indentured was 19 per cent. of the total number of indentures which came to an end in 1902; in 1904 it was only 8 per cent.; in 1906 it rose to 47 per cent.; in 1910 it rose rapidly to 70 per cent., and in 1912 it reached the high water mark of 95 per cent., falling again in 1913 to 81 per cent. These figures are eloquent testimony to the good relations which exist between the coolies and their employers, to which reference has already been made.

The variations in the percentage, it will be seen, are very remarkable and can only be accounted for by special circumstances. The great increase of re-indentures during the last three years seems undoubtedly to be mainly due to the great rise in wages caused by the stoppage of further immigration in 1911 and also accounts for the corresponding fall in the number of those who returned to India. If we are to draw any inferences from the figures, it would appear that up to a few years ago the tax had a considerable effect in inducing labourers to return to India, but that during the last few years it has in great measure ceased to have that effect.

Some rather striking evidence on the subject, however, was given by Dr. Keess, who is the Surgeon Superintendent of Indian immigrants, and who during the last ten years has accompanied the coolies in their voyages to and from India.

He informed us that he had been in the habit of questioning coolies returning to India, and that the large majority of them have told him that they have left Natal on account of the tax. It is rather significant, however, that we ourselves visited a ship at the quay in Durban, which was about to leave with a large number of coolies to their native land, and that, though we conversed with a considerable number of them, not a single one mentioned the tax as his reason for leaving Natal. This fact is somewhat difficult to reconcile with Dr. Keess' evidence, with which we were not very favourably impressed. It is very difficult indeed to come to any very decided conclusion on this subject, but on the whole we are not satisfied that the tax at present has any decided effect in inducing the coolies to return to India.

It is contended, however, that the Act 18 of 1895 had an alternative purpose, viz., to induce them to re-indenture, the main object being to prevent their settling in the country as free men, and that the tax has been instrumental in securing that end. Now, while there is no doubt that there is considerable evidence in support of the allegation that the tax has had in the past an appreciable effect on re-indentures, it is open to question whether that is so at the present time. The remarkable increase in the percentage of indentures during the last three years is due, not to the tax, which has remained stationary, but mainly to the sharp rise in wages, due to the stoppage in 1911 of further immigration. That is a strong incentive to re-indenturing, the labourer being content to renew his contract, so long as he can earn good wages. Moreover, the indentured labourer has other privileges. He is entitled at the expiry of his service to a free passage to India, and that is a right which is highly valued. It is a mistake to imagine that the coolie, who has once had experience of this country, has no desire to return to his native land. On the contrary, great numbers of them never entirely abandon the intention of eventually returning to India, and before the tax was imposed there was a constant stream of coolies going back every year. The fact, therefore, that so long as he remains indentured he is entitled to a free passage, is a strong inducement to him to re-indenture.

He has a further privilege in that under section 9 of Law 25 of 1891 "He is not liable to any action or proceeding at law for the recovery of any debt or liability contracted or incurred by him during the terms of his indenture, nor can he be imprisoned for debt, and no creditor can attach his wages or levy upon his goods during the continuance of his indenture." It will be seen, therefore, that there are various inducements at present to a labourer to re-indenture at the expiration of his contract. So long then as wages remain at their present high level, and the evidence is that they are more likely to rise than to fall, we are not disposed to think that the tax in itself is required, or that it exercises any marked effect in the way of bringing pressure to bear upon them to re-indenture.

If these conclusions are sound, then it would appear that this annual charge of £3 has failed to effect the object for which it was imposed, a fact which was practically admitted by the Government of Natal when it sent a deputation to India in 1903, and if that be so, in view of the objections to it which have been already pointed out, it is difficult to see that any good purpose is being served by retaining it on the Statute Book.

If, however, we are wrong in thinking that the Act is not succeeding in attaining its object, the question would still remain whether it is judicious to retain it. There is a considerable amount of evidence to the effect that the coolie labourer can ill be spared in Natal. The position is entirely changed since 1911. Before that time there was an inexhaustible reservoir from which Indians might be drawn, so that it mattered not how many returned to their native land, as their places could be easily supplied. Now that reservoir has been closed, so that every labourer leaving Natal for India diminishes the available labour supply of the Province.

Now, it is not open to question that employers of labour in Natal have been to a very great extent dependent upon the indentured coolies. We have obtained a return from the Secretary of the Immigration Board, showing the number of them employed in various industries in that Province, and these figures are very significant. They are as follows :—

Coal Companies	3,068
Tea and Sugar Companies	11,745
Public bodies, including Railways	2,713
Farmers	2,324
Various	2,476

In 1909, moreover, a commission was appointed in Natal to enquire into the question of Indian immigration, and in that report the following passage occurs:—

> "Absolutely conclusive evidence has been put before the Commission that several industries owe their existence and present conditions to indentured Indian labour, and that if the importation of such labour were abolished under present conditions the industries would decline and in some cases be abandoned entirely. There are sugar, tea and wattle-growing, farming, coal-mining and certain other industries, in which a considerable amount of unskilled labour is required."

If this conclusion is correct it is easy to understand that anything like a general repatriation of the whole of the 22,000 labourers in Natal at present under indenture at the expiration of their contracts would be a serious matter, and that, even if a considerable number of them left the country, the loss would be appreciably felt by the employers of labour. The majority of the witnesses, indeed, who were questioned on the subject were perfectly candid in expressing their opinion that the coolies were necessary to the industries of the Province, and in stating that they had no desire therefore to see them leave the country.

Other witnesses, however, while admitting that their presence was most desirable, so long as they remained under indenture, were apprehensive that if the tax were removed, they would become free Indians, and that their labour would then be lost. We have already expressed the view that the inducements to re-indenture are at present so great that the tax itself has very little further effect, but even if we are wrong in this, we do not share the fears of those who anticipate that the free Indians will cease to be available as labourers. It was objected that the majority of them would prefer to become independent and would devote themselves to farming, market-gardening, hawking, etc., while many of them would degenerate into loafers and vagrants.

But here again the rise in wages is an important factor in the situation. At the present wage there is not much inducement to a labourer to settle on the land where, at the best, he would be able to make only a precarious living, and as far as hawking is concerned, there is a very limited opening in that direction.

There is strong evidence, indeed, to the effect that, as long as wages remain at the present high level, the Indian who has been released from his indenture will prefer to continue as a labourer, and that the good employer who pays his men well and treats them well will have no difficulty in securing coolie labour.

No doubt, on this point, as on every other raised on this subject, there is a great conflict of opinion, but there seems to be much to be said for that view.

Many employers of labour, no doubt prefer indentured labour to free as being more constant and not so liable to fluctuation. Others, again, like Mr. Saunders, who is one of the largest employers of Indian labour in Natal, prefer free men, as he considers they are better workers and that you have more control over them; prima facie, one would have thought that the free Indian would be more likely to devote himself to his work than the man who was labouring under enforced conditions, but the evidence on the point is very conflicting.

We do not, however, on principle, think that it is desirable to bring any compulsion to bear upon coolies to re-indenture indefinitely. The indenture system is a very artificial one and is, we think, open to many objections as a permanent or indefinite arrangement. If a labourer at the expiration of his first service and after five years' experience of the system, chooses voluntarily to enter into further terms of service on similar conditions there is no reason why he should not do so. But he should, in our opinion, be left free to decide for him self, and we do not, approve of anything in the way of compulsion for the purpose of securing that end. The primary object of the tax was undoubtedly to compel the coolies to return to India, and since that has generally failed, the desire on the part of some employers is to retain the tax as a lever to compel the immigrants to re-indenture so long as they remain in South Africa. Though we do not ourselves think that it has at present any appreciable effect in that direction, in so for as it may have, we are not dsiposed to look upon it with favour.

As regards the fear, which has been expressed, that many of the free Indians will become vagrants, we do not share in that apprehension. The Indian is by nature an industrious worker, and it is difficult to believe that he will prefer to pick up a precarious living as a loafer than to earn good wages as a labourer. There will, of course, be exceptions amongst them, as there are amongst all classes and conditions, but on the whole, we think that the tax, as already pointed out, has a more decided effect in the way of prompting vagrancy than release from indenture is likely to have.

It will be seen, therefore, that upon every phase of this question there are most conflicting opinions, which it is quite impossible to reconcile. The general conclusion, however, at which we have arrived, is that no good or useful purpose is at present served by this tax, and that consequently a good case has been made for its repeal. It has been impressed upon us, however, that, apart altogether from the intrinsic merits of the question, there are extraneous considerations which make it undesirable that the tax should be remitted at the present time.

It is urged in the first place that the time is inopportune, inasmuch as coming immediately after the strike, it will give the Indians the impression that the Government has yielded to pressure, and that it will, therefore, be an encouragement to them in future to resort to similar means for securing their ends. This, however, is not an argument that appeals to us. If it is right and proper that the tax should be remitted we do not think the Legislature should be deterred by such considerations from doing what it conceives to be right. Moreover, in all the circumstances of the case, and specially in view of the firm attitude taken up by the Government during the strike, we do not think that Indians will misconceive the situation, or believe that there has been any concession to pressure.

In the second place it has been urged upon us that a repeal of the tax will have a very serious effect upon the natives throughout South Africa. It is upon this ground that quite a number of the witnesses, who on the merits of the questions are in favour of its repeal, object to any legislation to that effect They fear that such legislation will lead to an agitation on the part of the natives for the remission of the Hut Tax, and that, if that is refused, that it will cause grave discontent and unrest, which will probably culminate in serious disturbances.

This is a matter which seems to us to fall outside of the scope of our enquiry. It is impossible for us at present to undertake such an investigation as would be necessary in order to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion in the question. It is one essentially for the consideration for the Government, which has sources of information which are not at our disposal. Without, therefore, expressing any opinion on the subject we have thought it desirable to refer to it in view of the importance attached to it by several of the witnesses who gave evidence before us.

One last question remains, and that is, if legislation is introduced for the purpose of abolishing this tax, what form should it take? The Bill which was introduced into Parliament last Session for the purpose of remitting the tax in the case of women, provided that "Anything to the contrary notwithstanding in Act 17 of 1895 of Natal or in any other law, a female shall be exempt from the payment of the license money prescribed in that Act, but shall not thereby be exempt from the necessity of obtaining the pass or license therein prescribed, and shall in all other respects continue to be subject to the provisions of the said Act and of every law of Natal relating to Indian Immigration." It has, however, been already pointed out that there is no sanction in Act 17 of 1895 in regard to this pass or license and, consequently, that there is no means compelling ex-indentured coolies to take out licenses. The law, therefore, can be disobeyed with impunity, and in view of that fact it is difficult to see what object is attained by insisting upon a license being taken out. It has been suggested that there are administrative reasons requiring this to be done, but what they are we do not know.

Personally, we think the best course would be simply to repeal section 6 of Act 17 of 1895 so as to leave the Indians, who fall under the provisions of that Act in the same position as those who were indentured under the Indian Immigration Act 1891.

ADMINISTRATION OF EXISTING LAWS.

We have now reached the fifth and last of the alleged grievances which have been formulated by Mr. Gandhi in his letter to the Minister of the 21st January, 1914, in which he requires "an assurance that the existing laws specially affecting Indians will be administered justly and with due regard to vested rights." The representations which have been made to us on this subject deal mainly with the Immigration and Licensing Acts, and as already stated, we propose to confine ourselves to these subjects.

THE IMMIGRATION ACT.

The complaints against the administrative methods of the Immigration Department were fairly numerous, chiefly in the Cape Colony. In respect of some of them we were not satisfied that they have been established and we do not propose to make any reference to such. There are others, however, in regard to which we are of opinion that grievances do exist and we propose to deal with these as shortly as possible.

Several representations have been made to us regarding the issue of identification certificates. These are certificates which are granted under section 25 (2) of the Act which provides that: "The Minister may also in his discretion authorise the issue of a certificate of identity to any person who is lawfully resident in the Union and who, desiring to proceed thereout with the intention of returning thereto, is for any reason apprehensive that he will be unable to prove on his return that he is not a prohibited immigrant." Regulations have been made under the preceding section regulating the issue of these certificates, prescribing the means of identification of the applicant, and setting out their form and the conditions attaching to them. The value of the certificate is that it is conclusive evidence of the right of the holder to enter the country, so that the mere production of it on proof of his identity entitles him to admission.

One of the conditions, however, is that the certificate shall be of force for one year only, and that after the expiry of that period the protection afforded by the certificate shall be deemed to have lapsed. The result is that if the holder remains away for more than 12 months the certificate is of no avail and the onus lies upon him of establishing to the satisfaction of the Immigration Officer that he is not a prohibited immigrant, a proceeding which may involve considerable delay, even if it should be ultimately successful.

Representations have been made to us that the condition limiting the certificate to one year is unreasonable; that cases of hardship have occurred where through accident or otherwise the period has been exceeded by only a few days; and it is suggested that the certificate should be unlimited in point of time. We feel, however, that a certificate in that form could scarcely have been contemplated by the Legislature under section 25, sub-section 2 of the Act, which has in view persons leaving the country for a visit and intending to return to it. At the same time we see no reason why the time should be limited to one year. An extension of the period to a term of three years would, we think, practically meet the wishes of the Indian community. Mr Cousins informs us that the original idea was that the certificate should be in force for three years, and he sees no objection to such an extension.

We, therefore, recommend that the regulations should be amended so as to provide that the certificate should remain in force for three years.

(2) On this subject complaints were further made of unreasonable delays in the Cape Town office of the Immigration Department in issuing these certificates. These complaints were no doubt somewhat exaggerated, but at the same time it seems to us that there is some substance in them.

Persons requiring these certificates have to fill in a printed form of application for the purpose of supplying information to the Department on a number of subjects. There are 19 particulars in all in the printed form, to which answers have to be given. If the form is filled in correctly, it seems clear from the details supplied to us by Mr. Cousins that no complaint can properly be made of undue delay in issuing a certificate. Thus, of 270 applications sent in during the six months ending 31st January last, 201 were granted within one day of the application being presented, 43 were granted within a week, and 26 within longer intervals, the longest being thirty days. In cases where considerable delay has occurred, it was due to failure on the part of the applicant to comply promptly with the requirements of the Department as regards proof of his claim that he was lawfully resident.

And here it is well to draw attention to a fact which constantly confronts us in this Enquiry, and that is that the Indian community itself is in great measure responsible for the stringency of the investigations which are made into applications of all kinds by the officials of the Immigration Department. That has been rendered absolutely necessary by the numerous attempts at fraud and impersonation which are constantly being made by Asiatics. We have been supplied with very startling information on this subject and the fact cannot be gainsaid. The result is that the greatest precautions have to be taken by the officials with the inevitable result that the innocent frequently have to suffer with the guilty, and that cases of hardship must occasionally occur.

To return, however, to the subject immediately under consideration, while we are not satisfied that undue delay takes place in issuing certificates in cases where the application forms are correctly filled in, we are disposed to think that delay is sometimes caused by the extreme strictness of the scrutiny to which these applications are subjected by the Officers of the Department. Very small errors in form as well as in substance in the filling in of the applications frequently lead to their rejection, with the result that a second application, and in some cases even a third has to be sent in. This necessarily leads to delay as well as to irritation, which should be avoided if possible.

The suggestion which we have to make on this subject, however, involves other representations which have been brought before us, and with which it is desirable to deal before setting forth our recommendations.

(3) It is complained that there is no official interpreter attached to the office of the Immigration Department in Cape Town or any person in it who understands the Indian languages. Consequently, the practice is in all matters involving a knowledge of these languages to engage the services of one of several Indian residents in Cape Town, all of whom are Immigration agents, that is to say, persons whose occupation it is to transact business with the Department on behalf of their clients. Strong objection was taken to the employment of these Immigration agents as interpreters.

Complaints are made against them that they are unreliable and that they charge most extortionate fees. Similar complaints were made to a Select Committee of the Legislative Council that sat in 1907, 1908 and 1909, to enquire into the working of the Immigration Department. Allegations were made that through the instrumentality of these Immigration agents, Asiatics were illegally admitted into the country and charges of bribery and fraud were brought against the officials of the Department. These matters were referred to the Resident Magistrate for investigation, and after an exhaustive enquiry he came to the conclusion that the allegations laid against the officials had failed, but that "exorbitant charges have been made by persons (outside the public service) employed by or on behalf of immigrants to transact business with the Department." Amongst the persons against whom these accusations were made are three or four of these who are now engaged by the Department as interpreters, but there is no express finding by the Magistrate either inculpating or exculpating any of them by name. There is no doubt very strong feeling on the part of those who gave evidence before us, against these persons, but it has been quite impossible for us to conduct an investigation into these matters.

On principle, however, we think it is undesirable for the Department to employ as interpreters, persons who carry on business as Immigration agents. In our opinion an interpreter should be attached to the staff, who should be a whole-time officer. It is suggested that considerable expense would be incurred by such an appointment, and that his duties as interpreter would occupy only a very small portion of his time. As regards the former objection, however, we do not think that it should stand in the way of a reform which we consider most desirable, and with regard to the latter, there is no reason why the official should not be employed upon other duties in the office.

In the Durban office there is an Indian interpreter attached to the staff, who is paid a salary of £90 per annum. The representation made to us is that a European interpreter should be appointed but we see no reason for confining the appointment to Europeans. It would probably be found impossible to secure a suitable person at the salary paid in Durban, but if it cost double the amount, the money would in our opinion be well spent.

One advantage of having such an official in the Department is that he would be able to assist applicants for permits, certificates, etc., in filling in application forms. We see no reason why the applicants should not themselves appear at the office and why their forms should not be filled in by a clerk on information supplied by the applicant. That is the system which is adopted in Durban, and we strongly urge that it should be followed here. Mr. Cousins informs us that some years ago, this was the practice in the Cape Town office but that it had been discontinued. In his opinion the clerks in the office were doing work which the Government was not justified in doing and which should have been done by the applicant himself. We do not hold, however, the same rigid views as Mr. Cousins does on this subject. Seeing that a great many of the applicants are ignorant men, who do not know the English language and who cannot themselves fill in the forms, and in view, moreover, of the fact found by the Resident Magistrate that exorbitant charges are often made by Immigration agents, we think that every assistance should be given to applicants by the officials of the Department and that they should, as far as possible, be released from the necessity of employing agents to transact their business. Indeed, the Immigration Officer at Durban complained of the employment of such agents and stated that the work of the office would go on much more smoothly and expeditiously if such agents were not employed.

We would recommend, therefore :—

(1) That an interpreter should be appointed to the office of the Immigration Department in Cape Town.

(2) That applicants for permits, certificates, etc., should be permitted and indeed encouraged to appear personally at the Immigration Office, and that on their request the application forms should be filled in by a clerk in the office upon information supplied to him by such applicants.

These recommendations are in accordance with the practice which is followed in the Durban office, and if they are adopted a stop should be put to many of the delays which at present take place as well as to the necessity of Indians employing Immigration agents in connection with any business which they may have to transact with the Department.

(4) It is also complained by Indians in Cape Town that, though as a general rule, for purposes of identification, applicants are required to furnish their photographs and thumb impressions, in some cases at the discretion of the Immigration

Officer they are called upon to give in addition the prints of the other fingers. It is admitted that the thumb impressions are sufficient means of identifying the holder of a certificate, and that the only object of taking the full impressions is for the purpose of classification. As there is no provision in law, however, for making any such classification, we recommend that this practice should be discontinued.

(5) A further complaint which came from the Transvaal was that in the case of persons residing in country districts, it was necessary for them, if they desired to visit another Province, to go first to Pretoria and make personal application for the necessary permit, and it was suggested that the Resident Magistrates of the various districts should be appointed Immigration Officers for the purpose of issuing such permits. Unfortunately, we had no opportunity of examining the Immigration Officer of the Transvaal on this subject, but Mr. Cousins informed us that in the Cape Colony there was no such necessity; that a communication from the Resident Magistrate of the district, recommending the applicant, is a sufficient authority in all but most exceptional cases, for the issue of such permit by the Department; that the permit is forwarded to the Resident Magistrate to deliver to the applicant; and that in cases of urgency a telegram would be sent which would be sufficient authority for him to go from one Province to the other. Mr. Cousins, however, objected for administrative reasons to giving the Resident Magistrate authority to issue permits. It is somewhat difficult to see the force of this objection, seeing that this recommendation is in practically all cases acted upon as a matter of course.

The Resident Magistrate of the district in which the Indian resides, as a rule is in a better position to judge whether the applicant is a fit and proper person to be allowed to visit another Province, and whether the circumstances are such as to warrant the issue of a permit to him. We would recommend, therefore, that the Resident Magistrates should be granted authority to issue these permits. If, however, on administrative grounds this proposal is open to serious objections, we recommend that some other simple method should be devised which would enable an Indian in a country town to obtain a permit with as little delay as possible and without any necessity of himself appearing before the Immigration Officer of the Province.

(6) Another point upon which representations were made to us was with regard to the charge of £1 which is made for the issue of an identification certificate or of a temporary permit. It was represented to us in Natal that in cases where it was found necessary to extend the temporary permits, a charge of £1 was made for each further period. In the Cape Province, no fee is charged for an extension of a permit. In our opinion, the charge is an unnecessarily high one and we recommend that it be materially reduced and that a uniform practice be introduced throughout the Union, that no charge be made for extension.

(7) A further complaint with regard to these permits is that the Immigration Officer in the town where the applicant resides, upon application made to him, before issuing the permit, first communicates by wire with the Immigration Officer of the Province to which the applicant desires to go for the purpose of discerning whether he has any objection to its issue. In this way considerable delay sometimes takes place, and it is difficult to find any satisfactory reason for this practice. If the Immigration Officer of the Province in which the applicant resides is satisfied that the permit should be granted, we can see no reason why he should not issue it at once. Mr. Cousins quite agrees in this view, and we recommend that in future the practice should be changed accordingly.

(8) Another objection was to the practice of requiring a deposit to be made by the person to whom a temporary permit is issued.

We can quite see the necessity for this in most cases, but we think that an exception might well be made in the case of Indians of standing, who are well known to the Department or to the Resident Magistrate, and as regards whom there need be no apprehension that they will not return to the Province in which they are at present residing.

(9) Another complaint which refers only to the Natal practice, is in reference to what are called domicile certificates, which were issued under the Natal Immigration Act, 30 of 1903, to Indians who desire to leave the country on a visit. These domicile certificates, are now superseded under the new Act of 1913 by the identification certificates already referred to. The latest form of the domicile certificates has on its face the thumb impression of the holder, which provides a simple and efficient means of identifying him. It is objected, however, that when the holder of one of these certificates on his return to Natal presents it to the Immigration Officer, the latter is not satisfied merely with a comparison of his thumb impressions with those on the certificate, so as to establish his identity, but insists upon making an independent investigation into the question of whether he had acquired a domicile in Natal before his departure to India. The result is that in many cases considerable delay is caused before the holder is allowed to land and that it is open to the Immigration Officer to refuse him admission and to treat him as a prohibited immigrant.

In our opinion the holders of these certificates have a just cause of complaint. It must be presumed that, before a domicile certificate has been issued to an applicant full enquiry has been made by the Department, and that no certificate is granted except upon satisfactory proof of the right of the immigrant to enter the country. To institute a second and independent enquiry into the fact of his domicile is unfair to him. Had not the certificate been given to him in the first instance, he would in all probability not have left the country, but having done so on the strength of the certificate, he should not be prevented from returning. Moreover, if on the second enquiry a different conclusion is arrived at as to the fact of domicile, it is quite possible that the first decision may have been right and the second wrong.

We recommend, therefore, that domicile certificates which have been granted by the Immigration Department should be treated as a conclusive right of the holder to enter the Colony as soon as his identity is established.

(10) The last point to which our attention was drawn was in connection with wives and children in India of Indians domiciled here, coming to join their husbands and fathers. The complaint was that in all instances where permits are not held it cannot be ascertained until the arrival in Cape Town whether the wives and children will be allowed to land, and in many cases this permission has been refused after the expense of bringing them here has been incurred. Many instances were given to us by the Immigration Officers both in Durban and Cape Town of attempts at fraud and impersonation in connection chiefly with the admission of children. The difficulty in these cases is to ascertain whether those who seek admission are in reality the wives and children of the men who claim to be their husbands and fathers.

It has been suggested to us that it would be more satisfactory if the enquiry as to the genuineness of the claims were made in India, instead of in South Africa, and we are disposed to agree in that suggestion.

We should accordingly recommend that an arrangement should, if possible, be arrived at with the Government of India, whereby an official enquiry should be made by a magistrate or other Government official of the district in which the women and children reside. If, after investigation he is satisfied that they are the wife and children of the man who claims to be their husband and father, he should give a certificate to that effect, and such certificate if properly authenticated should be accepted by the Immigration Officer as conclusive evidence of the fact. The certificate should, of course, bear the thumb impressions of those to whom it refers, so that their identification can be established without difficulty.

We have now dealt with all the representations which have been made to us on the subject of the administration of the Immigration Laws, as to which we feel justified in making any recommendations.

LICENSING.

Representations were made to the Commission regarding the administration of the Acts with reference to the grant of licenses to carry on trade or business in the Cape Colony and in Natal. In the former Province, the issue of a new general dealer's license within a Municipality is in effect under the control of the Council. For under Act 35 of 1906, no such license can be granted to an applicant by the Revenue Officer, unless he produces to such officer a certificate from the Council allowing the issue of the license. In order to obtain the necessary certificate, application must be made to the Council on a printed form. The application is considered at the next ordinary meeting of the Council or at a special meeting called for the purpose, and must be granted unless two-thirds of the members voting and forming a majority of all the members are opposed to the issue.

The complaint made to the Commission is that it is the avowed policy of the large majority of the City Council of Cape Town to refuse as a matter of course all applications sent in by Indians. At the request of the Commission, Mr. Finch, the Town Clerk, appeared before us to give evidence on the subject. He informed the Commission that, though it would, perhaps, be difficult to say that such was the avowed policy of the Council, it undoubtedly was the practice. That being so, it follows that at present it is practically impossible for an Indian to obtain a new general dealer's license within the Municipality of Cape Town. As regards the annual renewal of licenses, however, no certificate is required, and these are granted as a matter of course.

It is important, however, to bear in mind that the practice referred to applies only to general dealers' licenses. No certificate from the Council is required for the issue of a butcher or baker's licence and no license at all is required for a shop in which South African produce only is sold.

Moreover, the number of general dealers' licenses, at present held by Indians within the Cape Municipality is very considerable, and these can be renewed annually without difficulty. These facts do, to some extent, mitigate the undoubted severity with which Act 31 of 1906 is administered at present by the City Council of Cape Town.

We do not, however, see our way to making any recommendations on this subject which are likely to be of any use. So long as the law leaves the control of the issue of these licenses in the hands of Municipalities, it is impossible to interfere with them in the exercise of such control. If the right to grant such licenses was vested in a Government official, something might be done in the way of giving him administrative directions on the subject. No such directions, however, can be given by the Government to the Council of a Municipality, and the only way in which any relief could be given would be by amending the law and taking the control of the issue of licenses out of the hands of the Municipality. It has, however, been already pointed out that in this branch of our enquiry we are dealing only with the administration of the existing laws and not with proposals of new legislation. Moreover, even if the suggestion to alter the law did fall within the scope of our enquiry, we feel that any recommendation to deprive the Municipality of the control of licenses would be opposed to public opinion and would, therefore, be wholly ineffective. We do not, therefore, see our way to make any recommendation to remedy this grievance.

No evidence was laid before us as to the administration of the licensing laws in other towns of the Cape Colony or in the country districts, and we have, therefore, no observations to make on that subject.

As regards Natal, the system is somewhat different from that which obtains in the Cape Colony. It appears that in the boroughs and townships, general dealers' licenses are granted by licensing officers, who are appointed by the Town Councils. An appeal lies from the refusal of the licensing officer to the Town Council. As regards renewals of licenses, these are not granted as of course as in the Cape Colony, but in these cases a final appeal lies from the Town Council to the Supreme Court. The evidence before us is to the effect that the Act is not so strictly administered against Indians in the Natal boroughs as it is in Cape Town, but that it is becoming more and more difficult for Indians to obtain new licenses, except in those quarters of the towns which are inhabited almost exclusively by them, and which may be regarded as Asiatic reserves. In some other parts of the towns it is almost impossible now for Indians to obtain new licenses.

As regards the rest of Natal outside of the boroughs and townships, there is one licensing officer who is a Government official, and from whose decision an appeal lies to the licensing board. His policy towards Indians is far more liberal than that of the licensing officers in the boroughs. In fact, he informs us that he makes no distinction between Europeans and Indians. When applications are made for new licenses an opportunity is given to any one to object to the grant, and if objections are lodged, a day is set apart for the hearing of the application. The parties then appear before the licensing officer and are often represented by counsel. The procedure is the same as in a case heard before a Magistrate, and the licensing officer gives a judicial decision. A fact of some interest which was elicited from this witness is that, where applications for new licenses are made by Indians, more than 50 per cent. of the objections come from other Indians.

We had no complaint regarding the grant of new licenses from this licensing officer, the complaints being directed entirely against the administration of the Act in the boroughs and townships. We do not see our way, however, to make any recommendations on this subject. Nothing can be done which would be of any effect except by legislation, and for the reasons already given when dealing with the grant of licenses in Cape Town, we are unable to suggest any amendment of the law.

We have now dealt with all the grievances formulated by Mr. Gandhi in his letter to the Minister of the Interior, but before closing we think that it is desirable to summarise the various recommendations that appear in different parts of the Report.

Some of these recommendations will require legislation to give effect to them whilst others can be sufficiently dealt with by administrative action.

They are as follows:—

1. Section 5 (g) of the Immigration Regulation Act of 1913 should be amended so as to bring the law into conformity with the practice of the Immigration Department, which is " to admit one wife and the minor children by her of an Indian now entitled to reside in any Province or who may in future be permitted to enter the Union, irrespective of the fact that his marriage to such wife may have been solemnised according to tenets that recognise polygamy, or that she is one of several wives married abroad, so long as she is his only wife in South Africa."

2. Instructions should be given to the Immigration Officers to open registers in each Province for the registration by Indians of, say, three or more years' residence in South Africa, who have at present or have had in the past more than one wife living with them in South Africa of the names of such wives who are to be free to travel to and from India with their minor children so long as the husband continues to reside in this country.

3. There should be legislation on the lines of Act 16 of 1860 of the Cape Colony making provision for the appointment of Marriage Officers from amongst Indian priests of different denominations for the purpose of solemnising marriages in accordance with the respective religions of the parties.

4. There should be legislation for the validation by registration of existing de facto monogamous marriages, by which are understood marriage of one man with one woman under a system which recognises the right of the husband to marry one or more other wives. Directions as to the mode of registration and particulars to be entered in the register might be given by regulations framed under the Statute.

5. Section 6 of Act 17 of 1895 of Natal which requires certain Indians to take out year by year a pass or license to remain in the Colony and which provides for the payment of £3 a year for such license should be repealed.

6. The conditions under which identification certificates under the Immigrants Regulation Act, 1913, are issued should be amended so as to provide that such certificates shall remain in force for a period of three years.

7. An interpreter should be attached to the Office of the Immigration Department in Cape Town who should be a whole-time officer.

8. Application forms for permits, certificates, etc., from the Immigration Department should be filled in by a clerk in the office upon information supplied to him by the applicant, if the latter so desires.

9. The practice at present existing in the Cape Town office of this Department of taking, in certain cases, the prints of all the fingers of both hands instead of the thumbs only should be discontinued.

10. The Resident Magistrate of a district in which there is no Immigration Officer should have authority to issue temporary permits to Indians residing in his district who desire to travel from the Province in which they are living to another Province of the Union.

11. The present fee of £1 for an identification certificate or a temporary permit should be materially reduced, and no charge should be made for any extension.

12. The present practice of the Immigration Officers of one Province of communicating by telegraph with the Immigration Officer of another Province when an application is made by an Indian for a permit to travel from one Province to the other should be discontinued.

13. Domicile certificates which have been issued to Indians in Natal by the Immigration Officers of that Province, and which bear the thumb impression of the holder of the permit, should be recognised as conclusive evidence of the right of the holder to enter the Union as soon as his identity has been established.

14. An arrangement should, if possible, be made with the Government of India for the holding of official enquiries by the Magistrate or other Government official in the case of women and children proceeding from India to join their husbands and fathers in South Africa. If on enquiry the official is satisfied that the women and children are the wife and children of the man in South Africa whom they claim as their husband or father, a certificate should be given by him to that effect, and such certificate should be treated by the Immigration Officers as conclusive evidence of the fact stated in it.

In conclusion, the Commissioners desire to record their high appreciation of the services of their Secretary and of the great assistance which they received from him.

ORDERS BY THE HON'BLE THE CHIEF COMMISSIONER, AJMER-MERWARA.

NOTICE.

Dated Mount Abu, the 25th April 1914.

No. 605.—The following draft of certain rules which it is proposed to issue under the Provident Insurance Societies Act, 1912, is published as required by sub-section (3) of section 24 of the said Act, for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby, and notice is given that the draft will be taken into consideration by the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner on or after the 30th June 1914.

Any objections or suggestions which may be received from any person with respect to the draft before the date fixed as aforesaid will be considered by the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner.

DRAFT NOTIFICATION.

No. In exercise of the powers conferred on him by section 24 of the Provident Insurance Societies Act, V of 1912, the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner is pleased to make the following rules in order to carry out the purposes of the said Act in Ajmer-Merwara :—

1. Short title. These rules may be called the Ajmer-Merwara Rules for Provident Insurance Societies, 1914.

2. Definitions. In these rules unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "The Act" means the "Provident Insurance Societies Act, 1912";

(b) "Society" means a Provident Insurance Society to which the Act applies;

(c) "Provident Insurance business" means any class of business to which the Act applies;

(d) "Dividing society business" means provident insurance business under which the amount payable on the policy money becoming due is not fixed but depends either partly or holly on the results of the division of any portion of the premium income or funds amongst the policies which have become due for payment in proportion to the premiums received under each class in any specified period ;

(e) "Bond Investment business" means the issue of bonds or policies by which the society in return for premiums or subscriptions payable at periodical intervals of one year or less, contract to pay the legal holder of the bond or policy a sum at a future date either with or without the other specified benefits such as the right to share in the profits of the society or to an advance for certain specified objects, and not being Life Assurance business ;

(f) "Ordinary Life Assurance business" means life assurance business transacted on similar lines to those adopted by ordinary life assurance companies, namely, by granting annuities on human life, or by assuring a fixed sum payable at death, on survivance or on the happening of any contingency dependent on human life in return for a premium which is fixed at the outset for each age at entry. This shall not exclude the case of sums assured and premiums which vary as the result of bonus ascertained by an actuarial valuation conducted in the manner provided for in Schedule IV of the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912.

3. Contingencies prescribed under Act. The provisions of the Act shall, in addition to the contingencies of birth, marriage and death prescribed in section 2 (8) of the Act extend to the receipt of premiums, or contributions for insuring money to be paid on the happening of any of the following contingencoies, or of any other uncertain event coupled therewith, and shall apply to any society receiving such premium or contributions, namely :— the payment of sums on a person or persons surviving a given term, age or contingency, and the contingencies arising under any other life assurance business which is not subject to the provisions of the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912 ;

Bond Investment business ;

provision for the expenses of any ceremonial occasion, such as betrothal, circumcision, thread ceremonies, shaving of the head, etc., which is generally observed among the different communities in India ;

unemployment or retirement from business ;

accident.

Provided always that the Act shall not apply to any society which is subject to and complies with the provisions of the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912.

Registration fees.

4. The following fees shall be payable to the Registrar in cash or by postal money-order for matters transacted under the Act:—

(1) Registration of a society (section 6) Rs. 100; Provided that a society which has been already registered under the Indian Companies Act shall be exempt from payment of any fee for registration under this Act.

(2) Registration of amendment of a rule (section 8), Rs. 5; Provided that no more than a single fee of Rs. 5 shall be leviable for the amendment of more than one rule when such amendment is intimated to the Registrar in the same communication.

Name.

5. (1) No society subject to this Act, other than a society registered under the Indian Companies Act before the date of these rules, may register hereafter with a name in which the words "life assurance" or "life insurance" occur, or having a name either the same as that of any existing society or other company or so nearly resembling it as to be likely to lead to confusion.

(2) The name of every society, which is required by section 12 of the Act to be displayed in a conspicuous position in legible letters on the outside of the office of the society, shall be displayed in English and in the Vernacular of the district in which the office is situated: provided that in the case of offices of societies in ____________ it will be sufficient if the name of the society is displayed in English alone.

Matters to be provided for by the rules.

6. In accordance with the provisions of section 5 of the Act, every society

(1) if already existing, shall provide, within six months from the date of these rules, for such of the matters mentioned in the attached Schedule as are not already provided for in their rules; always subject to the condition that the terms of the then existing contract shall not be altered to the detriment of the policy-holders.

If in any case it is made to appear to the Registrar that the circumstances are such that a longer period than six months should be allowed he may extend that period by such time as he may think fit.

(2) if not existing, shall provide in their rules before registration under the Act, for the matters mentioned in the said Schedule.

A copy in English of the rules of the society and of the Schedule duly completed as above, shall, within fifteen days from the date of the adoption of the rules, be sent to the Registrar. Blank forms of the Schedule may be obtained from the Registrar and should be used on each occasion when particulars are being submitted in compliance with this rule. The copy of the rules or amended rules of a society required to be forwarded in compliance with this rule and sections 6 and 8 of the Act shall not be accepted for registration unless it is certified to be a correct copy and is signed by the Chairman or Managing Director as well as by the Manager or one of the other responsible officers of the society.

Qualifications of Actuaries under the Act.

7. (1) Any person who, as an Actuary, investigates the financial condition of a society or signs valuation returns of a society shall be either—

(1) a Fellow of the Institute of Actuaries, London, or a Fellow of the Faculty of Actuaries in Scotland; or;

(2) where application is made by a society or by the Registrar and where, in the opinion of the Governor in Council, special circumstances exist,—

(a) an Associate of such Institute of Actuaries or of such Faculty of Actuaries or

(b) such other person having actuarial knowledge as the Governor in Council may authorize to be employed to perform the duties of an Actuary.

(2) Every application by a society for permission to employ as an Actuary any person other than a Fellow of the Institute or Faculty of Actuaries shall state the work for the performance of which such person is required, and the Governor in Council if he grants the application, shall cause a certificate to be issued to the society permitting, subject to such conditions and restrictions as he thinks fit, the employment of the person mentioned in the application.

Accuracy of particulars.

8. An Actuary when investigating the financial condition of a society shall either satisfy himself as to the accuracy of the particulars extracted from the books or require a certificate of their accuracy from the Manager and one other responsible officer of the society.

Particulars to be given in the report of Actuary.

9. An Actuary when investigating the financial condition of a society shall comply with the requirements of the forms set forth in the Forth and Fifth Schedules of the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912, or as near thereto as circumstances will permit, and in addition he shall report—

(a) whether the calculations are correct and made on the principles which are contained in the statement required by the Fourth Schedule to the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912;

(c) whether he has obtained all the information and explanations that he has required ;

(d) what adjustment was used in the valuation to allow for unequal incidence of the premium income, and for premiums payable more often than once a year;

(e) the method by which both the ages at entry and the ages at valuation were arrived at ;

(f) the rate at each age of the mortality assumed and of the annuity values used in the valuation where the tables employed are not published ;

(g) whether all negative values were eliminated from the valuation ; and

(h) the reserve values held against policies effected at ages 20, 30, 40 and 50 and which have been in force for 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 15 and 20 years, respectively, in respect of—

(i) Whole Life Assurances with premiums payable throughout life;

(ii) Whole Life Assurances with premiums payable for 20 years;

(iii) Endowment Assurances payable at age 60 or previous death.

Further particulars in case of insolvent society.

10. In the event of the Actuary finding that the financial condition of the Society is such, in his opinion, that no payment should be made either of bonus to policyholders or of dividend to members, he shall state whether or not he finds the society to be solvent. If he finds it to be insolvent—

(a) he shall state whether he considers that the Society could be made solvent as regards existing contracts by the transfer of its subscribed capital (whether paid or unpaid) to make good the deficiency in the Funds. If so, he shall state what, in his opinion, is the amount so required, and whether or not any alteration would require to be made in the rates of premium for future entrants;

(b) if he considers that the Society cannot be made solvent as regards existing contracts by the transfer of the whole of the subscribed capital to the credit of the Funds in deficit, he shall state what proportion of the sum assured the Society would, in his opinion, be able to meet under such contracts, if all the premiums thereunder were reduced proportionately with the sum assured, and all subscribed capital were fully paid up and transferred to such Funds.

Power of Registrar to postpone order under section 18.

11. The Registrar before cancelling the registry of a society under section 18 may—

(a) suspend further proceedings for such time as he thinks fit, to enable the unpaid subscribed capital, or a sufficient part thereof, to be called up for the purpose of making good deficiencies in the funds;

(b) consent to the Society reducing the amount of its contracts upon such terms and subject to such conditions as he thinks just as a means towards winding up.

Liquidation of Societies registered under Indian Companies Act.

12. The Registrar shall not appoint a liquidator under Section 19 in the case of a society subject to the law for the time being in force in British India relating to the registration of Companies.

Liquidator may reduce contracts.

13. When a liquidator has been appointed in terms of section 19, he may, if he thinks fit, reduce the amount of each of the contracts of the Society upon such terms and subject to such conditions as he may think just, as a means towards winding up. If the contracts are not to be reduced in amount as here provided, the liquidator shall ascertain the value of the liability of the Society to each person appearing by the books of the Society to be entitled to or interested in policies granted by such society. He shall give written notice to such person of the value so ascertained.

Audit of societies not registered under the Indian Companies Act.

14. The accounts of every society not subject to audit in accordance with the provisions of any law for the time being in force in British India regarding the registration of companies shall be audited in accordance with that law.

15. Every auditor auditing under the Act the accounts of a Society shall state the following additional particulars in his report—

(a) whether or not he has personally verified the whole of the investments with the securities and other vouchers and is satisfied as to their correctness ;

(b) any other matters that he considers should be brought to the notice of the members or policyholders of the Society.

Form of accounts, etc.

16. The accounts shall consist of the Revenue Account, Profit and Loss Account and Balance-sheet as prescribed in the forms marked A, C and D ; but a society may, if it so desires, submit a separate Revenue Account (precisely similar to Form A) for any class of business carried on by it, but the transactions in respect of a class of business not prescribed under the Act shall not be shown in a Revenue Account showing the transactions in respect of any business which is so prescribed. The Accounts shall be signed by all the Directors of the Society and by the Manager and one of the other responsible officers. If any of these omit to sign, the reason shall be stated. Other statements shall be prepared each year in the following forms and signed by the Chairman or Managing Director (if any) as well as by the Manager or one of the other responsible officers of the Society:—

17. The Chairam or Managing Director (if any) as well as the Manager and one of the other responsible officers of the Society shall sign all the accounts and balance sheet, abstracts or statements sent to the Registrar.

Registrar not responsible for accuracy of returns.

18. The receipt of an annual return by the Registrar implies no approval of anything it contains. An acknowledgment of the fact that documents purporting to be the annual returns of a particular society have been received will be given, but the acknowledgment does not imply that a valid return has been made or indicate approval of anything that it contains.

Fees for procuring copies of or inspecting documents.

19. Documents required under the Act to be submitted to the Registrar shall be open to inspection on payment of a fee of one rupee; and any person may procure a copy of any such document or a part thereof on payment of a fee of six annas for every hundred words or fractional part thereof required to be copied.

This form should, on the third day after the opening of the tenders, be filled up, signed with the same signature as the tender, and be presented at the Office of the Controller of Currency or the Office of the Accountant General. The deposit will then be returned to the bearer in exchange for the receipt.

PUBLIC DEBT.

Simla, the 18th June 1914.

No. 845-F.

THREE-AND-A-HALF PER CENT. LOAN.

His Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor General in Council has resolved to borrow five hundred lakhs of rupees for the public service in the following manner:

2. Promissory Notes will be issued for the said amount in the Form annexed to this Notification, being the form of the notes of the Three-and-a half Per Cent. Loan of 1900-01, of which loan the notes to be now issued will form a part. All the conditions which apply to notes of the Three-and-a-half Per Cent. Loan of 1900-01, will apply to the notes to be now issued. The interest on the notes of that loan is payable half-yearly on the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December.

Tenders.

3. Tenders for the whole or any part of the said amount of Rs. 5,00,00,000 will be received by the Controller of Currency at the Treasury Buildings, Calcutta, from this date to noon, standard time,* of Friday, the 3rd July 1914. Tenders must be for sums of 100 Rupees or multiples of that sum.

4. Each tender must be addressed, in the form annexed to this Notification, to the Controller of Currency, Calcutta, and enclosed in a closed cover, superscribed "Tender for the Three-and-a-half Per Cent. Loan". If the tenderer is not resident in India, he must name an agent resident in India, to

NOTE (1).—Tenders made in accordance with these instructions will also be received by the Accountants General at Madras and Bombay on account of the Controller of Currency, Calcutta, on the 2nd July and up to noon, standard time,* on the 3rd July : provided that—

(a) they are delivered personally or by clerk or messenger at the Accountant General's Office (where a receipt will be given for them) ;

(b) they are made on printed forms, to be obtained at the same office or at the local Presidency Bank ;

(c) each tender is for not less than Rs. 10,000 ;

(d) the deposit is either a promissory note or a Treasury Receipt from the local office of the Presidency Bank, or a cheque on a local Bank in favour of the Accountant General ;

(e) the amount of the tender is made payable at the place of tender, viz., Madras or Bombay (as the case may be) or in Calcutta ; and the Accountant General will return deposits on non-accepted tenders and will issue allotment-certificates so far as the tenders are payable in Madras or Bombay.

5. The rate at which each tender is made must be specified in rupees or rupees and annas: a tender in which no rate is thus specified, but a subscription is offered in some other terms—as, for example, at the recorded minimum, or at some specified percentage in addition to the recorded minimum, or at the average of the accepted tenders—will be rejected as null and void.

6. The rate at which a tender is made must not contain a fraction of an anna: if a rate containing a fraction of an anna is inserted in any tender, such fraction will be struck out and the tender treated as if the rate did not contain such fraction of an anna.

Deposits.

7. Each tender must be accompanied by a deposit of not less than one-hundredth or, if the tender be for less than Five Lakhs of Rupees, then for not less than one-fiftieth part of the tender. The deposit must be in one of the following forms : (a) a receipt for the amount from the Head Office of the Bank of Bengal, or Madras, or Bombay, or one of their Branches, or from an officer in charge of some Public Treasury, or (b) a cheque drawn in favour of the Controller of Currency, on a Bank in Calcutta, Madras or Bombay, or (c) Government Promissory Notes[1] standing in the name of, or endorsed to, the tenderer or the person making the deposit.

[1] It is particularly requested that such Promissory Notes may NOT be endorsed to the Controller of Currency.

8. (a) Deposits, not being promissory notes, will, in the case of accepted tenders, be credited proportionately in part payment of the allotment-certificates issued in respect of the tender, and will bear interest for the purpose of clause 16 below from the date of the opening of tenders. When a tender is not accepted in full, the deposits, when they are not in the form of promissory notes, will be credited as far as possible proportionately in part payment of the allotment-certificates issued in respect of it. If any allotment-certificate is not fully taken up, the deposit credited in respect of it will be forfeited.

(b) Promissory notes deposited in respect of any accepted tender will be held until all the allotment-certificates issued in respect of the tender are paid up, and will, if the allotment-certificates are not fully taken up, be appropriated by the Government and cancelled.

Opening of Tenders.

9. The minimum rate at which tenders will be accepted will be recorded under the signature of the Controller of Currency, and, before the tenders are opened, placed upon the table in a sealed envelope, but will not be declared unless some tender is rejected only because it is below the recorded minimum.

10. Tenders will be opened publicly by the Controller of Currency at the Treasury Buildings, Calcutta, at noon, standard time,* on Friday, the 3rd July next, and those received under the terms of note (1) to clause 4 will be similarly opened by the Accountants General at Madras and Bombay at noon, standard time,* on the same day; but the contents of the tenders will not be disclosed otherwise than as provided in clause 12.

11. Tenders at rates not below the minimum rate will be accepted in the order of the rates tendered, beginning with the highest rate. The amount allotted at the lowest rate at which tenders are accepted will be divided amongst those who have tendered at this rate in proportion, as nearly as may be found convenient, to the amounts of their tenders; provided that no allotment will be issued if the amount distributable on any tender is less than Rs. 100: preference will however be given to small tenders, not exceeding Rs. 2,000, at the lowest accepted rate, such tenders receiving allotments in full as far as possible.

Allotment-Certificates.

12. To each tenderer (or to his agent) whose tender is accepted in whole or in part, such number of allotment-certificates as may be necessary to make up the aggregate amount allotted to him will be issued by the Controller of Currency [1] as soon as possible after the 3rd July and an alphabetical list of the names of those to whom such allotment-certificates are issued will be posted for general information at the Head Offices of the Banks of Bengal, Madras and Bombay.

[1] For tenders received by the Accountant General at Madras or Bombay, and payable at those places, the Accountant General will issue the allotment-certificates.

13. If the allotment made on any tender is less than Rs. 3,000, then the whole of the allotment-certificates [after credit of the deposit under clause 8 (a)] will be made payable upon the 20th August.

Otherwise, the whole amount of each allotment will be divided into two instalments as follows :—

Instalment I.—As near as convenient to 50 per cent., but not less than 50 per cent., payable upon the 20th July; and allotment-certificates will be issued for each instalment separately.

Instalment II.—The balance payable upon the 20th August;

But the whole or any part of any accepted tender may be paid at any time after receipt of the allotment-certificates.

The words "as near as convenient" refer to the necessity for making each instalment an exact multiple of Rs. 100.

14. Any allotment-certificates will, on application to the Controller of Currency at Calcutta, be exchanged for an equivalent amount of allotment-certificates of smaller denominations; provided that if any payment (beyond the deposit) is recorded upon the cancelled certificate, it can be taken against, and recorded upon, only one of the certificates issued in exchange.

15. Payment of any allotment-certificate may be made to the account of the Government in the Head Office of the Bank of Bengal, or Madras, or Bombay, or in any Branch of these Banks or into any Public Treasury or Treasuries in India which may be named in the tender in respect of which it was issued. Receipts for such payments will be given by the Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, or their Branches, or by the officers in charge of the Government Treasuries at which payment is made, by enfacement upon the relative certificate.

Issue of Promissory Notes.

16. (a) When any allotment-certificate is fully paid up, the holder will, on presenting it duly receipted at the place where it was paid, obtain from the Public Debt Office, Calcutta, promissory notes of such values as he may desire (each note being in even hundreds and not less than Rs. 100) bearing interest from the 31st December 1914, and he will also receive interest at 3½ per cent. per annum from the dates on which he may have made payment till the 30th December 1914.

*Noon, standard time, corresponds to 12-24 P. M., Calcutta time.

(b) Or he may, at his option, by paying interest at the said rate from the 30th June 1914 to the dates on which he may have made payment, obtain promissory notes as above, bearing interest from the 30th June 1914.
